CHRISTMAS TRACTOR

Friends of the Fairgrounds Working Hard

GROUP HAS RAISED OVER $40,000 FOR FAIRGROUNDS IMPROVEMENTS

By Michele Smith | THE TIMES

DAYTON—The Friends of the Fairgrounds-Columbia County have an abiding interest in maintaining the rural and historic nature of the county fairgrounds, said the group's president, Julia Mead. Since forming in Oct. 2017, the group has accomplished much, under the umbrella of the Columbia County Community Network.

"They have been invaluable to our progress with guidance for prioritizing projects, setting a budget and seeking grants," said Mead.

Eventually the FFCC will spin off as an independent charitable nonprofit organization, but in the meantime the Community Network has provided important support.

"To date we have made over $40,000 through grants, fundraising and donations. I'll bet you we have over 2,000 hours of volunteer labor, in kind," Mead said.

The group has held yard sales, a barrel racing clinic, sold dolls at the Village Shoppes, and trimmed the trees for the holidays at Flour Mill Park, and they are making and selling holiday swags during this Christmas season.

"We're busy writing 'thank yous,'" said Mead.

Mead says the group is especially thankful to the Warren Family Fund/Blue Mountain Foundation for the $9,000 award for improvements to the Youth Building, which will begin in January or February. The plan is to use the award for insulation, lighting and flooring, and, if money is left over, to make upgrades to the restrooms, she said.

"We want to market that building, along with the Pavilion for family celebrations, reunions, memorials, quilt and gun shows, and flea market consignment," said Mead.

Mead said some committee members are working to bring pari-mutuel horse racing back to the area for Dayton Days, which take places Memorial Day Weekend.

"We're going to combine our renovation and marketing with Mule Mania. We want them to have a good experience," said Mead.

Mead said the Columbia County Commissioners have provided a matching fund, which is 50 cents on the dollar for the $10,000

PIONEER PORTRAITS

Ten Years Ago-December 25 2008

Heavy snow deposited by several consecutive weather systems that have marched across Washington State in the past week and a half caused the collapse of the Thomas Building at the corner of Coppei and Preston avenues at about 6 pm last Sunday evening. The structure, originally the location of a Potlatch Lumber Co, lumber and coal yard, was Scott Lumber Yard for years in the 1950's, 1960's and early 1970's, then was home to a succession of auto parts stores and other enterprises. It appears that at that the east wall of the building fell eastward and the remainder of the structure, bearing a significant amount of snow, followed.

Photo caption: Friends of Dan and Carrie Cole might recognize the white pickup in this photo which appeared in the Phoenix Sun recently. Carrie sent a note recently and included the clipping, which notes that motorists were lining up after word spread of gasoline selling for $1.99, the first time it was under $2 a gallon in a very long time.

Fifty Years Ago- December 19, 1968

Photo caption: Waitsburg's collective Christmas present was the demolition of an age-old eye sore in the city center. Albert Land's crew worked with Walla Walla County personnel to knock down the two well-worn structures and make an enlarged downtown parking area. On Wednesday morning, December 11, the County headache ball put the finishing touches on the old concrete filling station and garage.

Due to the trouble we had last year with youngsters tampering with the school buses when I did not have enough help to watch everyone, we are going to get up some rules to try to keep these things from happening again. Each boy or girl will have to sign a pledge that he will not bother any of the buses or any of the equipment in the bus garage as they are going or coming to or from the Gun Club Rooms and to help supervise the rest of their group in seeing that no one bothers anything while going or coming and also report anyone that they learn of writing obscene words either on the inside or outside of the bus. If any of these things happen again, there will not be any more shooting at the downtown gun club for you kids. So it will be up to each one of you to see that these things do not happen this year. James F. Bramlet

In 1956, Dorne and Dorothy, along with their two daughters, moved to Seattle, where Dorne began a 34-year career with the Boeing Company as a precision machinist. Some of his work included parts for the SST and Minuteman Missiles. Upon his retirement in 1990, Dorne and Dorothy moved to Walla Walla to be near family. He was a very loving husband, father and grandfather, always willing to give a helping hand to others. He enjoyed traveling in their fifth-wheel trailer, but especially delighted in the many fishing trips to Seiku. RANDY HINCHLIFFE:
CITY OF WAITSBURG

End of 2018 Update From the City of Waitsburg

As this year closes out, I wanted to let the citizens know what the city is working on currently, as well as a few items we have planned for next year.

Probably the biggest remaining item on the council's agenda is the possible relocation of city hall. After almost 50 years at our current location, the city is looking to relocate city hall to the former Jehovah's Witness building next to city shop. The city has an acceptable offer in place, but it will need to be ratified by the city council at the December meeting. This is being considered for a variety of reasons, but some of the reasons are related to the cost of needed repairs to the current city hall, as well as the availability of a central location to hold city council meetings that are more accessible to the public.

Hopefully soon, a crew working for PPL will be in the city to complete the change out of our street lights from the old incandescent bulbs to new brighter, more efficient LED bulbs that will save the city money on our street lighting costs.

For next year, we are planning on completing the Taggart Road Extension project, from its current location to highway 12, as a means to eliminate the safety issues associated with the current intersection at the highway next to the Midway Food Mart. Associated work will include renaming the sections of road and most likely closing the current intersection.

Next year is also our turn in the county chip seal rotation, and we have plans in place to resurface a variety of streets around the city to help keep our road system in good working order.

Our new wastewater press is still on schedule to be here in late January or early February, and once installed and operational, the city is going to look into the possibility of outsourcing the operation of the treatment plant as a means to help cut down on operational expenses and loss of manpower.

As always, if you should have any questions or concerns about what the city is up to, please feel free to contact me.

Happy Holidays.

Christmas Wreaths Help Ease Pain

By Don C. Brunell

Christmas is a difficult time for anyone grieving the death of a loved one. It is especially hard when they were slain in the line-of-duty while protecting our country.

It hit home again last month when Army sergeants Eric Emond, 39, Brush Prairie, and Leandro Jasso, 25, Leavenworth, were killed in Afghanistan. Both were experienced elite soldiers who served multiple tours in combat zones.

Normally, the fallen are remembered on Memorial Day, but thanks to a Maine family and over 800,000 donors and volunteers, more than 1.8 million Christmas wreaths were laid on the tombstones of our fallen soldiers, sailors and airmen this December.

Since the program started in 1992, more than 1,600 burial grounds across the nation are involved. Additionally, this year, 9,400 wreaths went to the Normandy American Cemetery located in Colleville-sur-Mer, France.

Thousands of family, friends, military personnel and volunteers help place the wreaths, which is therapeutic.

In Washington State, 24 cemeteries from Walla Walla to Port Orchard take part, and there are over 50,000 veterans' graves in which wreaths are placed. Over half go to Tahoma's National Cemetery, Kent.

In Vancouver, Brad Carlson's family, owners of Evergreen Memorial Gardens, works with the Lewis and Clark Young Marines to raise funds. This year they sponsored a record 2,000 wreaths—more than triple the 2017 total—and Vancouver Mayor Anne McEnerny-Ogle led the ceremony.

Joyce Durrant, Spokane, helps organize the placement of 1,000 wreaths at Washington State Veterans Cemetery, Medical Lake. She told KHQ-6 News their family goal is to remind us that our military and their families pay a heavy price defending our freedoms and we should not forget them.

Wreaths Across America (WAA) is a privately funded charity that accepts no government money. It is strongly supported by over 100 trucking companies whose drivers voluntarily load their semi-trailers and fan out across America. They absorb all of the delivery costs, and the American Independent Trucking Association contributes $50,000.

ciation contributes $50,000.

In Washington, D.C., thousands of volunteers line the road waving flags as the caravan of trucks rolls into Arlington National Cemetery.

Founded in 1971, Worchester Wreath Co. of Harrington, Maine, is a family-owned business which grows balsam fir. It has become one of the largest wholesalers of holiday balsam products providing fresh Maine wreaths, trees and centerpieces.

WAA sprang from a Worchester gesture in 1992, when they shipped surplus wreaths to Arlington National Cemetery to be placed on headstones in an older section---the most forgotten part of the burial grounds.

After the terrorist attacks on September 11, 2001, interest in the project spiked. In fact, the Pentagon, which was struck by a jetliner on that day, is within eyesight of Arlington. In 2005, when WAA appeared on the internet with a sobering photo of thousands of snow-covered wreaths on Arlington headstones, interest and donations mushroomed.

The good news is, at a time when each U.S. Citizen is saddled with a $65,774 potential payment of our national debt (which, at last check, was over $21.3 trillion), WAA is independently funded.

Morrill Worchester told the Bangor Daily News his first trip to Arlington National Cemetery helped him remember those who gave everything to keep America free. Today, the Wreaths Across America program helps us remember.

The wreaths provide some comfort to families and friends of America's fallen. They also remind us not to forget those suffering with life-long mental and physical disabilities from military service.

As a special note this Christmas: In today's terrorist infected world, we should include our law enforcement officers, emergency responders and firefighters in our thoughts and prayers. They too are in harm's way every day.

the group raised themselves. "That showed their huge support," she said.

With Marcene Hendricksen's grant-writing skills, Fair Board cooperation, and marketing and participation by the Dayton Chamber of Commerce, the priorities for improving the fairground facilities are becoming a reality, Mead said.

One of the hardest workers has been Mead, herself. She said she spends about 20 hours each week working on fairgrounds projects. She is also handy with a paint brush.

The horse stalls recently received a fresh coat of paint, along with other upgrades, courtesy of a $1,000 award from PacificCorp. Mead said she pressure-washed the stalls. Then County Maintenance Director Dave Finney applied a coat of "barn" red paint to the exterior of the building. Mead painted the trim.

Now, the stalls, numbering 30 in all, can be marketed and used, she said.

Mead said "barn" red, with minimal white trim, will be the go-to colors for all the facilities at the fairgrounds as improvements are made, working from west to east.

"This didn't deteriorate in a day," said Mead about the condition of the facilities. It will take time, but there will be improvements made to the grandstands, indoor and outdoor arenas, barns, jockey room and midway, so that at the end of the day, the community can be proud of its fairgrounds facilities, she said.

Mead said people are welcome to join with the Friends of the Fairgrounds. They meet on the second and fourth Thursday of each month at the American Legion Hall, at 211 E. Clay St. in Dayton.

To donate time, money or materials, contact the Friends of the Fairgrounds by email at: friendsofthefairgrounds@yahoo.com, or visit their website at friendsofthefairg.wixsite.com/columbiaco.

Group Addresses Suicide Awareness and Prevention

By Michele Smith | THE TIMES

DAYTON—Talk to someone about how you feel. That was the take-away message about suicide when the Columbia County Coalition met last week.

Matthew Wyatt, Pastor of the Waitsburg Christian Church, said the topic of suicide is something most people want to avoid.

“That’s not working,” he said. “Let’s get the message out.”

Wyatt said the best policy is to encourage adults and youth to talk about suicidal feelings with people they can trust.

“As a leader I am doing my very best,” said Rick Walters, Prevention Counselor at the Dayton School District.

Walters pointed out that poverty, disengaged parents, and the reluctance to talk about feelings, places youth at risk for suicide.

He said girls are more apt to discuss their feelings, than boys are, and boys need to know it is okay to talk about how they feel.

“Students are our first priority,” said Dayton MS/HS Principal Kristina Brown.

Brown said in the short time she has been in the District, she has created an open door policy for students to talk to her, and she is working closely with Walters and School Counselor Susan Strege to identify and help students who are at risk.

She said Strege will be talking about suicide at a program she has planned for staff in February, and has also spent a significant amount of time working with students on social emotional learning.

Jennifer Price said Blue Mountain Counseling is partnering with the school. She said that because students are on the front line of defense when fellow students are in distress, training them about suicide awareness could be useful.

“We need to educate parents on what to watch out for,” said Pastor Wyatt. “This is a tough subject for parents.”

That is particularly true for boys in the middle years, said Public Health Officer Leslie Sweetwater. Sweetwater said it is important for mothers to maintain appropriate physical and emotional connection with boys during this “messy” time in their lives.

Sweetwater said the community has already been educated about adverse childhood conditions (ACEs). She said, “Let’s take it to the next step.”

The Public Health Department is currently sending out surveys about creating a community resilience initiative, she said.

Sweetwater said she will be attending a forum in the Tri-Cities in June to become a resilience certified trainer. After that, the work of building a resilient community can begin.

The resilience initiative is a tool to help youth to adapt to life’s challenges, and to avoid pitfalls like substance abuse, and to keep them from falling into despair, she said.

Grandma and the Boys: Old Time Gospel

By Brianna Wray | THE TIMES

WALLA WALLA—Bluegrass group Grandma and the Boys has released a new album with classic gospel favorites. The band is led by Grandma Jo Shay, who plays mandolin and 12-string guitar. Grandma is accompanied by Joe McCutcheon, who plays lead guitar and her son, Shawn Wray, on bass guitar.

Grandma and the Boys have been making music together for eight years. They play regular gigs at assisted living facilities and attend the annual Blue Mountain fiddlers’ jam. Shay is also a familiar face at the Mythical Movable Bluegrass Jam hosted by Kate Hockersmith.

“We love to play,” says Shay, “but probably one of the main reasons we play old time gospel is because we don’t want it to fade away. Joe, Shawn and I all go to church and we notice that most of the time they play the newer choruses and you very seldom hear the old-time gospels.”

Classic songs are also a benefit to the memory care community. “Since we play mostly for retirement homes and assisted living facilities where the people who live there are older, and they love to hear the old-time gospel,” Shay says. “These are the songs that they know the words for, that they tap their feet to, that brings a smile. They may have forgotten a lot, but it seems like this triggers good memories.”

Shay learned to play mandolin and guitar at the age of eleven. The first song she learned was “You Are My Sunshine.” At nearly ninety, she’s yet to slow down.

Grandma and the Boys will appear Friday at the Christmas Bluegrass Jam at 10-Ton Coffee in Waitsburg at 6:30 p.m.

Keeping you informed Proposed rate increase

In 2016, the Washington Utilities and Transportation Commission approved a decoupling mechanism for Pacific Power to track and defer the difference between allowed revenue and actual revenue with true-up adjustments to be filed by December 1st of every year.

In 2017, the Commission approved a surcredit to residential customers, which will expire on February 1, 2019. The expiration of the surcredit will result in a 1.8 percent increase.
A residential customer using approximately 1,200 kilowatt-hours (kWh) per month would see a bill impact of $2.60 per month.

The Commission will examine Pacific Power's compliance filing. As a result of this examination, the Commission may determine that the filing be accepted as filed, modified, or rejected. If accepted as filed, the rate change would go into effect on February 1, 2019.

You are invited to comment to the Commission.
The Commission has the authority to set final rates that may be lower or higher than the company's filing, depending on the outcome

CAROLYN HENDERSON: TALK ABOUT ART

We Never Know Where Life Will Take Us

For Keith Rislove, who has been a working artist for more than 60 years, life seemed destined toward baseball, when, upon graduation from high school, he received two offers from major league teams.

But the Korean War intervened, and while overseas he found himself taking over the events coordinator job of his military mentor. After being discharged, he pursued commercial art, studying advertising and graphic design at the Los Angeles Art Center. After 37 years in the industry, he retired, only to pick up a second career in art – as an acrylic wildlife painter – that is still going strong after 23 years.

"My love for the outdoors started with my grandfather who introduced me to fishing and hunting at a very early age," the Salem, Ore., artist says. "Living in the Northwest provides the many visual images of wildlife and landscapes that give me the inspiration."

Rislove captures the wildlife world in its hidden landscapes – a wolf prowling around the edge of a pond; a bull elk bugling in the silent woods; a snowy white owl flying over the snow-laden land.

"My approach to wildlife is to be as realistic as possible, which gives me a great deal of satisfaction," Rislove explains. "Nature and wildlife are in my heart."

Through January 12, Rislove is showing a collection of his wildlife paintings at Wenaha Gallery, located at 219 East Main, Dayton. The gallery is open Monday – Saturday, from 9 a.m. to 6 p.m., except for Christmas and New Year's Day, when it is closed. The gallery is open limited hours on Christmas Eve and New Year's Eve, from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m.
