Lane Hill hopes to create a fun, educational gathering space in former Farmer's Café

By Dena Wood | THE TIMES

WAITSBURG – The Farmer's Café, formerly located at 216 Main Street, was once a favorite gathering spot for locals; the perfect place to grab a cup of coffee and catch up on the news about town.

Over the next couple of months, new building owner Lane Hill hopes to transform the space into a new community gathering spot, though one of an entirely different kind.

Lane and her husband, Dr. Charles Hill, live in Seattle, where Dr. Hill is a professor at the University of Washington business school. Lane is a painter, printmaker, and educator.

The Hills became familiar with Waitsburg when their long-time friends, Jim German and Claire Johnston, and Paul and Karen Gregutt moved here. They began visiting the area more frequently after Lane's sister, Gail Gwinn and brother-in-law Joe Patrick, moved to town.

The couple purchased the Main Street building last year from the Gregutts and their partners, and Lane has been busy working out design plans, hiring a contractor and dreaming of all the possible uses for the space ever since.

"Charles enjoys being able to come out and visit and is looking forward to the experience of living in an artist-style loft," said Lane. "But I'm the one that's passionate about the project. He's excited to see what we come up with."

"We" refers to Lane and her sister Gail. In addition to building a living space upstairs, the one firm plan Lane has for the building is to create a large

Butler Joins Dayton School Board

BOARD MEMBERS
MADE APPOINTMENT
TO POSITION VACATED
BY MARCHAND
HOVRUD

By Michele Smith | THE TIMES

DAYTON—At their regular meeting on Oct. 7, the Dayton School District Board of Directors approved Dan Butler to fill board Position 3, recently vacated by Marchand Hovrud when she resigned at the beginning of September.

During the board meeting Butler fielded a series of questions posed to him by the directors. Butler spoke about his 35 years experience in education, as well as his vision for the school district.

"Education is my hobby, my life. Everything I do is around education," he told the directors.

Butler, a Waitsburg native, received his teaching credentials in 1978 from Eastern Washington University. He taught business and marketing education in the Mead School District in Spokane for eleven years.

He then received his principal credentials in 1990 while interning under Principal Jerry cipal Jerry Scott at Waitsburg High School. From 1990-1996 Butler was the Waitsburg High School principal for grades seven through twelve.

The Learning School, an alternative school for Waitsburg and Dayton students owes its existence to Butler, as well. Butler spent three years in that endeavor.

The years from 2001-2014 saw Butler back at the Mead School District in Spokane where he served as a career and technology education director, an executive director of both the Technology and Career and Technology Education programs, and as an assistant superintendent.

BALLOTS CONTAIN TWISTS FOR SOME DAYTON SCHOOL BOARD POSITIONS

By Michele Smith | THE TIMES

DAYTON—According to Columbia County auditor Sharon Richter, election ballots should be mailed out by Thurs., Oct.15. Those ballots contain several twists that Columbia County voters should be aware of with regard to Position 2, and Position 3, on the Dayton School District board.

First, Marchand Hovrud's name will appear on the ballot for school board Position 3, but because she has resigned from the board, Richter said that she will need to resign, again, after the election is certified.

Dan Butler has been by appointed by the board of directors to finish the rest of Hovrud's term which ends in December (see accompanying article). However, Hovrud's name appears on the November ballot, so the school board will need to re-appoint Butler (or someone else) to replace Hovrud again in January. That appointment will be for two years. The appointee will then be eligible to file for a two-year unexpired term in 2017.

Steve Martin did not file for re-election for Position 2 on the board this year. Richter said that Michelle McCleary has filed for that position, but McCleary said that she will resign because she is moving out of school board District 2.

According to Superintendent Doug Johnson the school board of directors will need to declare a vacancy for Position 2 and go through an application and selection process for that position, as was done with Hovrud's position this month.

Board secures grants to upgrade Prescott pool and park

By Dena Wood | THE TIMES

PRESCOTT – Unlike city pools in the neighboring towns of Waitsburg and Dayton, which are funded by tax dollars and maintained by the cities, the Prescott pool is funded through an annual levy and maintained by the Prescott Parks and Recreation District (PJPRD). Each November the PJPRD must seek community support to pass a maintenance and operations levy that will keep the pool, and Field View Park, operating for another year.

"Funds from our yearly tax levy run the pool and the park,"

Time to Reauthorize the Ex-Im Bank

By Don C. Brunell

American companies are beginning to feel the pinch after Congress killed the Export-Import Bank last June. It is increasingly putting our manufacturers at a competitive disadvantage. Not only are we losing orders to foreign competitors, but some domestic manufacturers are shifting jobs and production to other countries where those banks exist.

GE announced it plans to move 350 iobs from its Waukesha, Wisconsin gas engine plant to a new factory in Canada, which has its own version of an export-import bank. The company, which supplies jet engines to Boeing, says that financing from an export credit agency such as Ex-Im is required for some $11 billion of projects in the pipeline, including power turbines, generation equipment and aircraft engines.

It has been a long and contentious battle; however, Congress can rectify the situation before it adjourns for the year by reauthorizing the bank. For Washington, there is too much at stake

According to the Puget Sound Business Journal, Washington state is the largest single beneficiary of Export-Import financing, largely due to Boeing, which sold $64 billion in Ex-Im financed exports from 2007 to 2012.

But it's not just Boeing, says Kris Johnson, president of the Association of Washington Business. "Of the 183 exporters in the state of Washington that use the Ex-Im bank, 133 are small- and medium-sized businesses."

Since 1935, the Ex-Im Bank has provided financing to foreign companies seeking to purchase American goods. The purchasers buy needed products and American companies export billions of dollars' worth of goods each year – $37 billion in 2013 alone.

A federal agency, the bank borrows money from the Treasury Department and pays interest on the funds to the Treasury. It then lends that money to foreign companies at higher interest

The Ex-Im Bank is self-supporting through interest payments and fees. No tax money is used and, in fact, the bank generated a $1 billion surplus for the U.S. Treasury in 2013. Congress provides funding for the bank's Office of Inspector General and sets the bank's lending limit.

Companies like Ethiopian Airlines need the Export-Import Bank to secure its loans to buy Boeing aircraft. It hopes to buy more than two dozen planes in coming years, but will consider going to European rival Airbus if the U.S. Ex-Im Bank stays out of business, the Wall Street Journal reported.

The Ex-Im Bank has been clouded in controversy. Some in Congress question whether the federal government should be involved in providing loans and loan guarantees to foreign customers of U.S. companies. They believe companies like Boeing should finance aircraft sales themselves.

The U.S. airline industry, led by Delta Air Lines Inc., sued the Export-Import Bank over its long-standing support for Boeing's sales to foreign airlines. Delta and other airlines say the loans allow foreign carriers to purchase planes at below market prices, giving them an unfair advantage against U.S. carriers on international routes.

But our strong dollar and weaker growth hampers U.S. exporters. America's exports of goods and services were down 3 percent from a year earlier in the first seven months of 2015. Exports fell 3.2 percent in August, according to the Commerce Department.

Declining exports, combined with a lack of U.S. Ex-Im Bank funding, is "a double-whammy," says David Ickert, said pool co-manager Len Conlee. "Gate revenues and grants fund equipment replacements, upgrades, and improvements."

As a junior taxing district PJPRD faces the extra challenge of meeting the 60% super majority vote required to pass the levy each year. In the last seven years, the M&O levy failed to pass just once; and then only by 1.41%. In 2009, voters returned a 58.59% support vote, just enough short of 60% to cause the pool to close for the 2010 season.

The levy has passed each year since, with 69.04% of Prescott voters supporting the levy last year.

"We often get asked how Prescott can support a pool and Walla Walla can't," said PJPRD Chair Patsy Adams. "Our pool and park are the center of the community all summer. Life here revolves around these facilities. We are so pleased that the voters support us with their positive votes."

Adams said the board works hard to seek only what is needed to operate and maintain the pool from the voters, and works to procure grants for capital improvements and upgrades.

"We have been excellent stewards of the M&O funds," she said. "We don't ask voters for anything other than the budget necessary to keep the pool and park operating."

The district is seeking a M&O levy of $110,050 to fund the pool and park for 2016. Walla Walla County officials estimate that this will result in an added tax rate of $0.35 per $1,000 of assessed value. This would translate to an added tax of $35 for a $100,000 home.

While the overall budget amount is nearly the same, the valuation is down from $0.37 per $1,000 last year and $0.40 per $1,000 in 2013.

Adams said the district completed a successful 76day swim season this year with an average daily attendance of 66 swimmers. Sixty-one children took swim lessons over four two-week sessions. Through a generous donation from Northwest Grain Growers, lessons are free for children living in the 99348 zip code.

Prior to its June opening, the pool hosted groups from Prescott School, Vista Hermosa Elementary School and College Place Public School for end-ofyear parties. Walla Walla Camp Fire, Vista Hermosa Day Camp, and Jubilee Leadership Academy regularly brought groups to the pool throughout the summer, Adams said.

The PJPRD also hosts special summer events such as concerts in the park, fun swim days and a car show.

The PJPRD board has actively pursued grants to fund a number of upgrades, including the new handicap accessible walkway from the parking lot to the park, an enlarged picnic pad and handicap-accessible barbeque that can be rotated for easy access. A new sunshade was installed inside the pool this year

The board recently approved the purchase of new playground equipment for the park, which should be installed this spring. The old slide and jungle gym had  $\,$  also expressly prohibited by court rule. to be removed due to insurance requirements.

The improvement projects have been funded through grants from Sherwood Trust, the Yancey P. Winans Testamentary Trust, the Association of Washington Cities, the Blue Mountain Community Foundation and the Pacific Power Foundation. The board will continue to seek grants and donations to complete the playground enhancement project.

"We don't have the money for big kid equipment yet, but you've got to start somewhere. We'll continue to work toward that," said Adams.

The PJPRD maintenance and operations levy proposal will be on the November General Election Ballot, which must be postmarked no later than Nov. 3. Because the population of the district is so small, Adams says it is important for voters to mail in those

Trials Set:

Joshua J. Berdar, 23; charged with obtaining a legend (prescription) drug (oxycodone) by fraud, a Class B felony in April. He was released on a $10,000 personal recognizance bond and allowed to travel to Mont. for work. In June, Berdar was charged in Mont. with Driving Under the Influence – First Offense, and Theft of Property in Gallatin County, Mont. Berdar allegedly took snack items to the register in a convenience store, and stole them once he realized he didn't have the money to pay for them. Once he was apprehended by the police, he was also charged with driving under the influence. As a result, Berdar's Columbia County bond was revoked in July for failure to comply with the terms and conditions of his release and a bench warrant was issued. Berdar was arrested and re-released in Sept. after putting up 10% of a $10,000 security bond. Trial dates are set for Nov. 9-10.

Nicholas A. Beard, 26, Spokane; charged last October with attempting to elude, reckless driving, and DUI. In July, count #3 (driving under the influence of alcohol) was dismissed without prejudice after blood test evidence was suppressed on the grounds that Beard was not served directly with a warrant for the extraction of blood. Trial dates for the first two charges are reset to Feb. 4-5, 2016.

Other Legal Action:

Richard Lee Lyman, 64, Columbia, Mo.; charged with theft in the second degree, malicious mischief in the second degree and making false or misleading statements to a public servant for allegedly collecting archeological materials illegally. Court denied motion to dismiss charges. Judge Gallina said that to dismiss the court would be required to weigh the credibility of the witness, which is expressly prohibited, in order to determine criminal intent. The court would also have to determine whether the altering of artifacts from their native state diminished their value which necessitates a factual determination by the court, which is

Two Vie for Dayton School Board

KATIE LEID IS CHALLENGING INCUMBENT JOE HUETHER; BOTH HAVE STRONG EDUCATION BACKGROUND

By Michele Smith | THE TIMES

DAYTON-Former Dayton School District Elementary Principal Katie Leid is running for the "at large" school board position currently held by Director Joe Huether, and one he will defend in the upcoming November election. Both Leid and Huether have considerable education and experience to bring to Recently retired from the Dayton School District Leid has been involved in education for a total of twenty-two years. She received her teaching credentials in 1991 through Washington State University, and has held a variety of teaching positions, locally, and abroad, as well.

In 1991-92 Leid taught K-12 at the American School of The Hague in the Netherlands. She then returned to Washington, teaching fourth graders in Pullman for five years. Her sixth year in Pullman was spent teaching science methods to juniors and seniors at the WSU College of Education, where she was a Boeing Teacher in Residence.

Leid returned to the American School of The Hague for one year in 1998, where she oversaw middle school special services. That was followed by a stint back in Pullman, where she taught sixth grade and eighth-grade science at Lincoln Middle School.

During that time Leid was certified in early adolescent science, and she received her administrative credentials from WSU in 1997.

Beginning in 2004 Leid served the Dayton School

District as the elementary school principal. Among her responsibilities was sharing middle school principal duties with the high school principal.

She also reported to and made presentations to the Dayton School board members for nine years, until her retirement in 2013.

"Through that experience I became familiar with how a board governs," she said. "Reflecting on my education, I began to wonder if our citizens and parents truly know what it is a board is required to do.

"As an educator I feel that I can help them understand and learn what a board can do," Leid added. "The perception of public education is very low right Leid went on to discuss concerns the school board has around such issues as declining enrollment and levy failures. She advocates meeting with school personnel, parents, and the community as one avenue for addressing those issues.

"If the state of Washington does its duty to fully fund education, we wouldn't be having these problems," Leid explained.

Leid believes her educational background, experience, and knowledge of how administration works makes her an ideal candidate for the school board She said she is a lifelong learner and is passionate about kids getting the best education they can, no matter where they are.

The same can be said about incumbent Joe Huether who is armed with a B.A. in Sociology and an M.Ed in Early Childhood Special Education that he received from the University of Washington in 1975.

When he was at the University of Washington,

Huether got to perform field work in an experimental education laboratory for child development that was located on the campus of the University's Medical School.

Since then Huether's entire career has been spent in program development, first in administering the early childhood program for the Richland, Wash. School District in 1975, and in the local Head Start Program.

loe Huether

Huether has also been a co-ordinator for the bilingual program in the Pasco School District's Title VII program, and he has worked in the Pasco School District's reading program, applying educational models to help improve language skills for its students.

Huether has served as both a Special Education Director, and Director of Education Technology at the Education Services District 123 in Pasco.

Identifying students' needs and helping them to help themselves is important to Huether, as is the idea of being an agent for change.

"Say something new is coming. How can we prepare schools to deal with it?" Huether asked. "We must address internal needs and external requirements. If we give our teachers the tools they need to motivate kids, then our job is done," he added.

Huether echoes Leid's sentiment when it comes to getting the state legislature to meet its requirement to fully fund schools, and the importance of doing so. Huether said he will strongly advocate to get the state to do its part.

Huether believes his education and experience, his ongoing experience as a board member with the District, and the fact that he has visited and observed many other school districts throughout the state will give him the edge on the school board.

BMS and Kiwanis Host Oktoberfest

THE TIMES

DAYTON - The Blue Mountain Station Coop has partnered with Kiwanis of Dayton to organize an outdoor Oktoberfest celebration at the Blue Mountain Station (700 Artisan Way) on Oct. 17 from 11 a.m. – 3 p.m.

The forecast calls for temperatures in the low 70's, zero percent chance of rain and 100% chance of a good time," said BMS Co-op Vice President Brad McMasters.

The Dayton Kiwanis members will grill and sell Tucannon Meats bratwursts for $5 each. German Potato Salad, Red Cabbage Slaw, and apple strudel (made from Warren Orchard apples), prepared by co-op board members, will round out the meal.

Grassroot Gourmet Catering will be on hand with soft, warm pretzels. Visitors who are over 21 will enjoy the beer garden featuring craft brews by Chief Spring's Fire & Irons Brew Pub and everyone will enjoy live music by Don Bring friends and a lawn chair, buy an organic hot chocolate, and enjoy an afternoon relaxing around the fire pit at Blue Mountain Station.

Toward the end of his career at Mead, Butler oversaw all three of those operations, and he helped to develop a science, technology, engineering and mathematics school as well. The STEM school, called Riverpoint Academy, is still in operation, he said.

"I loved it. I like being busy," said Butler.

When asked to define the role of school board members Butler said that board members should ask tough questions of themselves, have a strategic plan, collaborate on problems, look for solutions and try to reach consensus. He told the directors that he values teamwork and speaking as one voice.

Butler pointed out that his years of service as an assistant superintendent gives him valuable experience in the areas of perspective, teacher culture, and with relationship to the community. He also addressed the need for a strong ongoing public relations campaign to promote the upcoming levy.

"I have a strong interest in Dayton," said Butler. "I think I have some things I can offer."

Butler and his wife Ginny are both from fourth generation Waitsburg and Dayton families, and have lived in Dayton off and on for many years.

"The core of this community is our children," Butler said. "I think by working in this area I have an idea of what community can be. Dayton can be a healthy place to raise kids."

Butler will finish the remainder of Hovrud's term, which ends in December (see sidebar Page

2015 ASB OFFICERS PLAN TO REASSESS, RECALIBRATE, RENEW

By Dena Wood | THE TIMES

WAITSBURG - Leadership comes in all shapes and sizes, and this year's WHS Associated Student Body (ASB) team is decidedly different from last year's. But that doesn't mean they don't have big plans for the school and students.

Last year's outgoing and energetic ASB team, led by President Owen Lanning, focused on getting students to participate in school spirit with the theme "Be True to Your School."

This year's more reflective representatives include President Stuart Walsh (senior), Vice-president Taylor Hays (junior), Secretary Julia Taylor (junior), and Treasurer Skylar Wood (junior).

"This year we're trying to step back and reassess what we're going for – fine tuning everything to see what works and what doesn't," said Walsh.

The team chose "We Believe!" as the school theme for the year and put together their own set of "We Believe" statements that they shared with students at the school's first pep rally of the year

We believe everyone matters.

We believe everyone has a voice that needs to be heard.

We believe in working to the best of our ability.

We believe everyone can achieve. We believe there is more than one answer.

We believe everyone's opinion should be heard and respected.

We believe change can be for the best.

We believe in having fun.

The ASB team purchased "We Believe" T-shirts for the entire student body, which happened to arrive just in time for Spirit Day of Homecoming

Last month, the team attended a Fall Leadership Day in Pomeroy, sponsored by the Association of Washington Student Leaders.

'We learned different ways to propose activities and how to make it easier for leaders like Mrs. Wooderchak to approve them. And we learned different leadership tactics," said Walsh.

We also talked about closing the gap between teachers and students and between classes," said Hays. "We want everyone to want to come to school, not just come because they have to. And we want everyone to feel included," she added.

"Each leadership team has its own identity and personality," said ASB Advisor Roseann Groom. "This team's goal is to listen to what the other kids have to say, rather than to be super vocal leaders."

The ASB team meets weekly to discuss and evaluate previous activities and to come up with new ideas. They are planning an assembly (involving a scooter race) on Oct. 30, to implement and practice some of the strategies they learned at the recent Leadership Day.

'It was fun to meet with the leaders of the other schools because they had so many ideas,' said Hays. She specifically mentioned a Lost-and-back than their recent predecessors, but it sounds Stuart Walsh, president. like they plan to have just as much fun.

printmaking studio downstairs. Lane says she is excited at the opportunity to create art alongside her sister and is unabashedly enthusiastic about Gail's talent.

"Gail is an amazing artist," said Lane. "She's probably one of the most accomplished printmakers out there and has even developed nontoxic procedures for etching and printmaking. What she can do on a metal plate is incredible. I'm her biggest fan. I'm so excited to have the opportunity to work

While little is set in stone, Lane has plenty of ideas for the space that also includes five garages across the alley. She envisions a gallery/retail shop in front, a large printmaking studio on the main floor, a large apartment for Lane and Charles to stay in upstairs, along with some smaller studios or workspaces upstairs.

The façade of the building, which is currently being built by Ketelsen Construction of Walla Walla, will have a rollup glass door to give an atrium feel to the space.

"People will be able to sit in the front and have it open to the street. It should be accessible and inviting so that people feel welcome to come in and check out what is going on," she said.

Lane said they are keeping as many of the traditional elements as they can, but that the space will be fairly open and streamlined, so that it can change as needs dictate.

"I want the space to be something that works within the community,' Lane said. "Since I'm from outside, I don't know yet what that is and I don't want to make assumptions about what is needed. What I need is a good space for printmaking. Beyond that, I want to keep the plan open for something that can be tun – a gathering place and educational space."

Lane said she owned a building in Langley, Wash, on Whidbey Island, that included a bike shop, art supply store, coffee shop, studio, gallery and theater. It developed over time to what people wanted. It was a fun place with shows and activities for students of all ages, she said.

"I would not have known what it was going to look like from the beginning, but as it developed I realized it couldn't have been anything other than what it was," Lane said. She envisions something similar for Waitsburg.

"Most of what I've done in my history is art-related, as well as a lot of education. It's in my DNA," she said. "It's fun to share knowledge and this space will let us do that in a nice way. Art is a fun thing to teach - it's kind of like magic."

Lane hopes that area artists will use the facility to teach classes, and already has plans to work with Waitsburg artist Suze Wood. The downstairs will also be well-suited for painting and drawing and as a practice space for musicians.

Smaller apartments and studio spaces upstairs could be used as apartments for visiting artists or workshop attendees, studios, or offices.

"I'm considering the idea of 'popup stores' out front, in the retail space, where boutique owners will come and set up a weekend store with fun items that are hard to find in town, like clothing, shoes, and kitchenware," Lane said.

Lane said the garages out back hold possibilities as workshops, perhaps for bike or skateboard repairs.

"I'm open to ideas. I like to teach people how to take their passion and turn it into something that makes an income. I've worked with a lot of high school students to help them figure out how to earn money for college," she

"It really depends on how things go in the next year and who shows up with an interest," Lane added. "It always amazes me who is in the communities you move into and what their interest are. It's fun to find ways to connect people with each other and with their talents. I'm always surprised and it's always amazing and fun.

"And if it just turns out to be a printmaking studio, that's fine, too," she added.

Lane said she and her husband will continue to live in Seattle, but that she plans to visit Waitsburg weekly and intends to keep the gallery open during the week with regular hours.

Lane said the windows and roll-up door should be installed in the next few weeks and hopes the downstairs space will be finished in time for a pre-Christmas opening party.

"I'd love to go into Christmas with it looking beautiful," she said.

24-0 THIRD-QUARTER LEAD DISAPPEARS, BUT CARDINALS PULL OUT HOMECOMING WIN

By Ken Graham | THE TIMES

WAITSBURG - The Waitsburg Cardinals football team was cruising along with a 21-0 lead when halftime homecoming festivities arrived Friday night. But all of those points were needed, along with three more from a third-quarter field goal, as the Columbia-Burbank Coyotes came roaring back to nearly spoil the Cardinals' night.

Two third-quarter touchdowns, with successful two-point conversions, allowed C-B to close the gap to eight. And with 21 seconds left in the game, the Coyotes scored again, but the Cardinal D denied them the conversion points, as Waitsburg held on for the 24-22 win.

Early in the third quarter, Cardinal quarterback Jacob Dunn suffered a severe cut on his throwing elbow, which required at least 30 stitches after the game, according to Waitsburg Coach Troy Larsen.

"I was very proud of Jacob's leadership and toughness in that second half," Larsen said. "A lot of kids would have been done for the

BOYS' TEAM TAKES FIRST TEAM WIN IN WAITSBURG

By Dena Wood | THE TIMES

WAITSBURG - The Cardinals boys made their first team placement, taking second at the D9 League Meet in Waitsburg on Oct. 7. Emily Adams took first place in the girls' 5K and Landon Callas took second in the boys'.

Callas ran a strong race with a time of 17:51.15, finishing second behind College Place's Kenneth Rooks who finished in an impressive 16:32.09. Nate Prior, of Asotin, took third place behind Callas, with a time of 18:44.03.

Cardinal Skylar Wood placed fifth out of 36 runners with a personal record time of 19:24.47. Korben Duffy placed 15th with a PR time of 21:17.22 and Joe Leamy was right behind in 16th place with a season best time of 21:23.98. Tom House also had a season best time at 21:37.91 and 18th place.

Emily Adams took first place out of 16 racers at 19:42.5, nearly two minutes ahead of second place's Makayla Miller who finished at 21:30.94.

The Cardinals continued to impress at the massive Richland Invite on Sat., Oct. 10.

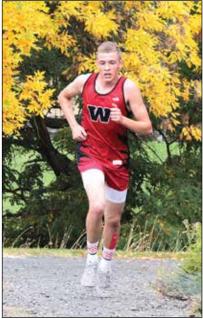

Emily Adams took first place, out of 125 runners, in the Division 2 girls' varsity race with a time of 19:48.03. Adams was more than 10 seconds ahead of second place runner Elyria Kabasenche of Pullman who finished at 19:59.61.

"She had a bad start, boxed in, but fought through and caught the lead girls on the first hill, passing them at the crest. She maintained a solid distance between her and the second place runner," said Coach Ann Adams.

"The ground was heavy and seemed to suck the energy out of you," said Emily Adams.

Landon Callas placed 41st out of 155 runners in the Division 2 boys' varsity race with a time of 18:02.42 on the crowded, three-mile course.
