DUNN EASILY WINS RE-ELECTION

TERRY JACOY AND JIM ROMINE WILL BE NEW FACES ON CITY COUNCIL

By Dena Wood
THE TIMES

WAITSBURG – Preliminary election results for Waitsburg’s mayor and city council members were tallied Monday night, with a few upsets resulting. Incumbent Mayor Marty Dunn received 239 votes, easily holding his position against challenger Debra Callahan, who received 66 votes.

But there will be some new faces on the city council, with Terry Jacoy and Jim Romine taking seats on the board.

Longtime council frontrunner Kevin House easily retained his title as top vote-getter, receiving 253 votes. Second in line was council newcomer and longtime Waitsburg resident Terry Jacoy, who received 212 votes.

The remaining three council spots went to incumbents Kate Hockersmith with 183 votes and KC Kuykendall with 162 votes. First-time filer Jim Romine nudged out current council member Karen Gregutt, receiving 161 votes to Gregutt’s 128.

Additional council votes cast were: Lisa Morrow (119), Matt Spring (99), Lane Hill (67), David Paxton (65), and write-ins Walt Gobel

Public Hearing Coming on Pot Store

Planning director says banning retail cannabis business is not an option

By Dena Wood | THE TIMES

DAYTON – Columbia County planning commissioners have received plenty of feedback – mostly negative – in response to the conditional use permit recently filed by Kathy Sali, to open a marijuana store just outside Dayton.

A public hearing is planned, though date is yet to be set, to help determine the conditions that will be imposed on the shop. It is to be located at 36711 U.S. Highway 12, just west of the city limits.

While many residents would like to see the store banned, Planning Director Kim Lyonnais said that’s not an option.

In September 2015, Columbia County commissioners voted 2-1 not to ban recreational marijuana businesses in the county, and allowed retail cannabis stores in county commercial zones. The state issues permits based on population, and Columbia County is allotted one retail permit.

The commissioners also voted to require marijuana establishments to obtain a conditional use permit to operate. The CUP process allows residents to have input prior to any business being established, as well as allowing the county to put specific conditions on the operations of the business in order to minimize negative impact to surrounding neighbors. It also allows officials to shut down the business if conditions are not being met.

“We really hope people understand that we need validity to conditions that protect and help not only people and children, but the surrounding businesses. It’s beyond whether we allow it or not. The commissioners have already said that we allow it,” Lyonnais said.

The conditions, which must be “reasonable,” will ultimately be approved by a hearings examiner, under contract with the county. Lyonnais said that when the commissioners voted to allow marijuana in the county they decided to leave the decision with an examiner, rather than expose staff to that critical decision, knowing it would be hotly debated.

“There is no choice to do this administratively, in house. The examiner, who is usually a well-versed land-

WAITSBURG ADDRESSES METER TAMPERING

Future installation of new meters city-wide should mitigate problems

By Dena Wood | THE TIMES

WAITSBURG – How to deal with a reported increase in water meter tampering became a topic of discussion at the March 15 city council meeting. The council is hopeful that the problem can be mitigated when the meters are replaced in the future.

In his monthly update, City Manager Randy Hinchliffe, said that the city was working on the water meter replacement project and has met with a vendor who provided a cost estimate for replacement and installation of the city’s water meters in excess of $300,000.

Last October, Hinchliffe told the council that new state regulations allow cities two years to formulate a plan on how to remove all lead from their water system. They then have 15 years to complete the removal process. In Waitsburg, the lead is in the meters themselves.

Hinchliffe went on to say that the city has seen an increase in meter tampering and water theft.

In one incident an individual placed an RV on a lot, tunneled over to an adjacent lot, and hooked his RV up to their faucet. Once the situation was discovered, the city turned the water off. When they turned it back on, the individual hooked up again until the city found out and locked the faucet. The RV owner then cut the lock off and hooked up again, Hinchliffe said.

In another instance, an individual asked a public works employee what the penalty was for getting into his own box, which is city property. When he learned that there was none, he purchased his own valve wrench to turn the water on and off, rather than allowing a public works employee to do so, as requested

PIONEER PORTRAITS

Ten Years Ago April 26, 2007

When the movie "Oh Brother, Where Art Thou?" was released in 2000, the country witnessed a revival in true American music-bluegrass. It also inspired a group of young people from Waitsburg to learn to play that type of music. Today, those young people have established their own bluegrass band: The Blue Mountain Troublemakers. . . Chris Carpenter, Zach Beasley, Nick Carpenter, Austin Beasley, John Hockersmith, and Will Garcia make up the band, which will leave October 3 for Sasayama.

The April, 2007 issue of Wheat Life, the official publication of the Washington Association of Wheat Growers, contains a familiar face on page 8. Beneath a pie chart showing that agriculture is expected to be 1% of the 2008 U.S. discretionary budget request, is a photo of our fair city, Waitsburg, surrounded by golden bands of grain, set off by the rich brown summerfall, awaiting harvest.

She has taught a generation and their children to cook. Now Waitsburg home economics teacher Donnie Henderson is taking her turn at the dessert table. On June 2, Henderson announced last week, she will retire from full-time teaching in the Waitsburg School District after a 25-year career.

A Waitsburg resident who collects newspapers and other recyclables has told the City Council it would be too costly for him to use the old bunkhouse on the city land at the former Green Giant Co. cannery. Jack Cyr has said liability insurance on the property would cost about $700 a year. Councilman Don Wills said Cyr told him it was "too much to pay for a hobby." Cyr has been performing the public service of picking up discards for recycling in town.

Fifty Years Ago April 20, 1967

Lewis D. Neace, son of Mr. and Mrs. Denney Neace was this week named as valedictorian of the class of 1967 of Waitsburg High School. He has maintained a grade point average of 3.9 through four years of study. Named to the salutatorian position was Karen Hansen, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jim Hansen. She has a GPA of 3.71.

Al Watson of Waitsburg has been appointed by the Commissioners of Walla Walla County to serve as acting Justice of the Peace for Walla Walla County to take the place of Barbara White Lesmeister, who resigned the position. Watson will also serve the City of Waitsburg as a Police Judge.

Lee Mantz, Jr. was a member of a tremendous survey crew that spent last Saturday morning making a survey of Preston Park in Waitsburg. Their mission: To establish a suitable spot for equipment is being donated and installed by the Waitsburg Lions Club.

Don't forget for a moment that the new cow ordinance goes into effect on Sunday, May 1, and that after that date you cannot allow your cow to roam at her own sweet will within the city limits any time, day or night.

Last Sunday night a body of masked men in Dayton made a visit to all the Chinese houses of that city and told the heather he must go and that at once. The mob did not contain the better element of society. A mob never does.

How does alcohol affect your body?

At first, alcohol causes people to feel upbeat and excited. But this is temporary and they shouldn't be fooled. If drinking continues, the effects on the body—and the potential risks—multiply. Here's what can happen:

- Inhibitions and memory: People may say and do things that they will regret later, or possibly not remember at all. Inhibitions are lost - leading to poor decision making.
- Decision-making skills: When they drink, individuals are more likely to be impulsive. They may be at greater risk for having an alcohol-related traffic crash, getting into fights, or making unwise decisions about sex.
- Coordination and physical control: When drinking leads to loss of balance, slurred speech, and blurred vision, even normal activities can become more dangerous.
- Death: Drinking too much alcohol can also lead to death. If people drink too much, they will eventually get sleepy and pass out. Reflexes like gagging and breathing can be suppressed. That means they could vomit and choke, or stop breathing completely.

No level of drinking is safe or legal for anyone under age 21. Help our youth grow to be healthy, happy, and successful adults - PLEASE DON'T PROVIDE ALCOHOL TO MINORS

People don't like paying taxes. That's because they don't understand them.

By Marjorie E. Kornhauser, Special to The Washington Post

For the past few years, I've sat in New Orleans high school classrooms watching students debate the fairest way for government to raise revenue. They role-play - first as management consultants advising legislators; then as lawmakers, weighing what to tax: property vs. sales vs. income. Are there limits on what or who can be taxed? Is a flat tax or a progressive rate structure fairer? Sometimes their discussions are heated.

These teenagers, however, have an edge that many adults don't: basic tax literacy. Guided by Tulane law students, the high schoolers explore different philosophies and methods of taxation through TaxJazz, a program I began in 2013. Students who take the week-long course study issues of fairness and technical matters such as bases and rate structures. They examine key concepts such as the difference between marginal rates (the percentage of tax paid on the last dollar of income) and effective rates (the average percentage of tax paid). They learn that narrower tax bases, such as sales tax, need higher rates than broader bases, such as income taxes, to raise equivalent amounts of revenue. They discover that changing the method of taxation increases how much some taxpayers owe and decreases that amount for others.

If more people knew what these students know, we'd have a far more reasonable tax debate and better tax laws.

As Tax Day approaches (April 18 this year), many of us bemoan our tax bills coming due. Why is taxation such a charged issue? Many Americans are fuzzy on who and what are taxed and the reasons we pay taxes at all. A year ago, 57 percent of Americans polled told Gallup they pay "too much" in federal income taxes; note, though, that 45 percent of Americans pay no federal income taxes at all. We fight about taxes because we disagree about what is fair and what government should do. If we knew more, we'd still have disagreements, but at least our discussions would be more rational and produce more coherent policies. Tax law can be

What the Freedom Caucus Stands For

By George Will

With a mellifluous name suggesting bucolic tranquility, Rep. Mark Meadows, a North Carolina Republican, is an unlikely object of the caterwauling recently directed at him and the House Freedom Caucus he leads. The vituperation was occasioned by the HFC's role rescuing Republicans from embracing an unpopular first draft of legislation to replace Obamacare.

A decisive blow against the bill was struck by the quintessential Republican moderate, New Jersey's Rodney Frelinghuysen, chairman of the Appropriations Committee whose family has included a member of the Continental Congress, four U.S. senators and, in 1844, a vice presidential nominee: "Hurrah! Hurrah! The country's risin', for Henry Clay and Frelinghuysen."

Although just a little over two years old, the HFC signals a revival of congressional resistance to the dangerous waxing of executive power under presidents of both parties. The HFC is a rarity, a heartening political development: People giving priority to their legislative craft and institution rather than to a president of their party barking at them.

The HFC's 30 members, and six others informally affiliated, are barely 8 percent of the House, but their cohesion is a force multiplier. The cohesion comes, Meadows says, from its members being "here for a purpose." And, he adds dryly, from the fact that, for many, "This is not the best job they've ever had." Among the never more than 537 people who are in Washington because they won elections, none are more threatening to tranquility than the few who are not desperate to be here. They do not respond to the usual incentives for maintaining discipline.

The HFC has rules, bylaws and weekly meetings, often featuring experts on particular issues. HFC members have, Meadows believes, "a competitive advantage" in the House because they hone their arguments together in what Meadows calls "the best debating club on Capitol Hill." If 80 percent of the HFC agree on an issue, it votes as a bloc, although members can receive two exemptions per Congress.

Meadows was contented as a businessman for whom politics was an avocation. About 30 years ago, he was the only person to attend a precinct meeting, thereby becoming the precinct's chair. He rose in Republican ranks until redistricting after the 2010 census produced a congenial district, which he won in 2012.

In December 2014, he and a few others were disgusted by what was called "cromnibus." This testimony to Congress' normal dysfunction was a combination of a continuing resolution to keep the government running and an omnibus spending bill. Cromnibus was another of those "this is a binary choice, so you have no choice" moments. He and eight other conservatives chose to form a group of kindred spirits.

Meadows came to the nation's attention by doing something eccentric: He read the House rules. Therein he learned about a "motion to vacate the chair." Such a motion requires a vote on the Speaker. John Boehner resigned as speaker and from the House rather than rely on Democratic votes to make up for lost votes from the HFC, whose members had felt the sting of his disapproval of their insufficient docility.

In last month's dispute about Speaker Paul Ryan's health care bill, the president thought it was wise to tweet a demand that the HFC "get on the team." And for Steve Bannon to summon HFC members to reportedly be instructed by him that "this is not a discussion. This is not a debate. You have no choice but to vote for this bill." And for the White House director of social media -- your tax dollars at work -- to tweet that an HFC member, Michigan's Justin Amash, "is a big liability" who should be defeated in a primary.

The 32nd president, a somewhat more accomplished politician than the 45th, tried to purge some members of his party's congressional caucus. Franklin Roosevelt became angry when some conservative Southern Democrats helped to defeat his plan to break the Supreme Court to his saddle by enlarging it and filling the new seats with compliant liberals. He recruited and supported primary opponents against the offending Democrats.

All survived. One of them, Georgia's Sen. Walter George, told that FDR was "his own worst enemy," replied: "Not as long as I'm alive." Republicans gained eight Senate seats in 1938 and their House ranks almost doubled, from 88 to 169. FDR never again had a liberal legislating majority in Congress. Today's president should have second, or perhaps first, thoughts about a purge.

Republicans in a Funk

By Jennifer Rubin, The Washington Post

The close special election in the Kansas 4th congressional district, which should have been a slam dunk for Republicans, and wariness about next week's special election in Georgia's 6th congressional district reflect Republicans' lack of enthusiasm after less than three months of the Trump presidency. Anecdotal evidence indicates nerves are frayed and the mood glum. ("Republicans have grown fearful that these voters are recoiling from what they see as lamentable conditions in Washington: a government entirely in Republican hands that has failed to deliver on fundamental goals like overhauling the health care system, The New York Times recently reported. "Early missteps by President Trump and congressional leaders have weighed heavily on voters from the party's more affluent wing, anchored in right-of-center suburbs around major cities in the South and Midwest. Never beloved in these precincts, Mr. Trump appears to be struggling to maintain support from certain voters who backed him last year mainly as a way of defeating Hillary Clinton.")

A combination of frustration over lack of legislative accomplishments, dismay at the three-ring personnel circus at the White House, disquieting evidence of synchronization if not outright collaboration with Russian election meddling, Trump's obnoxious and angry demeanor and the absence of a Democratic bogeywoman to whom to compare Trump make it hard for Republicans, even in the aftermath of Justice Neil Gorsuch's confirmation, to bask in the glory of one-party government.

Party operatives and leaders must cringe when they hear the Senate majority leader acknowledge that Trump is trying to learn on the job ("I think President Trump is learning the job and some of the things that were said during the campaign I think he now knows that's simply not the way things ought to be," said Sen. Mitch McConnell, R-Ky. When exactly will he be up to speed?

Even traditionally popular GOP policies don't seem to excite the party faithful. A PRRI poll shows, "More than seven in ten Americans favor (31 percent) or strongly favor (41 percent) increasing the tax rate on those earning more than $250,000 a year, while less than three in ten oppose (19 percent) or strongly oppose (8 percent) the measure. A move to raise taxes on the rich sees bipartisan support, even among Republicans. Majorities of Democrats (83 percent), independents (73 percent), and Republicans (58 percent) express support." That may mean a decided lack of GOP enthusiasm for a supply-side kind of tax plan that delivers disproportionate cuts to the rich.

In addition, Republicans have shown little inclination to defend Trump's financial secrecy. The Hill reports, "Sixty-four percent of Republicans think that President Trump should publicly release his tax returns, according to a survey conducted by Global Strategy Group." Trump doesn't help himself by running up gigantic travel expenses trooping back and forth to Mar-A-Lago and refusing to eliminate conflicts of interest, including apparent violations of the emoluments clause.

Trump's dash toward the political mainstream, including Wednesday's relatively "normal" press conference with the NATO secretary general, may indicate some recognition that Trump's whirlwind has exhausted rather than cheered dependable Republicans. The chattering class remains obsessed with Trump's hold on white, working-class voters, but without the GOP regulars, who donate, walk precincts and vote in off-year elections, the Republican Party is in deep trouble. We've seen how one Republican after another has faced an angry horde of voters at town halls. Without turnout and enthusiasm to match those antagonists, middle-of-the-road Republicans in upscale and middle-class suburbs could be swept from office. Should the voters who in past years cast votes for Bush 43, Sen. John McCain, R-Ariz., and Mitt Romney -- and then took a leap of faith on Trump -- decide they've made a terrible miscalculation, Democrats will have a decent shot at taking back at least the House.

LETTER

ASSESSMENT OF PRESENT EVIDENCE IS CRUCIAL TO FUTURE

Dear Editor,

Waitsburg citizens, across the board, are concerned about the future of the city. Marty Dunn summed up the purpose of the mayor and city council when he told the Times, "The biggest challenge and needs currently facing the city is maintaining our infrastructure." I particularly enjoyed his humorous conclusion, when he added, "Without having to raise the taxes and fees..." That's funny; without raising taxes and fees. What a kiddier that Marty is.

Humor aside, the future revolves around the reality of the present. Only those persons attuned to the present will rationally adapt to the future. Regardless, the best thing for Waitsburg is happening right now, before our very eyes; change.

When attending a funeral service, discussions will usually revolve around the past life and will typically elicit fond memories of the way things use to be. After the service and the condolences have been exchanged, we walk out of that wonderful past, into the air of the present; the air of change.

Most people do not necessarily want change; they prefer things the way they are. As an example, the Nestles Corporation expressed an interest in possibly developing a water bottling facility in Waitsburg. Alas, it was not to be. However, inquiring minds would like to know why it didn't happen. It is said, if you expect a good answer, you have to ask the right question.

Questions to those opposed to Nestles: What did you find so offensive about the proposal from Nestles to the city? Bad question: You did not wait to hear from Nestles before emotionally opposing the very idea of a bottling plant or even if Nestles wanted to invest in Waitsburg.

A better question: To all who opposed all things Nestles, Will you, in the future, continue to make decisions for the future of City of Waitsburg, based solely on your emotions and without the benefit of all the evidence?

I'm 100% positive that anyone on trial for their life would demand that a jury hear all the evidence before reaching a verdict. Citizens of Waitsburg should expect nothing less from their city council; that they hear all the evidence before reaching a verdict.

A proper assessment of the present evidence is as crucial to the future as oxygen is to life. As I began, all citizens are concerned. Come, let us reason together.

complex, but if high school students can get a handle on the basics, so can the adults who choose the politicians who implement it.

Is a flat or a progressive tax fairer? It depends on your sense of justice -- but before you can even answer that question, you need to know how each mechanism works. So students learn that the relative tax burden on individuals depends on which tax base is used. Sales taxes place a higher burden on lower-income people because lower income taxpayers generally spend a greater percentage of their income than higher income taxpayers do. A flat income tax is easy to understand: You pay a certain percentage of your income, no matter how much you make. With a progressive income tax, escalating rates apply as income increases. For example, if a married couple had $52,000 of taxable income in 2016, the return they file this year will show a tax liability of $6,872.50 (assuming no tax credits). They will pay 10 percent on their first $18,550 and 15 percent on the rest of their taxable income. Their marginal rate is 15 percent, but their effective, or average, tax rate is 13.2 percent.

Real-world discussions often occur in a tax-ignorant universe. Many people -- including some politicians -- incorrectly say that the IRS, not Congress, writes federal tax laws. They say that some taxation is needed to pay for the government but that it should be lower and "fairer." An astonishing number don't realize that they already get tax breaks for many things they want, such as education, housing and child care. Often they state that we should lower the income tax rate to a number that is actually higher than the current top rate. Some have no idea what rate they pay or whether they've benefited from a tax cut.

Unfamiliarity with tax basics is harmful. At the individual level, people may pay more than necessary when they don't know about deductions and credits that can reduce their burden. At the local, state and national levels, lack of tax knowledge hampers the promulgation of rational laws that could help spur the economy and lead to prudent budgets. A tax-literate electorate could demand that politicians provide coherent tax policy options.

To be tax literate, citizens should understand that taxes are not just numbers and abstract principles, and they are not arbitrary. "Taxation is an art and a technique as well as science," said Harold M. Groves, an economics professor who was a Wisconsin state legislator in the 1930s, "and it always needs to be judged against the conditions of time and place."

How can more Americans become tax knowledgeable? The first step, of course, is to include more discussion of taxes in schools -- not just in high school and college, but even elementary school. This is no less important than the financial-literacy programs many schools now incorporate into their curriculums.

Without tax knowledge, voters enable politicians who spout inflammatory, empty rhetoric and perpetuate counterproductive, unfair tax policies. Democracies need informed voters to function properly. The cost of tax ignorance is too high.

use attorney will look at the relevance of the debates and what has been previously allowed or not allowed," Lyonna said.

When asked if the examiner could refuse the permit altogether, Lyonna said, "They had better be able to defend that in court. If the applicant has met all the conditions for health, safety, welfare, lighting, etc., we can't arbitrarily deny a permit."

The planning commission will meet on April 24 to work more on the conditions, and Lyonna said he expects them to set a hearing date that night.

"We would like to have the whole thing done by June," he said.

Lyonna said residents have expressed concerns about marijuana being a gateway drug and how to keep it out of the hands of school children. The site is located next to a church and church members have requested that store hours be limited to those that don't coincide with church functions.

Lyonna said he was recently approached with a strong concern about the nature of the sign and said people don't want to see something that is a joke or tasteless.

"I may suggest that the planning staff be allowed to review the sign to make sure it is respectful to the surrounding businesses. The applicant has been very cordial and appealing. I think she will respect what we want," he said.

Lyonna said the commission has approached the Department of Transportation about concerns, since the site is located along Highway 12, but has not heard back yet. He said the DOT will research traffic patterns, how many additional trips the store may generate, and congestion issues.

"They're on it and guarantee that they'll have the information to us by the 24th," he said.

Lyonna said security is also an issue, and the planning staff is working hand-in-hand with the Sheriff's Office.

"Some conditions are no-brainers, such as the number of parking spaces and ADA requirements. Others, such as paving, need to be justified. Is it to require the store owner to spend money, or to catch water that is running somewhere? There is no pavement on either side . . . those are valid concerns to be discussed. I have to not be concerned with what product they're selling but my role is to be fair to both the community and the applicant," Lyonna said.

"This has been a good exercise in planning that the community has to go through. Things like this make us better planners. Maybe people will pay more attention in the future -- not that they didn't -- when the commissioners are making these tough decisions," Lyonna said.

Monica Mitchell is Dayton's new After School Program/Drug Free Grant Coordinator

After School Program gets new head

By Michele Smith | THE TIMES

DAYTON--Monica Mitchell is the new Dayton School District After School Program/Drug-Free Grant Coordinator. She is replacing Shakira Bye, who has taken a job with the Dayton Memorial Library.

Mitchelle is originally from the small farming community of Condon, Ore., where she was heavily involved in 4-H Youth activities, "my entire life." In 2014 she graduated from Montana State University with a BS in animal science and a minor in agriculture economics. She started her career as a 4-H Youth Director with OSU.

Mitchelle moved to Dayton in September 2016, and was working at Umpqua Bank before accepting the new job.

"I enjoyed finance and numbers. It just wasn't what I wanted to do," Mitchell said about working at the bank.

Mitchelle thought her experience teaching SNAP education would lend itself to teaching sessions in cooking, nutrition and gardening in the after school program, she said.

"Peggy (Guitierrez) told me they were looking for an ASP coordinator," Mitchell said. She applied and was accepted and began working on March 27, coordinating the 20 students who are currently registered in the ASP.

So far, the students have spent one day a week touring historic downtown Dayton. They are also learning about making great relationships in Miki Fulbright's Kid Power class, and about growing healthy habits with Leslie Sweetwood, Mitchell said.

Mitchelle has also been helping 15 middle and high school students in the Students Helping Each Other (SHEO) Club, get ready for the Kindness Counts Conference on April 20, the Spring Forum at Great Wolf Lodge in Montana in May, and a week-long retreat this summer. "They have worked so hard," Mitchell said about the SHEO student efforts.

Mitchelle talked about her "traveling hobby." She has traveled extensively, spending three months in the Young Farmers 4-H exchange program in England and Greece, six months in Ireland, Scotland, and Wales, with two-and-a-half week jaunt to New Zealand, and to Laos and Thailand, with her family in 2015.

with her fiancée, Randy Chapman.

Settled may be too loose a term, though. "I do a lot of hiking. I learned to snowmobile this winter," Mitchell said. She also has been doing some razor dirt bike racing.

"I really enjoy it now," she said. "I think it's a great little community," Mitchell said about Dayton, and its environs.

Dayton Street Project On Track for This Summer

City Council approved agreements for S. First St. and W. Main Street Projects

By Michele Smith
THE TIMES

DAYTON—Action was taken at last week's city council meeting to award the South First Street Reconstruction Contract. The contract was awarded to the lowest responsive bidder, which was POW Contracting, of Pasco, for an amount not to exceed $1,167,431.32.

The project start date is tentatively set for June 1, according to Mayor Craig George.

The city council also authorized the transportation improvement board supplement consultant agreement for the construction phase of the South First Street Reconstruction Project with Anderson/Perry & Associates, for an amount not to exceed $85,000.

The TIB supplement consultant agreement for the construction phase of the West Main Street sidewalk project, with Anderson/Perry & Associates, for an amount not to exceed $24,000, was also approved by the city council. The project is going out to bid this week, according to Mayor George.

George said the city has applied for funds through the TIB that could be used for repairs on Washington Street, which has sustained major damage due to inclement weather, and the city is currently going through the process with FEMA for help with that.

The council also took action to affirm the Department of Ecology's approval of the Shoreline Master Plan, with one change.

Planning Director Karen Scherer said the setback in urban conservancy zones will be changed from 150 feet to 125 feet, allowing the property owners an additional 25 feet.

LIGHTING UPGRADE WILL SAVE WAITSBURG SCHOOLS THOUSANDS

PACIFIC POWER INCENTIVE MAY COVER MAJORITY OF COST TO REPLACE PRESTON HALL LIGHTING

By Dena Wood | THE TIMES

WAITSBURG – At their March meeting the Waitsburg School Board approved a lighting upgrade purchase in Preston Hall that will save the district thousands of dollars each year. An energy incentive kick-back from Pacific Power will allow the district to recoup the investment in its first year, alone.

In January, District Facilities, Transportation, and Maintenance Supervisor Colter Mohney, approached the board about checking into options for replacing the deteriorating lighting in Preston Hall. Mohney said the lights are expensive to fix and that the fixes don't last. He said that he had learned that The Whitman in Walla Walla did a large lighting upgrade and received an efficiency kickback from Pacific Power & Light to cover the materials.

Mohney said the old-style fixtures include ballasts and bulbs which plug into a plastic piece that deteriorates over time. He said the plastic piece can no longer be purchased. He also said some of the ballasts in the high school are no longer manufactured and there is no replacement, forcing the crew to come up alternative fixes.

Mohney demonstrated a proposed fix that uses LED lights, costs $105 for a "full fix" of ballasts and three bulbs, and can be completed quickly. He said the smaller, one-bulb lights cost $65 to upgrade. He said the upgraded fixtures are brighter, use three times less energy, and last 20-30 times longer than the current bulbs and ballasts.

Mohney offered to check with Pacific Power to see what kind of rebate, based on energy savings, would be available if the district upgraded the entire building, rather than upgrading on an as-needed basis as they had been doing. He said the cost to purchase all the materials would be roughly $8,000 for 160 fixtures.

Mohney returned to the March 8 board meeting with two quotes. A full upgrade of fixtures, both inside and outside Preston Hall, would run $9,122 for materials. The PP&L incentive would be $5958, leaving $3164 to the district. An upgrade without replacing the gym and exit lights would be $6,835 for materials, with an incentive of $4315, leaving a balance of $2520 for the district to cover.

Mohney said that, looking at rough numbers, the full upgrade would save the district roughly $3,000 annually in energy savings.

The board unanimously approved the full-building upgrade and Mohney said the project should be able to be completed during summer vacation.

by the city. One person repeatedly turns their water back on after it has been turned off by the city. Hinchliffe said that because the box is older, there is no lock for it and the city would be forced to move the box or fill it with dirt in order to prevent it from being turned back on by the resident.

He said there was one instance where an individual kept cutting off locks until the city was forced to remove the meter.

"There's currently no penalty or deterrent for tampering with the boxes, and we'd like some guidance on how to proceed. Are you interested in imposing a penalty or fine for being in the boxes without permission? Right now, it's basically, 'you break it, you fix it,'" Hinchliffe said.

Hinchliffe said the meters are all different and many are old; some require a half turn, while others require a full or quarter turn. It would be easy for someone to accidentally turn a valve too far and break it. He said one irrigation company cut from the wrong side of the meter box and 10 homes were out of water for several hours while the city made repairs.

Councilman KC Kuykendall said it is important to deal with criminal activity, or theft of services, differently from homeowners turning their own valves on and off.

"I can't, for the life of me, see why we would ever want a policy that says a homeowner can't walk out to his yard to shut off his main so he could do plumbing repair. I don't think that's a good use of city employee time to do routine city water main turn-ons and shutoffs. If there's a problem with someone that's vandalizing it then that's destruction of property and should be dealt with differently," he said.

Hinchliffe said the concern is residents breaking the valves so that a five-minute turn-off is turned into a several-hour repair.

"If you don't know which meter you're dealing with, how many turns it takes, or how long it's been since it's been exercised, you can break them real easy. That's our big fear. We don't want to spend hours and charge a homeowner $400-$500 because they didn't want to wait five minutes for someone to come by and turn it off," Hinchliffe said.

Mayor Marty Dunn asked if shutoff valves could be placed on the landowners side of the meters, so that a property owner could shut it off without affecting the meter, when the new meters are installed.

"Perhaps we can offer emergency shutoff valves at a small cost to the homeowner," he said.

Hinchliffe agreed with the idea and said the city encourages homeowners to put shutoffs in their own homes, but many have older homes that don't have them, or they just may not know where they are.

Dunn said the council would "put their heads together" and continue to look into the problem.

Switchgrass to Sasayama

SUNDAY CONCERT WILL RAISE FUNDS FOR JAPAN TRIP

By Dena Wood THE TIMES

WAITSBURG – Local youth bluegrass band Switchgrass Delta will join with other local talent in a fundraising concert at the Plaza Theater in Waitsburg on Sun., April 23 at 4 p.m. Funds from the concert will help pay for the band's upcoming trip to Sasayama Japan in October.

Switchgrass Delta is part of the Touchet Valley Acoustic Music Project (TVAMP). Band members include: Emma Philbrook on mandolin, Chris Philbrook on banjo, Robert Walsh on standup bass, and Kaleb Kuykendall on fiddle.

The band has performed at gigs and fundraisers all over the Touchet Valley, including the Seneca Food Bank Benefit, the Dayton and Walla Walla Relay for Life events, the Frenchtown Rendezvous, the Columbia County Fair, Waitsburg Celebration Days, and many more.

The musicians will represent Walla Walla as the cultural exchange group for the 45th anniversary of the Sasayama-Walla Walla Sister City Exchange Program. Band members recently played host to several Japanese students who visited Waitsburg and Walla Walla.

While in Japan, the band members will stay with host families as they tour the country and learn Japanese culture. The band will play music at local schools and events in Sasayama during their two-week visit, from Oct. 12-24.

The trip is becoming a tradition as, 10 years ago, another Waitsburg youth bluegrass band, The Blue Mountain Troublemakers, traveled to Sasayama for the 35th anniversary celebration. The Troublemak-

"It's an amazing learning experience. I can't think of any other travel that would be as eye-opening as some of the stuff that went on there," Hockersmith said.

The Kuykendall Kids and the Jasper Mountain Band will also perform at Sunday's concert. The Jasper Mountain Band is made up of Jimmye Turner and Glenn Morrison from the Rye-grass Stringband, John Hockersmith from The Blue Mountain Troublemakers, and Kate Hockersmith.

"We've been playing together forever as friends, and about a month as a band!" Kate Hockersmith said.

WITH HOT BATS AND STRONG PITCHING, DAYTON OUTSCORES OPPONENTS 100-2 OVER FOUR GAMES

By Andie Holmberg | THE TIMES

DAYTON – In two double-headers over the past week, The Dayton softball team came away with four wins, allowing only two runs.

Dayton hosted the Mabton Vikings on April 10 and shut them out twice, winning 19-0 and 23-0. Both games were ended after five innings due to the 10-run rule.

In the first game Dayton had the hot bats, scoring 13 runs in the second inning as they went on to dominate. Heidi Dobbs led the Bulldogs in RBI's with four on two hits. Megan Robins and Kaleigh White each had two hits including a double each.

In game two, the Bulldogs again punished the Vikings, scoring all 23 runs in the third and fourth innings.

The pitching of Robins and Savannah McFarland was solid over the two games, with Dayton allowing just one hit and 22 strikeouts. The Lady Bulldogs played cleanly and had no errors on the day. They scored 23 runs on 16 hits.

Robins and White both hit for doubles and Scully Castorena smacked a triple. Robins had four RBI's on two hits, and Castorena racked up three RBI's on two hits. Kira Boggs had three hits.

"We had solid pitching from both Megan and Savannah, with no miscues behind them on defense," said Dayton Assistant Coach Desirae Jones. "This was a good showing for our girls; it helped show them what they are capable of."

Lady Cards Fall to Colton Three Times

By Andie Holmberg | THE TIMES

WAITSBURG – The Waitsburg softball team played a tough Colton team three times last week, and dropped all three games.

On April 11, the Lady Cardinals traveled to Colton and were defeated 13-3. The Cards struggled to find their offense coming off spring break, putting up just three hits in the game.

On Saturday, Waitsburg hosted Colton in a double-header. In the first game, Waitsburg hit the ball well, putting up 11 hits. Ariel Sandau led the way with three hits, followed by Tayler Jones, Timber Frohreich and Chloe Pearson with a pair each.

The Cards led through the third inning, but defensive errors in the fourth and sixth innings allowed Colton seven unearned runs to overcome the Cards 16-9. Both errors were made trying to catch runners off base.

Waitsburg was also able to turn two double plays in the first game, and Devon Harshman gave her team a much-needed homerun.

"It's unfortunate, because the girls were playing really well and showing just how competitive they can be," said Waitsburg Coach Angie Potts. "The errors were aggressive mistakes trying to catch runners off base. We want the girls making aggressive plays and taking chances, so we'll keep working with them on those things, to cut down on the errors."

In the second game, Waitsburg's bats went cold, with Karlie Matthews getting the Cardinal's sole hit. Colton continued to dominate the Cards with 20 runs on 12 hits and no errors.

Adams, Callas Run in Elite Pasco Invite

WAITSBURG TRACK ATHLETES SET 38 PR'S IN MULTIPLE MEETS LAST WEEK

By Andie Holmberg | THE TIMES

WAITSBURG - The Waitsburg track team kept their coaches very busy this last week, as they participated in two regular meets and a special invitational meet. The team competed at Colfax Tuesday and Cheney Saturday. Landon Callas and Emily Adams also competed Saturday at the Pasco Invitational.

At Colfax, 1B and 2B schools squared off, with Waitsburg athletes posting 22 personal records and three season records.

For the boys, Landon Callas led the way winning the 110m and 300m hurdles, and scoring a personal best time of 11.34 in the 100 meters to place fourth. Also on the boy's side, sophomore Daltin Lambert had two PR's – in the 800 and 3200 meter races – and recorded a season high in the javelin.

For the girls, Emily Adams continued to dominate with a season record of 12:01.77 to win the 3200 meters. She also got a win in the triple jump with 32-11.50. Adams placed second in the 800 meters.

Kirsten Miller had two personal bests, with a fourth-place finish in the 300-meter hurdles, coming in at 54.00. Miller also recorded a time of 30.37 in the 200 meter.

Leena Baker and Clarissa Espana also had two PR's each at the Colfax meet.

On Saturday, the Waitsburg track team split between the Van Kuren invite in Cheney and the Pasco Invitational.

In Pasco, Adams ran a 2:24.15 800-meter race, for a season record, placing eighth. Adams also scored a season best in the 1600 meters, to place ninth, with a time of 5:26.63.

Callas placed fourth in the 300-meter hurdles at 39.89, and was just out of the finals with a 12th-place finish in the preliminaries for the 110 hurdles, at 15.96.

In Cheney on Saturday, the Waitsburg Team set 14 more personal records and four season's best records.

For the boys, TJ Morrison and Robert Walsh both set new PRs in the 100 and 200. Dalton Lambert bested his PR from Tuesday, throwing the javelin 39 feet farther, at 119 feet. Andre Potts scored a PR in the long jump, with a leap of 17-04.50. He also had a season record in the triple jump at 35-11.25.

On the girl's side, Clarissa Espana set a new PR, shaving off nearly seven tenths of a second from her time Tuesday in the 200 meters.

The Van Kuren Invitational included 1,100 athletes from all over Washington state.

DAYTON RUNNERS SHINE IN CHENEY

Hayden Wooldridge recorded 2 hurdles PRs at Saturday meet

By Andie Holmberg | THE TIMES

CHENEY – With 1,100 athletes from throughout the state, Dayton's track and field team faced a lot of great competition on Saturday at the Van Kuren Invitational here.

Hayden Wooldridge came out with personal record times in both hurdle events, placing sixth in the 110-meter hurdles, in a field of 39, with a time of 16.90. Wooldridge crossed the line at 46.32 in the 300 hurdles, placing 14th.

Chris Andrews also scored a PR in the 100-meter dash, at 12.17, taking off half a second from his previous best time. Teammate Wyatt Johnson came in with a new personal record in the 1600, dropping below the 6-minute mark for the first time, at 5:49.49.

"Hayden ran the smoothest 110 Hurdle race I've seen for him, and it showed in his time," said Dayton Coach Dan Nechodom. "He's also developing better endurance, which showed in the 300 hurdles. Chris Andrews had a very nice start and acceleration holding form and pace for a 0.5-second PR (reduction) in the 100. Wyatt Johnson hit the gas in the 1600, dropping nicely below six minutes for the first time."

For the girls, Aliyah Picarella and Hazel Tu each came in with new personal records in the 100 meters, coming across the line at 14.67 and 15.54 respectively.

TEENY MCMUNN: MY RECIPE BOX

Granola

I hadn't thought about granola for a very long time, until my daughter-in-law mentioned she had it and how good it was. I asked her to share the recipe, and I had remembered I had seen my old granola recipe not too long ago.

I must have been about her age when I started making it. There are many variations you can make, according to your taste. I will share her recipe and the one I have had for 40 years. They change only in the amounts of oil and sugar—well, I guess in the other ingredients also.

Granola - from Alma

- 5 cups oats
- ½ c. ground flax seed (or quinoa-cooked?)
- 1 ½ c. shredded coconut
- ¾ c. maple syrup
- ½ c. olive/canola/your choice of oil
- ½ c. brown sugar or honey
- ½ c. -1 c. chopped raw almonds
- 1 t. vanilla
- ½ tsp cinnamon

Preheat oven to 300. Mix ingredients well. Spread onto 2 cookie sheets, each in a single layer. Bake, stirring every 10-15 minutes for about 40 minutes. Add dried fruit, like raisins, after it is out of the oven.

Granola-old recipe

- 6 c. oats
- 1 c. brown sugar
- ¾ c. wheat germ
- ½ c. coconut
- ¼ c. sesame seeds
- 1 c. nuts
- 1 c. salad oil
- ½ c. honey
- 3 tsp vanilla

Heat oats in a 9 x 13 pan at 350 degrees for 10 minutes. Remove. Mix all ingredients and put on 2 baking sheets. Bake for 35 minutes. Add dried fruit.

MY NOTES: As you can see, they are very similar. I like that the first one adds cinnamon. I thought it had quite a bit of sugar, until I found my recipe, which has more. If you like maple flavor, then add the maple syrup. The second one uses more vanilla. Using oats seems to be the base, but the rest is up to you.

Neither recipe says to refrigerate, but I'm sure putting it into an airtight container would be a good idea.

For those who eat yogurt, this would be a good topping. Use on top of fruit, cold cereal, or by itself.

Enjoy!
