DAYTON — Friends and supporters of Lisa Naylor found a creative way to bring attention to her need for a kidney donor. This thoughtful group of residents helped Naylor mount a large sign on Joanne and Bill Poolman's barn on eastbound Highway 12. The sign with Naylor's image gives contact information on how to become a living kidney donor.

Anyone interested in becoming a living kidney donor should contact Providence Sacred Heart Medical Center for more information. There is an online questionnaire to qualify possible candidates at <http://www.sacredheartlivingdonor.org>.

Donors can name a specific person to receive their kidney or be matched to someone who needs a transplant.

Living-donor organ transplants are associated with fewer complications than deceased-donor transplants and, overall, a longer survival rate of the donor organ, according to the Mayo Clinic.

National Kidney Registry provided the following information on the estimated timing for testing and surgery:

Screening & Testing

- 1 Confidential screening and medical history takes 45 mins.
- 2 Center will contact you within three days.
- 3 Complete standard workup over three days.
- 4 Getting cleared for donation takes one to four months.

Surgery & Recovery

- 1 Complete pre-op takes one day.
- 2 Completed surgery takes one to five hours.
- 3 Recover in hospital for one to four days.
- 4 Refrain from flying for one week.
- 5 Recover at home for one to four weeks.

*Most people can return to normal activities after two to four weeks. Donors with physically demanding jobs may need four to six weeks of recovery before returning to work. High-performance athletes will need six months to a year before returning to pre-donation performance levels.

Disney THE LITTLE MERMAID

DAYTON—This year's fall musical at the Liberty Theater is Disney's The Little Mermaid, a story familiar to many of us from two Disney movies and the older, original fairy tale.

It's the story of a young woman growing up, following her dream, and finding herself. It's also the story of a loving parent learning to understand who their child has become and letting them go into the world. And finally, it's the story of two families with different cultures learning to accept each other as their children get married.

This live performance is a spectacle of entertainment, with poignant and funny musical numbers, fantastical settings, and colorful imagery. First-time Liberty Theater directors Devi Greenup and Natalie Knudson and set and costume designer Erika Greenup bring a fresh approach and unique ideas to Liberty's stage. Theatergoers will be amazed at the artistry of this year's production.

The last performance will be December 2. More information is available on the theater's website, libertytheater.org/stage-productions.

CITY COUNCIL HELD PUBLIC BUDGET HEARING

By Justin Jaech | THE TIMES

DAYTON- Mayor Zac Weatherford called the Dayton City Council to order at 6:00 p.m., November 21, 2023. Mayor Zac Weatherford and council members Teeny McMunn, James Su'euga, Michael Smith, and Shannon McMillen were present in City Hall. Kyle Anderson participated using Zoom. Dain Nysoe and Laura Aukerman were not present.

Most of the action items for this evening's meeting had been discussed during earlier meetings. This special meeting was scheduled for the council to vote on resolutions in their final form so that the city administration can complete next year's budget before the first of January.

No one spoke during the first public comment period. The council approved the city's voucher warrants.

The mayor opened a public hearing on the preliminary 2024 budget. McMunn asked what changes had been made to the preliminary budget since the last meeting, but otherwise, there was no public comment, and the public hearing closed.

The council unanimously approved Ordinance 2008, which increases the utility tax on water and wastewater from 12% to 15%.

The council next considered and approved Resolution 1526, amending the master fee schedule for water usage rates, specifically excessive use over 800 sq. ft. per month. On average, a family of four in Dayton consumes about 2000 sq. ft. of water. The measure would increase that family's bill by $3.60.

The council approved the salary schedule for Dayton's non-contractual employees, which must be decided annually.

Following that, the council approved, without dissent, an order with Anderson Perry & Associates, Inc. to update the city's water system plan as required by the Washington State Department of Health.

The last action item for council consideration was an update on the interlocal agreement between Dayton and Columbia County for law enforcement services. The change modifies the ending date of when the Consumer Price Index (CPI) is measured. The amount the city pays the county is predicated on the CPI, and this change will allow budgets to be calculated more easily. The update was passed unanimously.

The mayor gave a progress report on the wastewater treatment project in his report. Also, he announced that a public hearing on the Conditional Use Permit is scheduled for 2:30 p.m. on December 12 in council chambers and on Zoom. Written comments from the public must be submitted by December 11, 2023.

The council meeting adjourned, and the next meeting is scheduled for Tuesday, December 5, 2023, at 6 p.m.

WAITSBURG FOODBANK ENRICHENED BY STUDENTS

THE TIMES

WAITSBURG — The foodbank at the Waitsburg Resource Center (WRC) was visited again this year by Stephanie Hinchliffe's first-grade class. The generous students donated 119 items weighing 95 pounds.

Ginger Brown, a member of the WRC, said, "They did a great job and surpassed this year's goal and deserve a shout-out for being rockstars."

Returning the favor, the WRC puts together goodie bags for the Waitsburg K-12 students each year. This is an annual tradition for the Resource Center, and one they are happy to do. The bag contains goodies, pencils, and more.

I ♥ New York

It's the coming and going that's a challenge

By Vicki Sternfeld-Rossi | THE TIMES

My father's family is the epitome of a blended family. The "blending" began around 1939, before the description "blended" became common. The "cliff notes" version of the blend: My father's parents had two children, my father and aunt. They were young when their mother died, and their father remarried; there was one son from that marriage. Later, their father died, and their step-mother remarried a widower with three sons.

All of this occurred long before my parents married. As youngsters, we all knew that we had a slew of aunts, uncles, and cousins. Not all of us knew that we weren't all "blood" relations, and those who did couldn't remember who was or wasn't. As the song goes, "We are family."

Last week, I made a quick trip to New York for an uncle's funeral. He seemed to be recovering from a recent surgery well, but unfortunately, complications arose, and he didn't make it.

My travel plans started in Walla Walla; after a brutal five-hour layover in Seattle, I changed to Jet-

Graphic by Lane Gwinn

Blue for a redeye flight. Alaska Airlines assured me that I could check my luggage through to JFK. What a relief, or so I thought!

A five-hour layover was not sufficient time to get my luggage from the Alaska Airlines terminal to Jet-Blue's, so I landed in New York with nothing except for what I had on my back.

I arrived at the hotel around 7:00 a.m. and met my brother for a quick coffee and bagel before heading to the only store open, Target, to buy clothes, toiletries, shoes – the works. I was confident that my luggage would arrive by late afternoon since there were several flights it could have been on. But, no – Jet-Blue waited until the following night's redeye.

After the service and eulogies, we went to the graveside for the burial. Since most of us were without cars, my cousins arranged for a comfortable bus, and it was comforting to all be together. The ride began quietly, but typical of our family, my cousins stocked the bus with snacks, which relaxed us once they were opened. We shared phones to check out pictures of gardens, children, grandchildren, and my new Target wardrobe.

Saturday morning, I was still without anything other than the scant essentials from Target.

Undaunted, I spent a few hours strolling through the city. New York still has amazing excitement and energy, and autumn is spectacular. The trees in Central Park were resplendent in their fall colors, and the store windows were decorated to the hilt for the holidays.

The first stop was to be a walk along the New York Highline. Just my luck; it was closed for reseeding. Next, I headed uptown and strolled through the Guggenheim Museum, glancing at my phone every five minutes, waiting for confirmation of my luggage's arrival, but nothing.

This time, I raced to Macy's for more speed shopping. I bought a few necessities and cool shoes for the evening's additional funeral services and dinner at my cousin's home.

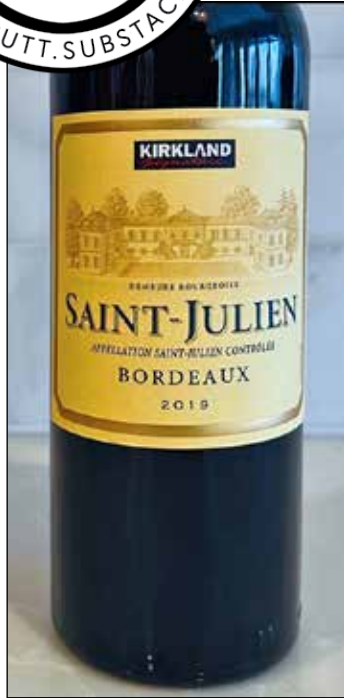

My luggage finally landed at the hotel Saturday night, and it was time to pack my new clothes and leave for the airport at 4:00 a.m. I arrived home safely that afternoon, and as expected, without my luggage. At least this time, I could shop in my closet.

Wine of the Week

Kirkland 2019/2020 Saint-Julien Bordeaux

By Paul Gregutt | THE TIMES

Left Bank Bordeaux under $20 is a tough bird to hunt. The Left Bank is home to the handful of great wineries you've probably heard of – Mouton, Lafite, Latour, etc. In all of Bordeaux, there are 9995 wineries that are not First Growths. And if you find any of their wines, how do you know if it's any good? Enter Costco's Kirkland brand. Not only are the Kirkland wines generally reliably good, but they occasionally turn up real gems. There's even a blog dedicated entirely to reviewing Kirkland wines. And that writer claims that this is one of the greatest values yet. The 2019 is three quarters Merlot and one quarter Cabernet. The 2020 may or may not be the same. But the holidays are the perfect time to take a flyer on a true Bordeaux. It will be just fine with any hearty roast, be it fowl, beef, or lamb. Will you be able to find this at your favorite Costco? I would bet you will, but if not, you'll find something worthwhile in a Kirkland red—about $19.

Poinsettia Guru

By Karen Huwe | THE TIMES

WAITSBURG — Her love of poinsettias shows when speaking about her years of enjoyment, nurturing them to bloom year after year.

Darita "Dari" Williams has had poinsettias over her 43 years of marriage. She is now the proud owner of a poinsettia tree that she acquired in 2019. With proper care, the plant's leaves turn from green to red to become a flower in November.

Most poinsettias enjoyed during the Christmas season become unattractive after two to three months and are often thrown away. Consider keeping your plants this season to see if they will bloom next year.

Williams suggests keeping the plant in a sunny window for at least six hours daily. Never allow the plant to get dry and wilt; the potting should stay evenly moist. Too much water will make the leaves turn yellow. With proper care, you can enjoy poinsettias year-round.

Dari is Waitsburg's "poinsettia guru," so don't hesitate to ask her for advice on caring for your plant.

CARDINALS BEAT THE BULLDOGS

By Karen Huwe | THE TIMES

WAITSBURG — Waitsburg Middle School boys basketball team beat Dayton 42-23 in Waitsburg on Monday, November 27.

Graduation cost the Waitsburg Cardinal girls' basketball team only two players and that experienced group – most of whom are coming off a sixth-place finish in state volleyball – are hoping that the season will conclude in March with more than just a repeat to the state. But for now, according to Coach Jerry Baker, the team's goal is simply to defend its district championship. The Cardinals kick off the 1998-99 season with a nonleague opener with Rosalia tomorrow, Friday, Dec. 4, at the Waitsburg Gymnasium. Jayvee action stars at 4:30 with varsity taking the floor at 6:30 p.m. Second-year Coach Baker sees the team's biggest challenge in the tough December schedule in which the Cards face five Whitman County teams and 1A Dayton twice before the holiday break. "We won't have much time to relax," Baker said. "If we stay healthy we should do okay."

Five Waitsburg Cardinals won places on the SEW All-Star Football team announced this past week by the Walla Walla Union-Bulletin. Selection was super-tough this year, as the league had an abundance of fine players on the front line. Marshall Maib was named top offensive flanker, while Pat Davis was honored as offensive kicker. Mike DeCoria, who quarterbacked the Redbirds, was named as defensive back, and Roger Miller was picked for the first string offensive line. Shane Donnelly, linebacker, received an honorable mention for his play on the defensive unit. Connell, conference winner, got seven players on the unit: Jamie Person (SE), Curt Didier (TE), Kent Mackay (QB), and Thane Davidson (RB); Mark Cochran (DT), Elizar Gonzales (LB), and Randy Adom (DB). Scott Brannan (IL), Toby Hatley (RB), Ross Swan (DE), Craig Culbertson (LB), and Matt Hall (DB) were named from the Colfax Bulldogs.

MY RECIPES Luke Chavez

Butternut Squash and Goat Cheese Galette

As a young budding cook, one of the earliest staple recipes I mastered was perfecting my flakey pie crust. With just a few ingredients, mainly butter and flour, the key to a perfect batch is all about proper kitchen techniques, such as keeping your butter and water very cold, and not overworking the dough. Perfect for pies or tarts, I often double or quadruple the recipe to have extra discs of dough ready for the freezer. This week, I remembered I had an extra disc of dough leftover from last week's holiday preparations which was perfect for a no-fuss recipe like this savory galette. Aromatic herbed goat cheese with sweet butternut squash and pistachios baked in a rustically folded pastry crust, made for a delightful late-autumn meal.

Ingredients:

For the crust:

- 1 1/3 cups all-purpose flour
- 1 teaspoon sugar
- 1/2 teaspoon fine sea salt
- 1/2 cup ice water
- 8 tablespoons cold unsalted butter

For the filling:

- 4 ounces fresh goat cheese, at room temperature
- 2 tablespoons fresh parsley, finely chopped (divided)
- 2 teaspoons fresh thyme leave, chopped
- Salt and fresh ground black pepper
- 2 cups butternut squash, peeled and finely sliced (about half a squash)
- 1/2 red onion, thinly sliced
- 2 tablespoons olive oil
- 1 teaspoon fresh sage, minced
- 1 teaspoon paprika
- 1/4 cup pistachios, shelled and coarsely chopped
- 1 egg, beaten

Directions:

First make your crust. Combine the flour sugar and salt in a large mixing bowl. Have a measuring cup of ice water ready. Cut the butter into small squares and add to the bowl of flour. Working quickly, use a pastry cutter or your fingers to cut the butter into the flour, until the mixture has the texture of gravel, with some irregular and large pieces of butter throughout. Start pouring about half of the ice water, mixing gently with a fork to start forming clumps. Slowly add more water as needed until the mixture just starts to form a shaggy dough and can hold together when gently pressed together. Dump dough out onto a floured surface and gently pat into a disc shape. Wrap dough in plastic and let rest in the refrigerators for at least two hours.

When ready to start assembling, preheat the oven to 375 degrees. Line a baking sheet with parchment paper and set aside. In a small mixing bowl, combine the goat cheese, 1 tablespoon of parsley, and thyme, mixing with a spatula. Season to taste with salt and black pepper. Set aside.

In a separate large mixing bowl, combine the sliced squash, red onion, olive oil, sage, paprika, and the other tablespoon of parsley. Season generously with salt and black pepper to taste, tossing mixture to evenly coat in the oil.

Remove the crust dough from the fridge and work quickly to keep it very cold. On a lightly floured surface, roll the dough to a 12- or 13-inch diameter, and carefully transfer it to the prepared baking sheet. Use a spoon to dollop the goat cheese mixture in the center of dough, gently spreading the cheese into a thin round layer, leaving about a 2-inch border around the edges. Next, arrange the squash and onion in a single, slightly overlapping layer over the cheese. Sprinkle the chopped pistachios over the top, then fold the crust edges up over the filling, crimping and tucking as you go. (The center will still be open on top, see the photo above.) Brush the edges with the egg wash and season with small pinch of salt and pepper.

Bake the galette until the crust is golden, and the squash is cooked tender, between 35 to 50 minutes. The tops of the squash will start to get a little charring. If the crust starts to brown too quickly while the squash cooks, cover the edges lightly with foil. Allow the galette to rest on the baking sheet for 5 to 10 minutes before transferring to a cutting board. Serve warm or at room temperature.

Notes:

The key to this recipe is to slice the squash thin enough that it roasts tender while the crust bakes. I used the neck half of the butternut squash to give me uniform half-moon slices, sliced less than a 1/4-inch thick.

Instead of goat cheese you could substitute a cows-milk ricotta, mascarpone, or another fresh farmer-style cheese. Pecans or hazelnuts would be lovely in place of the pistachios. Or for those with nut allergies, you could substitute with pumpkin seeds.

Serve as a side-dish with some roasted meats, or as a wonderful centerpiece to a vegetarian feast. A crisp salad on the side is perfect to balance the richness.

Enjoy.
