Wags and Wheels

By Tracy Thompson | THE TIMES

Blue Mountain Humane Society Executive Director Sara Archer brought a mighty crew of staff and volunteers to Walla Walla's McCurley Integrity Toyota on Saturday, September 21 for the Second Annual Wags and Wheels event. The dealership underwrote the event to the tune of $5,000, providing the adoption fees for anyone interested in bringing home a new pet from the shelter.

"I think it's fun because it's just a good cause," said McCurley employee Steve Phillips. "A lot of people that hold back from adopting commit because we cover the fee to provide homes for these animals," Phillips continued.

Keith Taylor and his wife came up from Milton-Freewater to add a new pet to their family; deciding on 3-year-old mixed-breed dog Diamond, bringing him into a home that already includes a pup adopted from the shelter. "My wife has been looking for a dog, and this was the perfect opportunity," Taylor said.

Meredith Brackbill lives in a dorm at Walla Walla University, and is unable to adopt a pet, so she routinely comes to the shelter to visit the animals. She came out to the dealership with two friends to visit with the animals and was seen holding Darla. "I love Darla," she said.

Sam Jackle of Walla Walla adopted a beautiful orange and white 2-month old kitty as a surprise for her two young children. "We adopted a kitty last year and the kids have done such a great job taking care of him, I decided to add another cat to complete our family."

Ultimately 42 adoptions were finalized, and seven more were on home trial. Thank you, McCurley Integrity Toyota, Walla Walla!

Open house for the Touchet Valley Trail held in Dayton

Same information shared in Waitsburg

By Michele Smith | THE TIMES

DAYTON—Roughly ninety people attended the Touchet Valley Trail open house, at the fairgrounds Pavilion, in Dayton, on Monday, Sept. 16.

Joy Smith President of the Waitsburg Commercial Club spoke to the attendees about the importance of outdoor recreation and trails to the economic vitality, health, and safety, of the local communities.

Smith said she ran an overnight rental for seven years, in Waitsburg, and two thirds of the overnight guests came with bicycles. Also ten percent of renters were interested in equestrian facilities.

"Outdoor recreation is a 22 billion dollar business in the state of Washington," said Smith.

Smith said business owners attribute 25% of the revenue they receive to being proximal to recreation trails.

"If you remember nothing else tonight, for every dollar invested in tourism, ten dollars is reinvested in tax dollars," said Smith.

"In Waitsburg I always talk about our sports arena. Our sports arena is the Blue Mountains," Smith said. "We have a beautiful sports arena."

Smith said what is also known is that trails and outdoor recreation are a deciding factor for people looking for a place to live, and that trails and outdoor recreation offer families a great way to stay active.

"It's becoming a quality of life issue," she said.

She said the best thing for the community is to have some green space.

"I like spaces that rest the eye. I like to see us protect our open spaces. I don't want to become a Portland or Seattle corridor where we go from one suburb to another suburb to another suburb."

Trails are safe, she said.

She said crime along trails is not common. For instance, the Bill Chipman Trail, from Moscow to Pullman, receives little more than two calls for law enforcement each year, and there are no property incidences because of the trail.

Smith said, "When you open up spaces, invite people in, and shine a light on spaces, security is better. People know each other. They start to recognize people on the trail."

The Walla Walla and Columbia County Sheriff's Offices know they have the capacity to respond to any incident on the trail," she said.

Smith said trails offer a safer route for bicycles.

"You all know what it's like when you come across a bicyclist on Hwy. 12, or Hwy. 124 or Lower Waitsburg Road, or Middle Waitsburg Road. My heart is always in my throat because I know there is always a possibility they could fall in front of you. We want them to be on a safe path," she said.

Andrea Weckmueller-Behringer, Executive Director of the Walla Walla Valley Metropolitan Planning Organization, spoke to the history of the Blue Mountain Regional Trails project, which began with a 2015 Walla Walla Community Council study on Enhancing Outdoor Recreation.

She said the Blue Mountain Regional Trails project connecting Dayton to Umatilla County was a result of that study.

She said it has taken the effort of thirty multijurisdictional stake holders, with the Community Council serving as the lead agency, and with technical expertise from the National Park Service to plan the series of connecting trails.

"It was a very focused effort, and everybody really wanted this to succeed. It was a great group to work with," she said.

Weckmueller-Behringer said the BMRT planning committee was notified of

A survey of graduates of Waitsburg High school over the past five years shows that more than half—53 percent—are in college or taking some kind of academic training. High school principal Dan Butler presented the results of the survey to members of the school board last week. He said the rest are either in the military—26 percent—or in jobs—21 percent.

Lotsa smoke, little fire last Sunday. An early Sunday morning blaze that was bound to get more coverage than a usual Waitsburg fire took place in an upper bedroom of the Tom Baker home on Coppei Ave. Only victim of a smoldering mattress was a sick white cat, "Chauncey." Attempts to break the feline's fever with a turned-up electric blanket and a night light were the apparent sources of the blaze. Fire damage was confined to the mattress, but there was extensive smoke damage throughout the house.

This is a special week for Waitsburg! The annual Commercial Club Salmon Barbecue will be held in the Community Building at the Race Track on Thursday evening, September 25.

Business Needs to Tell Its Story

By Don C. Brunell

Many years ago, a reporter asked George Weyerhaeuser, then CEO of Weyerhaeuser Co., why his company spent so much time and money informing its workers, public officials and people about its business of growing trees and converting those trees into lumber and paper products.

His answer was simple. "People need to know what we do and why what we do is important to them." He believed if people and elected officials understood Weyerhaeuser, they would make thoughtful decisions based on facts.

To Weyerhaeuser, there was no other option. Logging, milling and managing forest lands are very visible to motorists and neighbors---some of whom continue to have strong visceral reactions.

Weyerhaeuser and the forest industry went a step further. They took public concerns to heart and changed the way they managed their lands. Some of those modifications were costly and put lands off limits to logging. For example, trees and shrubs adjacent to streams would remain in their natural state to enhance water quality and fish habitat.

The industry's initiative helped save its ability to stay in business. Over the years, other businesses have adopted similar approaches. BNSF is notable example.

Trains and tracks are also visible to motorists; impact our rural lands, cities and neighborhoods; and, often run along scenic rivers, lakes and seashores. People and those they elect to write laws and regulations want to know if trains and their cargo are safe and have the latest safety and environmental protections.

Just as the forest industry invests in public information programs, so have our railroads. BNSF recently hauled its fire suppression and safety equipment to its Vancouver rail yard. Its specialists gave interested citizens a hands-on tour.

On display was the latest technology to detect even the smallest crack in rails and quickly repair them. BNSF has over 4,000 trackside equipment detectors which monitor locomotives and railcars on a 24/7 basis. At risk train wheels and undercarriages are identified and immediately replaced.

The railroad utilizes high-speed laser technology to test track surface and alignment, uses x-ray technology to monitor the condition of rail ties, and ground penetrating radar to see if the ballast (rail bed) is weakened and needs replacement.

BNSF use drones to inspect hard-to-reach towers and tall bridges and installed Positive Train Control (PCT) which warns the crew of problems with speed and stops trains if needed.

Today, people care about climate change, especially CO2 emissions. Locomotives consume a lot of diesel. Railroads are actively working to lower fuel consumption and emissions.

The Association of American Railroads reports in 2017 alone, U.S. freight railroads consumed 732 million fewer gallons of fuel and emitted 8.2 million fewer tons of carbon dioxide than they would have if their fuel efficiency had remained constant since 2000.

Redesigned locomotives and rail cars now move one ton of freight over 470 miles on a gallon of fuel and account for less than one-percent of our nation's total greenhouse gas emissions.

Just as the forest industry is a major employer and economic driver in Washington, so are BNSF and Union Pacific—the nation's two largest railroads. Together, they employ 4,300 people in our state who are well paid with good benefits. The combined yearly payroll is over $363 million.

The bottom line is the private sector must tell us its story and how it fits into our nation's ability to innovate, generate jobs and provide the goods and services we need every day. Otherwise, move over and allow government to take control.

Sitting on the sideline and letting others define business is "not an option" if our market-based enterprise system is to flourish in the years ahead.

'This is All Wrong,' Greta Thunberg Tells World Leaders at U.N. Climate Session

Climate activist Greta Thunberg, 16, addressed the U.N.'s Climate Action Summit in New York City on Monday. Here's the full transcript of Thunberg's speech, beginning with her response to a question about the message she has for world leaders.

"My message is that we'll be watching you. "This is all wrong. I shouldn't be up here. I should be back in school on the other side of the ocean. Yet you all come to us young people for hope. How dare you!"

Greta Thunberg

"You have stolen my dreams and my childhood with your empty words. And yet I'm one of the lucky ones. People are suffering. People are dying. Entire ecosystems are collapsing. We are in the beginning of a mass extinction, and all you can talk about is money and fairy tales of eternal economic growth. How dare you!"

"For more than 30 years, the science has been crystal clear. How dare you continue to look away and come here saying that you're doing enough, when the politics and solutions needed are still nowhere in sight.

"You say you hear us and that you understand the urgency. But no matter how sad and angry I am, I do not want to believe that. Because if you really understood the situation and still kept on failing to act, then you would be evil. And that I refuse to believe.

"The popular idea of cutting our emissions in half in 10 years only gives us a 50% chance of staying below 1.5 degrees [Celsius], and the risk of setting off irreversible chain reactions beyond human control.

"Fifty percent may be acceptable to you. But those numbers do not include tipping points, most feedback loops, additional warming hidden by toxic air pollution or the aspects of equity and climate justice. They also rely on my generation sucking hundreds of billions of tons of your CO2 out of the air with technologies that barely exist.

"So a 50% risk is simply not acceptable to us — we who have to live with the consequences.

"To have a 67% chance of staying below a 1.5 degrees global temperature rise — the best odds given by the [Intergovernmental Panel on Climate Change] — the world had 420 gigatons of CO2 left to emit back on Jan. 1st, 2018. Today that figure is already down to less than 350 gigatons.

"How dare you pretend that this can be solved with just 'business as usual' and some technical solutions? With today's emissions levels, that remaining CO2 budget will be entirely gone within less than 8 1/2 years.

"There will not be any solutions or plans presented in line with these figures here today, because these numbers are too uncomfortable. And you are still not mature enough to tell it like it is.

"You are failing us. But the young people are starting to understand your betrayal. The eyes of all future generations are upon you. And if you choose to fail us, I say: We will never forgive you.

"We will not let you get away with this. Right here, right now is where we draw the line. The world is waking up. And change is coming, whether you like it or not.

"Thank you."

No one is too young to make a difference.

Local Artisan to Sell Jewelry at Words-N-Print Bookstore on Saturday

Words-N-Print is featuring a 12-year-old local artisan Cedar Stegalle this Saturday from 1-4 pm. Cedar lives here in Waitsburg and attends Waitsburg Middle School. She hand-crafts beads out of paper and makes them into gorgeous earrings. Prices range from $10-15. When creating a name for her business Cedar considered "Cedar's Paper Beads," but was then inspired by the acronym that name created and decided to call her business "Crunchy Peanut Butter" (or CPB). Cedar was inspired by her mother Lisa's paper-crafting and decided to create her own style of beads. Words-N-Print, at 131 Main Street in downtown Waitsburg.

Touchet Valley Trail Open House in Waitsburg

The Touchet Valley Trail organizers held a meeting on Monday, September 23 at Waitsburg's City Hall. The meeting's content and delivery closely followed last week's meeting in Dayton (covered below) with a detailed PowerPoint presentation that included information about the genesis of the trail, its benefits, safety issues, planning and engineering, plus results from community surveys.

Following the meeting, attendees were directed to various areas in the back of the room for a chance to have their specific questions addressed. Those available to address questions were:

Mary Campbell - Executive Director of Commitment to Community
 Adam Schmidtgall and Bryan Hansen- engineers from Anderson Perry, a civil engineering, surveying, and natural resources firm
 Clara Dickinson McQuary - Washington State Parks
 Paul Gonseth - Washington State Department of Transportation
 Shaun Darveshi - Palouse Regional Transportation Planning Organization
 Kari Dingman - Department of Fish and Wildlife
 Jon Campbell - Architect
 Sheriff Mark Crider – Safety questions
 Joy Smith – Waitsburg Commercial Club
 Kathryn Witherington – Port of Columbia
 Jennie Dickinson - Executive Director, Port of Columbia

In addition, on each seat in the meeting hall was placed a detailed fact sheet and a comment and contact form, to be deposited in multiple baskets throughout the room.

the National Park Service grant for technical expertise, in Oct. 2016, and multiple rounds of public outreach took place, beginning in November, 2016. The Plan was adopted before the March, 2018, goal, she said.

"We wanted to make sure that this was a community supported effort. So from the very get-go we knew that we were going to go out to the public at key decision points to make sure that we heard from everybody," Weckmueller-Behringer said.

She said the same workshops were held in multiple locations throughout the region.

During the first round of workshops people were asked to identify what connections they would like to have.

"We gathered 1,000 different ideas, and they were digitized," she said.

A second round of public outreach took place to help prioritize the connections.

"We talked to everybody who wanted to talk to us," she said.

She said conceptual networks were created using that data and public feedback.

Weckmueller-Behringer said the planning committee asked for specific comments from the public during a third round of workshops.

"We did make a couple of tweaks based on public feedback, just, simply, because we had that information directly from you," she said.

The entire process was inclusive, with materials provided in Spanish, she said.

"There were no hidden agendas," said Weckmueller-Behringer. "This inclusive outreach is what drove the process forward."

"This was the first project, ever, where we had gotten a call from a grant funding agency. They said we heard about your project. We have money for this kind of thing, so please hurry up and finish the Plan," Weckmueller-Behringer said.

She said the Touchet Valley Trail, from Dayton to Waitsburg, is the first project to move forward to implementation.

Port of Columbia Executive Director Jennie Dickinson said she first heard about the importance of trails and paths at a Columbia Cares meeting, back in the early 2000s.

At the annual Comprehensive Economic Development Strategy meeting in Dec. 2015, attendees voted for their top three wishes for Columbia County and having a bike trail connecting Dayton to Waitsburg came in at Number Two. In 2016, it moved into first place, she said.

"I was quite surprised because it always was about jobs," she said. "For many of the people in the community, things had improved here, and they weren't thinking as desperately about jobs, as they had in the past. Quality of life issues were rising more to the top."

Dickinson said Ports across the state have trails, parks and marinas. The Port of Columbia has been responsible for the Lyons Ferry Marina since the early 1970s.

"Our tourism authority was expanded in 1984," she said.

The trail meets the Port's mission. It is included in the Comprehensive Plan. It is in the Cooperative Parks Master Plan, for the city, the county, and the Port, she said.

"It wasn't just some wild idea the Port commissioners thought up. This was very much a long term plan."

Dickinson said the Port participated in the Blue Mountain Regional Trails project from the beginning and the Touchet Valley Trail was identified for first implementation.

The National Park Service suggested establishing a steering committee, which has been accomplished.

Dickinson said they have received an award from the state Department of Transportation for bicycle and pedestrian safety, which can only be used for bicycle and pedestrian projects.

"If we were to turn it away it would go to a different community," she said.

Cost estimates for the trail range from 3.5 to 6 million dollars, Dickinson said.

"We really won't know how much it is going to cost until the design is done," she said. "It may have to be built in phases."

She said representatives from WADOT have looked at the site and have determined the need for some new bridges over the Touchet River.

The Port is required to provide a $20,000 match, she said.

She said Port funds come from property tax and from leased revenue. The Port receives over $300,000 a year from leased revenue, from private businesses.

Since the Port-owned property along the rail lines has been identified as the best place for the trail there will be an extensive title search made, she added.

"We're working on public outreach right now," Dickinson said.

There was a listening session conducted in June for landowners with property adjacent to the rail lines, and an online public survey was conducted, as well.

The Port's Economic Development Coordinator Kathryn Witherington talked about the survey mentioned by Dickinson.

"We heard back from a lot of you in this room. It was a great way to gather good feedback." She said the bulk of respondents were from the local communities, and the majority of them want walking and biking trail with river access, preferably paved, or dual surface paved. They also want pet waste bags.

"All are elements that can be used to inform the design," she said.

She said the majority of people are pretty excited about the trail, but some have reservations.

"A lot of those people have come and talked to us, about their reservations and realized they can be addressed through design," she said. "And there are people opposed. We know that, and we want to talk to those people, and find out why they are opposed, and see how we can make them more comfortable, because, ultimately, we want this to be a trail that is embraced by the entire community," she said.

Witherington pointed to a six page list of Frequently Asked Questions saying it grew over the course of the past summer.

"You have the very detailed answers in that document. It is a living document. It is going to keep growing, because we don't know everything yet," she said.

For instance, part of the design process is to determine whether the trail will be located on the north or on the south side of the rail lines, said Witherington.

While there is much that is not yet known, Witherington said there is much that is known.

For instance, Walla Walla and Columbia Counties are Right to Farm Counties and they can't be told not to apply agricultural spray to their crops. She also said the National Park Service has advised closing the trails during harvest, for safety reasons.

As far as liability goes, Witherington said, "Check with your own insurance agency. One landowner said her agent said the liability doesn't change."

Construction funds can't come from local taxes said Witherington.

Experts in Quality of Life, Safety and Transportation, and Operations and Maintenance were on hand to field questions from the attendees at open houses in Dayton and in Waitsburg for the Touchet Valley Trail.

"The state has that money in the Puget Sound area. We can get some of it," she said.

"We can't promise in the long term local dollars won't be used to maintain it," she said. But if we do, it will be something that comes out of existing dollars. If at some point in the future we want to increase taxes in order to maintain this trail, we as a community will have to vote on it.

Witherington said she spends a lot of time thinking about the feedback from the community, both the good and the bad, and how to get people to embrace the trail.

"I want it to be a trail people connect with, love, and embrace moving forward," she said.

Dickinson said the Touchet Valley Trail project is currently in the conceptual planning phase.

The National Park Service has created a partnership between the American Society of Landscape Architects and students taking a WSU Landscape Architecture class. The instructor of the class has helped with the Bill Chipman Trail, between Pullman and Moscow, and is currently helping with a trail project between Colfax, Albion and Pullman.

Members of the professional architect group and the WSU students will meet in Dayton on Oct. 25, after which two professional architects will team up with two or three local people, for a "very intensive design workshop".

All public comments from that workshop will be incorporated into the concept design, to try to mitigate any concerns people have. Then the concept plan will be shared with the public on Oct. 26. Public feedback will be taken into consideration for creation of the final concept plan, which should be in place by the end of the year, Dickinson said.

REPORT FROM DAYTON SCHOOL DISTRICT

Submitted by Supt. Doug Johnson

Immunizations

Dayton School District Superintendent Doug Johnson said the state legislature has changed the laws used to guide school districts regarding immunization policies and infectious diseases because of its concerns about the return of measles. The exemptions for the measles/mumps/rubella vaccine, which were granted for personal and philosophical reasons, are no longer. Exemptions are still possible based on religious reasons, Johnson said. School employees and children enrolled in school who have not received the MMR, and cannot provide proof of immunity, will be prevented from being at school during a measles outbreak, he said.

Social media policy

While there is some policy language regarding employee use of social media, both inside and outside of school, there is a need for the policy to be discussed with the teachers' union to ensure protection of employees, from social media issues. Johnson said a meeting with the union will be held in Oct. and the District could take action later this fall.

Facilities improvement

Johnson has submitted an urgent repair grant to the Office of Superintendent of Public Instruction for the purpose of replacing the roof/awning that covers a portion of the elementary asphalt playground.

If the grant is denied the Board of Directors may need to discuss how to fund the repair in order to provide a safe playing surface for students, free of leaking water and icy spots during bad weather. He said since the multi-purpose room is also the cafeteria there is no other protected play area during the lunch recess for elementary students than that portion of the elementary asphalt playground.

Enrollment and Attendance

Student enrollment, overall, is above the budgeted figure used by the state to determine revenue, and it is slightly above the ending number for the 2018-19 school year. Johnson said the District hopes to the current enrollment number of 388, can be maintained, or increased.

Budget status

Business Manager Paula Moio said with the changes that were made last spring regarding spending, the District finished the 2018-19 fiscal year with a higher fund balance than anticipated. The higher fund balance will help the District continue to provide educational services for all students, Johnson said.

DW Combine finances

Johnson said Moio attended a DW Athletic Combine meeting and reported that total expenditures for each school district was lower than when each district ran individual athletic programs.

Enrichment levy

Johnson said the Board of Directors is considering a series of three levy requests, in Feb. He said the tax rate and collection totals will be equal to, or less, than the collections approved by voters in 2016.

The Board is considering running a four-year Enrichment levy to pay for items outside of basic education using calculations made by the state. This would include staffing beyond state allocation, food services, supplies and curriculum, as well as student activities. The state has produced a formula intended to limit the inequitable tax collection across the state for education, Johnson said.

Based on an enrollment of 400 students, the amount collected and the rate per $1,000 of assessed value would vary each year. He said if the requested amount is more than the actual prior year enrollment, the county auditor will "roll back" the collection amount, which would reduce the taxes to reflect only the amount necessary for the number of students enrolled.

Johnson said estimates are still being made based on enrollment, but the numbers will range somewhere between $1.25/1,000, to about $1.40/1,000. The exact numbers will not be known until the enrollment is calculated, along with the county's annual assessed property value.

The Board is discussing a replacement Capital Project levy for technology, as well. The state has increased the type of expenditures which can be made using this levy, to include annual software licensing fees, spam filters, safety filters, and technology maintenance and repairs.

The District currently uses the general fund for these expenditures. Approval of the Capital Project levy will allow the District to support work stations for students and the staff by maintaining the appropriate infrastructure and keeping them up-to-date.

The District is also considering a Capital levy to update the electrical system in the elementary school so that an air conditioning and ventilation system can be installed.

Columbia County Board of Commissioners Adopts 2019 Comp Plan Update

By Michele Smith | THE TIMES

DAYTON—During their regular session on Monday, Sept. 16, the Board of Columbia County Commissioners adopted the county's 2019 Comprehensive Plan Update, and its three new ordinances regarding; water availability for the new building, critical areas, and zoning.

Some of the Hirst decision language was incorporated into Ordinance 2019-04, regarding water availability for the new building, said Dena Martin, Planning Associate.

"It generally doesn't affect us, but it is in there," she told the commissioners.

She said Ordinance 2019-05 is a rewrite of the old Code for critical areas.

Ordinance 2019-06 adds a military training overlay in the northernmost part of the county, along with updated Accessory Dwelling Unit regulations, and a new section to allow A-1 Zoning for cluster type housing developments, she said.

Martin said all of the plans add docketing procedures.

Although the BOCC adopted the Plan, Commissioner Chuck Amerein cast a dissenting vote for Ordinance 2019-06 based on a question he wants answered about some of the rules on the design and architecture of Accessory Dwelling Units, distances, and rules about their depending on similar utility services.

The Planning Commission held their first 2019 Comprehensive Plan Update meeting for public comment in Nov. 2018.

Their final public meeting was on Sept. 9.

There were only two public comments made at the Sept. 9 public hearing. Both people spoke in support of the Plan.

John Andrews, representing Tucannon AG Partnership, in Starbuck, gave the Plan his blessing, and Port Executive Director Jennie Dickinson spoke about the importance of the Plan in getting the land surrounding the Blue Mountain Station into the Urban Growth Area.

"This is so the City can furnish water and wastewater services to the property," she said.

Dickinson said the Port had been waiting for this to happen for the past seven years.

That meeting was officiated by Planning Commission Chair Jason Towery, and Commissioners Jay Ball, Chuck Reeves and Planning Director Meagan Bailey.

The 2019 Comprehensive Plan Update was certified by the Palouse Regional Transportation Planning Organization, as written, on Sept. 10, Martin said.

Talk About Art

By Carolyn Henderson

Many people are attached to their first baby blanket, and a surprising number of adults still possess it in parts or entirety. Generally, it's a quilt, fuzzy fleece, or knitted/crocheted heirloom.

Artist Sandra Haynes possesses such an heirloom, but it's . . . different from the standard baby blanket. Haynes' childhood treasure is a bobcat hide, taken from an animal that her mother shot when it was raiding the family henhouse.

"Being around wild animals has always been a part of my life," explains the wildlife painter from Heppner, OR. "Dad and some of his brothers, all woodsmen, spent a lot of time with me in the heavy timber, teaching me everything about the life of its inhabitants."

As a result, Haynes began drawing at the age of 3, and what she drew were animals: horses, moose, bear, deer, cougars, foxes, skunks, raccoons, mountain goats, wolves, turkeys. The reference shots for these animals Haynes takes herself, either by finding the animals in game parks or farms, or by hiking out into the deep wilderness and tracking down her prey.

Her medium of choice is scratchboard, which results in highly detailed, intricately realistic portrayals of her image. She also works in oil, as well as graphite and pan pastels, these latter on a surface called Duralar drafting film. Taking advantage of the semi-opaque surface, Haynes applies the foreground of the drawing on the front of the film and the background on the backside, which shows through the front.

"The Duralar allows for an artistic interpretation of depth in a drawing not achieved any other way," Haynes says. "The method is a creative dream with endless possibilities."

Through October 19, Wenaha Gallery (219 E. Main, Dayton) is showcasing Haynes' wildlife art at a month-long Art Event. Haynes will be in the gallery in person Saturday, October 5, from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. during the gallery's Autumn Art Show, and will regale visitors with her wilderness experience stories, as well as answer questions about the unique techniques she uses in her art.

Haynes will be joined by bead weaver Alison Oman of Clarkston, WA, and acrylic painter Paul Henderson of Yakima, WA, who is presenting his Moods of Highway 101 artworks. Framer/chef Savonah will prepare her signature artisan treats, this time featuring locally sourced honey.

For the love of short films

Manhattan Film Festival back at the Liberty

By Mike Ferrians | THE TIMES

Over the last few years I have not only learned an appreciation for short films, but I have come to love them. I am now a fan of Vimeo, a short film presentation venue (look it up!). I am constantly amazed at the ingenuity, creativity and risk involved in being able to tell a story in 10-20 minutes. Some great things come in very small packages.

The Manhattan Short Film Festival is something folks have come to expect and anticipate at the Liberty Theater each year. This is an artistic showcase of new films that not only creates a break from the first-release film runs, but helps us "hear" from some of the newest filmmakers coming up in the world.

The MSFF was started by one man, Nicholas Mason, in New York in 1998. On 9/11, the people insisted the festival continue, as it provided a gathering place and a way to survive the horrors of that day. Since then it has become truly a global festival. This year ten films have been selected as finalists from thousands of entries representing every continent. This year the films come from USA, UK, Finland, France, Iran, Germany, and Canada. By virtue of its selection, every film is eligible for Oscar nomination.

Added value in viewing MSFF is that audience members get to vote on their choice of Best Actor and Best Film. Patrons will receive voting cards as they come in, and will leave them on the way out. They will be compiled and the winners announced online October 4, 2019.

A synopsis of each film has been going out on our Facebook page, and we have flyers showing each of the ten movies, with a total run time of just over two hours. We will play all ten films at each regular show time of our movie week. With titles like, "Driving Lessons," "Tipped," and "At the End of the World," I guarantee you, too, will be amazed and inspired by what you see.

For mature audiences, MSFF plays Sept. 27 to Oct. 1 at the Liberty. Visit www.libertytheater.org for show times and admission prices, or call 382-1380 for more information.

Dayton Waitsburg Football loses close game against White Swan

By Eric Umphrey | THE TIMES

WAITSBURG— Friday September 20th Dayton Waitsburg (DW) hosted White Swan for their third game of the season. DW won the coin toss and elected to receive the kickoff. They quickly scored on a 51-yard run from #17 Shawn Evans who scored DW's first touchdown of the season making it 6-0. White Swan would also score on its first possession tying the score 6-6. The next touchdown would come from a 46-yard run from #24 Christian Watson-Solis. The 2-point conversion would be executed by #21 Dylan Blesoe, giving DW the lead again 14-6. Unfortunately, those would be the last points scored by DW.

White Swan's passing game continued to move the ball in the 2nd quarter and when DW's defense would force a 4th down it would be 4th and short yardage deep in DW's territory making the coaches decision to go for it an easy call. #8 Cason Nichols made a great catch for an interception to open the 2nd half but a flag for too many men on the field would give the ball back to White Swan. It was a huge momentum shift in the game.

The 1st half was played very quickly but the 2nd half play was slowed with several penalties. Cason Nichols intercepted another ball in the 3rd quarter but a penalty on DW during the play pushed them back deep into their own territory making the play feel more like a punt instead of the great play it was. The 4th quarter would pass with neither team scoring giving the victory to White Swan.

|            | 1st | 2nd | 3rd | 4th | Total |
|------------|-----|-----|-----|-----|-------|
| White Swan | 6   | 12  | 6   | 0   | 24    |
| DW         | 14  | 0   | 0   | 0   | 14    |

HIGHLIGHTS

1st quarter #41 Mathew Wyatt tackles the QB to turn the ball over to DW on downs in the 1st. #65 Seamus House with a tackle in the backfield for a loss. 2nd quarter - #3 Adam Puckett picks off the 2pt conversion in the end zone. 3rd quarter - #44 Bradley Sandau with an 8-yard run for a first down. #8 Cason Nichols with an interception.

Scoring Plays DW

DW — 51-yard run Evans. Conversion failed.

DW — 46-yard run Watson-Solis. Blesoe 2-point conversion.

Prescott Defeats Irrigon 10-1 in home opener

By Eric Umphrey | THE TIMES

Prescott – Tuesday September 17th Prescott High School played Irrigon High School in their first home soccer match of the year. Jaime Escalante scored the first goal of the game to give the Tigers the lead. The next three goals of the half were all scored by Tiger Jayson Castillo. Three consecutive goals by a player is sometimes called a natural hat trick. Jayson would go on to score two more in the 2nd half for a total of five on the game. Five goals in soccer has a special name, it's called a "glut" which seems like an appropriate term. Tiger's Omar Velazco, Emmanuel Sanchez, Miguel Ayala would all score in the 2nd half with Jamie Escalante closing out the scoring with the tenth goal of the game.

Back Home from 50th Class reunion

By Teeny McMunn | THE TIMES

Times Business Manager Teeny McMunn recently traveled to her 50th class reunion in Miles City, Montana, this is the second article in a series.

I am back home, with almost 2000 miles on my car and half of Montana's bug population on my grill.

I spent Friday and Saturday night in Spokane, and walked the fund-raiser walk Saturday morning. I left Sunday morning, traveling the route I had traveled many times, and it felt as comfortable as an old coat I found in the closet. I stopped at the $10,000 bar and gift shop, but they call it now $50,000 bar, which confused me. I made it to Butte and checked into a motel.

The next day I gassed up at a gas station close by and noticed it had three ways to get onto the freeway. When the signs say the number of the highway or just east and west, it confuses me. To be on the safe side, I approached a fella in the convenience store to confirm which way to go, so I don't backtrack as I have been known to do.

Like most cars nowadays, it tells you how many miles you have left before you need to gas up. My car has the gas pump light come on when I have 50 miles left. When I got to Forsyth, about 40 miles from Miles City, I had 86 miles left so 50 miles from 86 miles, would mean the light would come on but I would make it. I decided not to chance it and gas up in Forsyth. Unfortunately I took the wrong exit, which took me thru the town and the gas stations were on the other side of the highway. I did my math again and figured I'd be ok. Sure enough I cruised into Miles and gassed up, with a half-gallon to spare. My Dad would have been shaking his head.

I checked into the Horton House Bed and Breakfast, a delightful old house, and called my sister. The next few days were full of visiting family, going to dinner at the Airport Inn for finger steaks, meeting with classmates for the upcoming event, and traveling around Miles. My old house on Clark Street is no longer there, having been replaced with a duplex, My Grandma's house has been re-sided but I saw the corner where Grandpa's rocks were. No one was home or I would have asked to check it out. A classmate's wife met me at the high school to show me around. When we were in high school, there were close to 1000 students in the 4 grades. Now there are 400. Big change.

Some memories are best left as memories

I didn't have time to go down by the river to look for agates, but I did go to the Saturday market and bought a beautiful heart shaped agate necklace, that the artist (an elderly Native American man) had made. He shared it came from the Wildhorse Mountains, now closed to the public. I also bought a few of his tumbled rocks, of which one was a river agate.

Thursday my schedule was open so I set off to Terry Montana, one of Montana's many historic towns and like many, were busy in their day. It was only 36 miles away. I wanted to see the Badlands. I found myself at the Evelyn Cameron museum and as luck would have it, it was closed but one of the curators was walking by. Cameron was a well-known photographer in the early 1900's. The curator graciously gave me a tour, including one of the building next to it, which had a few awesome dinosaur bones. While we were there, a fella came in who gave the museum tumbled rocks to sell. I bought a few and he gifted me with a fossil rock and a purple crystal rock. I was thrilled!! My curator friend, Greg, said it would not be a good idea to see the Badlands, as it had rained too much that day. I agreed to come back the next day.

I went back on Friday. We were going to go in his pickup, but a few ladies, who happened to be at the museum, wanted to go so they went with him in his truck, while I followed in my Ford Focus. The first mud pit we came to made me understand why yesterday was not a good idea. If you know what gumbo is, then you know how slick it gets when wet. The road was like mud that had a gallon of Elmer's glue added to it. So he drove on, slipping and fish tailing. I waited for him then I followed suit. We continued with this pattern for 8 miles, and some 10 mud pits about 50 feet long. By the time we were on top I felt I had won the 'bad ass' award of the year. Both Greg and the ladies were applauding me. I don't think either one of us considered what would have happened if I had gotten stuck. I would have been as muddy as the car. We all took pictures of the amazing view and I was in rock heaven. It really was what made my trip. On the way down, by now, I'm very confident going through those mud holes, I thanked Greg and headed back to Miles, with a very muddy car.

When I got back to Miles, I just couldn't wash my car as I wanted to brag about how it got so muddy! On Saturday, we had a meet and greet with the other area high schools 1969 classes. One of the classmates sang a ditty about Montana and in the song, said, if you ever get Montana gumbo on your vehicle, good luck getting it off. Oh, shoot!! I took my car to the car wash, paid $14 for the deluxe of the deluxe, hoping they were wrong. The car washed up ok, but the wheel wells were caked with thick mud. I paid an additional $1.50 for the self-power wand which didn't allow enough time to get it all off. Before I headed home, I used the garden hose at the bed and breakfast, and spent another 15 minutes knocking off the rest. Whew!! Now I have an appointment at Jay's Garage to lift the car and see if more is stuck under it. I profusely thanked him for my new tires that got me thru those challenging mud pits. My reward, though, is I'm sure I left a reputation in Terry, MT, as the lady who was not afraid to follow the truck up to the top, in her small red car

Friday night and all day Saturday was the reunion. It was like 68 year olds being back in high school. Priceless. Saturday afternoon, at the meet and greet, we had multiple choice quizzes to answer about our era and high school. Much laughter and conversation followed. I actually won two of them, totally by guess, certainly not by remembering!!

Sunday, I headed home another way, going through Jordan and ending in Great Falls to spend the night, with a friend, then headed home.

Next time I would like to drive to Ekalaka Montana, to dig for fossils. The reunion and trip was all I was hoping for and more.

On September 17, 2019, Pacific Power & Light Company (Pacific Power) filed an advice filing with the Washington Utilities and Transportation Commission (Commission) to implement a rate change to Schedule 97, the Power Cost Adjustment Mechanism (PCAM) Adjustment.

As part of the PCAM, Pacific Power tracks its actual power costs, which include fuel costs and purchased power cost, and compares it to the projected power costs included in customer rates on an annual basis. Each year, these costs are trued up and the differences are shared with customers.

In November 2018, Pacific Power was able to share the benefits of lower priced power to customers through a temporary, one-year surcredit in Schedule 97. That credit will now expire on October 31, 2019.

This proposed change will result in an overall average increase to Washington customers of approximately 5.1 percent. A residential customer using approximately 1,200 kWh per month would see a bill impact of $5.88 per month.

The Commission will examine Pacific Power's request. As a result of this examination, the Commission may determine that the schedule should be accepted as filed, modified, or rejected. If accepted as filed, the rate change would go into effect on November 1, 2019.

You are invited to comment to the Commission. The Commission has the authority to set final rates that may be lower or higher than the Company's request, depending on the outcome of its investigation. You can comment by using the "Submit a Comment" feature at the Commission's website, at utc.wa.gov, or by using the contact information below.

Commission staff will make a recommendation to the commissioners at an open meeting in Lacey. These meetings are regularly scheduled every other Thursday at 9:30 a.m. Please contact the Commission to request to be notified of the scheduled open meeting at which the proposal will be considered by the Commission.

You will have an opportunity to comment in person at this meeting. The UTC is committed to providing reasonable accommodation to participants with disabilities. If you need reasonable accommodation, please contact the Commission at 360-664-1132 or human\_resources@utc.wa.gov.

If you are unable to attend the open meeting, the Commission has a bridge line which enables you to participate by telephone. Call 360-664-1234 the day before the open meeting for instructions and to sign in.

Each numbered row contains two clues and two 6-letter answers. The two answers differ from each other by only one letter, which has already been inserted. For example, if you exchange the A from MASTER for an I, you get MISTER. Do not change the order of the letters.

GO FIGURE! by Linda Thistle

TEENY MCMUNN: MY RECIPE BOX

Slow Cooker Zucchini Soup

I ran this recipe in 2017, but Julie B asked me for it again. A while ago, I accidentally deleted my recipe file, then deleted my recycle bin file. I was able to find it in our Dropbox application, so score one for technology!

I was going to make it for dinner, but we had to use up some chicken so I will make it later. Like most, we have an abundance of tomatoes to use plus a large gifted zucchini. Julie said the soup is very tasty and freezes well.

We are on the downside of light dinners but not quite ready for heavy winter dinners. This soup is just right, as the evenings are getting cool.

I prefer fresh bread, toasted, with soups like this.

INGREDIENTS:

- 1 ½ pounds sweet Italian sausage
- 2 c. ½ inch pieces of celery
- 2 pounds of zucchini, cut into ½ inch slices
- 2 ea, 28 oz cans diced tomatoes
- 2 green bell peppers, cut into ½ slices
- 1 chopped onion
- 2 tsp salt
- 1 tsp white sugar
- 1 tsp dried oregano
- 1 tsp Italian seasoning
- 1 tsp dried basil
- ¼ tsp garlic powder
- 6 Tbsp grated Parmesan cheese

DIRECTIONS:

Heat in a large skillet over medium heat. Cook and stir sausage in the hot skillet until browned and crumbly, 5-7 minutes, drain and discard grease. Mix celery into cooked sausage, cook and stir until celery is softened, about 10 minutes.

Combine sausage mixture, and rest of ingredients, except cheese. (The recipe lists all of them, but I shortened it). Cook on low for four to six hours. Garnish each serving with 1 Tbsp Parmesan Cheese.

MY NOTES:

Like most soups, one can add or subtract according to taste. I would take out the bell pepper, add fresh tomatoes, and cube, not slice the zucchini. I will probably add the grated Parmesan cheese that comes in the jar, to the soup, and grate some fresh Parmesan cheese for the top.

Let me know how you tweaked it.

ENJOY 🍲

Lion's Club Annual Salmon Feed BBQ

Camaraderie, Preparation and a Secret Sauce

By Tracy Thompson | THE TIMES

The best part about getting ready for the Lion's Club Salmon Feed BBQ according to volunteer Dan McKinley? "All the great camaraderie between the Lion's Club members and the community," he said. "We have a lot of fun together."

The most challenging aspect of preparing for an event that ultimately fed 750 people? "Making sure it's all set up - we've got a lot of ingredients to get ready, it can be quite the scramble," McKinley continued. "But we're getting better and better at it."

A visit behind the scenes as the event was beginning, revealed a tightly choreographed process of lifting and moving large racks of salmon filets between BBQ drums with different heat settings, with the special sauce being dabbed on liberally by Jason Kenney. Community members arrived early and were treated to the same delicious recipes as usual including the salmon's special sauce. When asked what was in the sauce, McKinley remained mum. "It's a secret," he said.

After the event McKinley said, "We had a great turnout, the fish was fabulous and everybody had a good time."
