The Pride and Joy of Dayton

Main Street flower baskets are a long-time dream come true

By Dian Ver Valen THE TIMES

DAYTON – You probably didn't know that the colorful, hanging baskets of flowers that brighten Dayton's Main Street all summer were nearly 30 years in the making.

Dayton Development Task Force members Scott Hudson and Betty Lou Crothers have dreamt of, discussed and planned for flower baskets downtown since the late 1980s, when the founding members of the task force worked to restored this city's Main Street.

"It's an idea that floated around for a long time," Hudson said. "But the idea never really went anywhere. We never had the dollars to put it together."

Then the state instituted a B&O tax incentive program to fund Main Street projects like those supported by the task force. In 2014, the Dayton Development Task Force received over $64,000 in these donations.

The Task Force, a tax-exempt nonprofit organization, is eligible to receive money through the Washington Main Street Tax Incentive Program, which allows community businesses to donate a large percentage of their state Business and Occupation (B&O) tax or Public Utility Tax (PUT) specifically toward the economic development of downtown Dayton.

When business owners go online to the Department of Revenue website, they can click on "Credits and Tax Incentives" and pledge their B&O or PUT tax dollars to the task force and its many planned projects. Once the donation request is approved by the Department of Revenue, businesses are eligible for a tax credit the following year worth 75 percent of the contribution pledged.

"Once we got the B&O tax program going, we really wanted to do something to beautify

MATLEY PUBLISHES FIRST NOV

Local winger and writer Susan Matley's sci-fi novella will be released Friday

PRESCOTT - Best known locally as western singer Cimarron Sue, of the traditional cowboy music duo Nevada Slim and Cimarron Sue, Prescott's Susan Matley has been acting, singing, and writing most of her life. With the release of her fiction novella Small-g City later this week, she will add the title of published novelist to her long list of achieve-when her sister taught her the alphabet at three years old, but she began writing with the intent to publish in 1996. She sold her first short story, "I Saw Him Kissing Another Man's Wife," to True Love Magazine in 1997 at three cents a word. Matley's writing sales increased significantly when she moved from romance to the speculative-fiction genre. These days, she says her writing falls into one of two tracks – sci-fi/fantasy or western history. Her first published novel falls into the first category.

"I've always liked what's called 'sociological science fiction.' A sub-genre that's less concerned with technology/space opera and more concerned with

Temporary Dump to Open Late This Month

WORK TO REPAIR COUNTY TRANSFER STATION DAMAGED BY FIRE IS ALREADY UNDERWAY

By Dian Ver Valen | THE TIMES

DAYTON - Columbia County has a plan for reopening the transfer station (dump) by the end of August, and citizens won't have to go anywhere

The temporary facilities will be located at the current site but away from where contractors will be working to repair and rebuild the permanent facilities.

The Columbia County Transfer Station at 500 S. Cottonwood St., where citizens could deposit garbage for transport to a landfill outside of the county, was closed after a July 17 fire destroyed much of the facility's equipment and seriously damaged the main building.

Temporary Plan

The plan, as presented last week to county commissioners by Columbia County Engineer Andrew Woods, is to place dumpsters for temporary collection and install areas for recycling, household waste and other refuse in the lower area where citizens used to deposit "white good" (or large appliances for disposal).

To use the temporary facilities, Woods explained, vehicles will enter through the lower gate, where previously traffic exited the transfer sta-

They will stop at a temporary scale, turn around, back into the dumping area, go back to the scale, and then leave through the city's access road.

The county is still working with Dayton and the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers to get permission to use this shared road.

Temporary dumping facilities will cost an estimated $80,000 to install, according to Woods. But a $5,000 insurance deductible should be the county's only out-of-pocket expense for the entire project - both the installation of temporary facilities and the repair and replacement of property damaged in the fire, Woods said. Insurance will cover the remainder.

Dayton Man Charged with Sex Crimes

AIDAN J. GEMMELL FACES FIVE FELONY INDICTMENTS

THE TIMES

DAYTON - Dayton resident Aidan J. Gemmell, 18, has been charged with five counts of first-degree child rape, a Class A felony. His first court appearance was last week, where he appeared before Columbia County Superior Court Judge Scott Gallina and was appointed a defense attorney.

Gemmell has not yet entered a plea. He has also not been arrested on the charges. "We're trying to work with him and his family, and they have been cooperative," Columbia County Deputy Prosecutor Dale Slack told The Times last Thursday. "We don't want to see him imprisoned so much as we want to see him get the help he needs." Gemmell is charged with five instances of sexual misconduct with a minor under the age of 12 between March and May of this year. Each of those instances occurred after he turned 18.

A Class A-felony conviction can carry a maximum penalty of life imprisonment and/or $50,000 in fines for each count. Gemmell is scheduled for formal arraignment in Columbia County Superior Court later this month.

The public will have the opportunity to offer input on the two items on Aug. 18 at 10 a.m.

The Walla Walla County Planning Commission received eight applications requesting amendments to the Walla Walla County Comprehensive Plan for the 2015 amendment cycle. Following a July 1 public hearing, six of those applications received commission for inclusion on the final docket.

Two items received tie votes from the four planning commission members in attendance

COMMENTARY / NEWS

KEN GRAHAM: FROM THE PUBLISHER

On Reporting a Horrific Crime

n the front page of The Times this week is a tragic story about a young Dayton man who is being charged with multiple counts of child rape. Besides being terrible for those involved, stories like this present one of the most difficult dilemmas that those of us who put out newspapers face.

This young man and the other people close to this story are obviously going through a very difficult time. Having the charges against him publicized on the front page of a local newspaper, even in vague terms, can only make the ordeal they're going through that much harder.

As reporters in a small town, we're very aware that the news we publish can sometimes make a painful situation even worse. But we have to balance that with our duty to inform the public of an alleged crime that is extremely serious.

In this particular case, the young man is legally an adult. He is 18, and he was 18 when the alleged crimes were committed. These are crimes that, if he's convicted of them, could potentially send him to prison for the rest of his life

When a local adult is charged with a Class A felony – in this case, five counts – it's front page news. That's not even a close call, regardless of who the accused is. Like all criminal cases we cover, we will continue to report its progress through the legal system.

That being said, we understand that the people involved desire their privacy, and we've made every effort to protect the victim's identity and avoid giving details of the alleged crimes. We hope readers and others in the community will respect that privacy as well

We also applaud local authorities in the Columbia County Sheriff's and Prosecutor's offices who are working to create a situation where this young man can get the help he needs.

Protecting victims and potential victims of pedophilia is the most important result that needs to come out of this case. But not far behind is helping this young man so he doesn't do it again.

EMMA PHILBROOK: STUDENT LIFE

How to Outfit a Dorm Room s I am about to depart for college, I have been doing an extensive amount of research concerning what I need to bring with me, and I have found out that nobody on the internet knows anything about packing for college. But just to be safe, I'll compare what I've already bought to this authoritative-looking list:

•Alarm clock. Check – there's an alarm function on my phone.

•Bed linens/towels. Check and check, although I took the liberty of substituting bed flannels for the bed linens

•Carpet/throw rug. I believe that this is included with the room, although you couldn't really throw it unless you ripped it off the baseboard first •Chair/bean bag. Chairs are provided with the desks at Whitman. And who're you calling a bean bag?

•Clothes drying rack. This is much like the clothes dryers already in the building, but designed for interrogating your clothes as they air out.

•Compact refrigerator. Can be rented from Walman or purchased from Whitmart. Or did I itch those •Computer. Nah, I'll be fine with an abacus and a printing press.

•Cup/mug/glass/plate/bowl/silverware. Do/I/need/all/of/these/or/can/I/just/bring/one/spoon/and/call/it/good?

•Dish soap. For washing your spoon in case your regular laundry detergent leaves it faded.

•Fan. The problem is picking which one of you to bring along.

•Fish. Or small aquatic turtles — Whitman allows both. Of course, the fish/turtles will need to live somewhere, so you might want to opt for the bowl instead of the spoon.

•Handi-Tak to hang posters. Y'know, just in case they don't confess after you put them through the clothes drying rack.

•Hangers. Also, maybe, clothes.

•Iron. Or, if you're a preppy sort of person, silver.

•Laundry bag. Hey, who're you calling a laundry bag?

•Laundry detergent. In case the dish soap leaves hard-water marks on your jeans.

•Medicine. Because Advil is the only known cure for Mondays.

•Microwave (one cubic foot). Oh, horrors! The one I just bought is only 0.9 cubic feet and I can't return it because it was on sale! NOOOOOOO!

•Plants (real or fake). The real ones freshen the air. The fake ones conserve water. Grr!

•Radio/stereo. So I can blast Swedish folk music at all hours of the night.

•Rolls of quarters for laundry. Or bubblegum, Or ramen, Your choice.

•School supplies. I hate to say "duh", but, well, "duh."

•Sewing kit. In case the dorm inspector wants the thrown carpet back in place •Shower caddy. Unlike other caddies, does not need tipping.

•Telephone. Got one already.

•Toiletry items/soap dish. Because your shower caddy has to caddy something.

•TV/DVD player. In case you were tempted to study.

The Fire

Columbia County Commissioners declared an emergency after the fire so they could circumvent bid law, which requires lengthy procedures and timelines.

"We're dealing with the health and safety of the community here, and we need to be able to get started right away," Commissioner Dwight Robaske said at the time.

The cause of the fire is unknown, according to Columbia County Fire Marshal Kim Lyonnais. No accelerants were found on the scene, but because the trailer where the fire originated was filled with a wide variety of trash, there isn't a good way to determine which items may have combusted, he said. The case will remain open, he said.

Restoration of Service

With the temporary arrangements, the county will be able to restore collection services for everything from general household waste to cardboard, yard waste, appliances, household hazardous waste and e-waste (electronics for disposal). The public works office, which manages the transfer station, will arrange for a small office and computer so cash and credit cards can still be accepted.

The Department of Ecology requires that hazardous waste and e-waste be stored under cover, Woods said. The system being installed for this should work for the permanent facility as well. Most of the other temporary facilities will not be used in the permanent construction, he said.

The fire last month, which started in the refuse trailer parked under the bay of the main collection building, destroyed the truck and trailer used for collecting and hauling garbage to Pasco. The mini excavator, used to help sort and move trash, was partially damaged. And the structure itself took a heavy toll.

Restoring Permanent Service

Woods didn't have an estimate last week on the cost to rebuild the main structure, but he said the concrete bay sustained significant damage.

"Basically it was a total loss on the floor," he said. Two of the carrier beams were "likely damaged beyond repair," and two columns will probably need to be replaced, he said.

"The bay sustained exposure to temperatures between 1100 and 1700 degrees, and you can see where the heat penetrated through the concrete to the reinforcing steel," Woods said. The reinforcing steel in the concrete got hot enough that it began to experience ductile failure, he said.

"It will be interesting to price it (the repairs) out," Woods said. "To get to the floor and the reinforced concrete members, we will have to essentially tear the building apart."

Upgrade Planned?

Columbia County had plans to upgrade the transfer station in 2016, according to the solid waste management plan presented to the commissioners in the spring by Woods. The report states that $750,000 would be required to pay for the upgrade.

The county has said nothing formal on whether the upgrade could be added on during this repair/reconstruction project, but the commissioners and Woods discussed the possibility at their emergency meeting on July 17 following the fire.

Meanwhile, the county's insurance adjustor has approved $8,300 for the repair of the mini excavator. An estimate of $48,000 to fix the truck used to haul the refuse trailer is under review by the adjustor, Woods said.

And bid opening for a new, 53-foot refuse trailer to replace the one destroyed in the fire will take place on Aug. 19 at the regular meeting of the board of county commissioners.

Corrections: In the July 30 issue of The Times, we shared a story about Prescott's new vocational agriculture program. That article stated that Prescott would be starting.

cational agriculture program. That article stated that Prescott would be starting an FFA chapter for the very first time. We should have stated that, to the best knowledge of the current administration, this will be Prescott's first FFA chapter.

Jack McCaw, who graduated from Prescott in 1945, stopped by The Times office last week to set the record straight. McCaw said the school did have an active FFA chapter back in the early '40's and that he was even next in line to be FFA president before he left school early to enlist in the service. (McCaw's mother accepted his diploma for him at graduation.)

Also, in our August 6 issue, in our story about Limagrain, we misspelled the name of a recent hire at the company. His name is Ben Brimlow, not Brimwell. Our apologies.

Columbia Pulp Begins Purchase of Local Straw

WHEAT-STRAW PROCESSING MILL IS STILL ON TRACK TO BEGIN OPERATIONS IN A YEAR

By Dian Ver Valen | THE TIMES

STARBUCK - Columbia Pulp LLC hasn't broken ground yet on its 449-acre pulp mill near Lyons Ferry, but "exciting movement" continues to happen behind closed doors, according to Columbia County Planning Director Kim

The company began receiving wheat straw for storage on Monday of this week, board member and LLC manager John Begley told The Times. Columbia Pulp has leased space within two miles of the future site of the mill for the storage of 20,000 to 30,000 tons of "This is all coming from local farms," Begley said. "We're beginning to ramp up our straw purchase in anticipation of opening next year."

The mill, which Begley said will process approximately 220,000 tons of straw annually when fully operational, will be located on Highway 261 between Starbuck and the Snake River. CP operators expect to continue to use all local wheat straw for processing.

"About 4 million tons of straw is produced annually within a 75mile radius of the site," Begley said. "We expect to be able to get all we need from within that radius."

The pulp produced will be sent to a "nearby" mill to be made into paper - though which paper mill will be receiving the pulp is not yet public information, Begley said.

All water rights have been transferred and permits for construction of the pulp mill are complete. according to Begley. The company is just waiting for funding to be in place before breaking ground, he Columbia Pulp was approved this spring for a $100 million non-recourse revenue bond by the Washington Economic Development Finance Authority. Begley said at the time that everyone had hoped the bonds would close by June, but the process is "fairly detailed," he said in April.

The process should be complete in about a month, Begley said on Monday. Once the money is available for construction, passers-by should see activity at the site immediately, he said.

"All of this is so encouraging," Lyonnais, county planning director, said last week. "We can't see everything that's happening with this project right now, but they're doing a lot."

NO HORSING AROUND!

MODEL HORSE SHOW AT TOWN HALL IN WAITSBURG IS SERIOUS BUSINESS

By Dena Wood | THE TIMES

WAITSBURG – Waitsburg is no stranger to horse shows, but this weekend may be the first time one has taken place indoors. On Aug. 8 and 9, hundreds of horses – some extremely valuable – lined tabletops in Town Hall to compete in the Sweet Onion Live model horse show.

The event, which is hosted by the North American Model Horse Shows Association (NAHMSA), was organized by Shana Bobbitt of Walla Walla. This is the fourth year for the Sweet Onion Live two-day show, and Bobbitt said she brought it to Waitsburg because it was a "good location for a good price."

Between 20 and 30 entrants from across the Pacific Northwest, including Montana, Idaho, Seattle, as well as Canada, brought models to compete. Judging divisions included Breyer or other plastic, Stone, Plastic Mini, Artist Resins, Customized, Performance, and Youth, with dozens of breeds in each division.

The models are judged on Breed Class (conformation, breed standards, condition/workmanship), Collectability (rarity, age, condition, desirability/value), and Workmanship (prepping/sculpting quality, detail, paint/finish work). Show winners qualify for the NAMHSA North American Nationals.

In the Performance categories, horses and riders are dressed in costumes or depict scenes and are judged on how realistic the model/scene is. Bobbitt said Performance is the division she enjoys the most. "It's amazing to see how creative people can be," she said.

Those showing in the Customization division use Dremel tools and paints to transform existing models into a new creation. In the Artist Resin division, artists cast and create their own molds from which they cast a limited number of models, which tend to be more expensive, said Bobbitt.

Bobbitt said that organizing the Sweet Onion Live show was the result of many years of collecting on her own and that she thoroughly enjoys it.

"She puts on a great show," said entrant Annette Kittleson of Great Falls, Mont. "It's a goofy hobby, but we have fun."

Bobbitt offered special thanks to Waitsburg's Laht Neppur brewery for donating a growler with a fill as a raffle prize. "Someone from the Seattle area won it, and they were pretty excited," Bobbitt said.

human relationships and the world," Matley said. "My early influences were C. S. Lewis's Narnia Chronicles, the old 'Twilight Zone' television episodes, and lots of stuff in between."

"Small-g City" started as a short story, about ten years ago, and just kept growing, Matley said. With the first draft written, Matley set the story aside for years, before picking it back up in 2010. She submitted the novel to WolfSinger Publications in June 2010 and learned that it had been accepted in December

Matley said she often receives suggestions to self-publish her works but has opted not to take that route because she finds value in the editorial process.

"I've spent years working in theater, writing and music. I've learned that if you can't take constructive criticism, you don't grow," she said.

Matley stuck with the author's rule of "writing what you know" as she developed her novel.

"'Small-g City' started off as a short story called One Block Story because it was going to happen within the confines of one city block of downtown Seattle," she said. "Then, two characters, who survived the cut for 'Small-g City,' crossed the street. The story grew from there.

"I worked in downtown Seattle in the mid-1980s, so the world of the story is a combination of what I saw then and what I saw in early 2011 when I was putting the final touches on the manuscript," Matley added.

Matley's book is written for adults but she says it will likely appeal to older teens as well.

"The book, though written with a comic hand, centers on people facing crisis in their jobs and relationships," Matley said. "If you've experienced those things, chances are good you'll identify with the characters."

As for the title, Matley explained that "Small-g" refers to lesser ranked Olympian gods like structurelings and weather gods, as opposed to "Big-g" Gods like Zeus and Hera. In her novel, Ralph, a "small-g" god is the only one aware that Seattle is on the brink of disaster.

Ralph is suffering from job burn-out and is unsure if he can continue his job of reinforcing Seattle's notorious highway, the Alaskan Way Viaduct, by disbursing his molecules throughout the unstable and hazardous structure.

Matley said has completed a sequel which has also been submitted to WolfSinger for consideration. "Yes, there are plans for a third in the series," she said.

"Small-g City" is scheduled to be released Friday, Aug. 14 and will be available at Amazon.com in print and Kindle versions, in print at Barnes&Noble.com and in eBook format through Smashbooks.com.

Small-g City (back cover blurb):

Seattle is on the brink of disaster, but nobody knows it! Nobody except Ralph, a "small-g" god from Olympus, Inc.

Ralph suffers from extreme job burn-out, and no wonder- -his job is to reinforce Seattle's notorious raised highway, the Alaskan Way Viaduct, by disbursing his molecules throughout the unstable and hazardous structure.

But Ralph's molecules are feeling the pull of reconstitution. Will he survive one more agonizing rush hour without resuming his humanoid form and emerging from the viaduct, sending thousands of commuters to their deaths? And what about the familiar shadow hovering over him? If Zeus (Olympus, Inc., CEO and the Biggest of Big-G Gods) is spying on him, all Tartarus is sure to break loose!

Wheeled All-Terrain Vehicles Approved for City Streets

STARTING AUG. 25, WATVS WILL BE ALLOWED ON DAYTON STREETS WITH SPEED LIMITS OF 35 OR BELOW

By Dian Ver Valen | THE TIMES

DAYTON - Dayton City Council approved an ordinance Monday night allowing wheeled all-terrain vehicles, or WATVs, on city streets. No members of the public spoke at the final hearing regarding this legislation. The new law goes into effect on Aug. 25.

The decision was approved by the majority of city leaders, with Councilor Kathy Berg in opposition. Berg did suggest that the council give the new law a one-year trial, examining the statistics and other data on enforcement and violations at that time to determine whether to continue allowing the use of WATVs.

Councilor Dain Nysoe agreed but said a two-year assessment might be more fair; in the first year, the council could probably expect a higher-than-average number of violations and other enforcement issues as people learned the ins and outs of the law and adjusted to the change. In any event, City Clerk Trina Cole said, the council could amend or retract the ordinance at any time.

Councilor Michael Paris proposed his colleagues amend the motion to pass the ordinance with language stating that the council will review the law and its execution "in the next two years." That proposal was accepted by the other council members, with Berg still opposing the adoption of the WATV ordi-

Ordinance 1881 allows licensed drivers 16 and older to operate WATVs on all city streets with a speed limit of 35 miles per hour or less. Washington state passed similar legislation in 2013 that automatically applied to all county and state byways; cities retained the right to regulate the application of the law individually.

WATV drivers must meet all the same safety measures required by street-legal motorcycles, including (depending on the type of WATV) a headlamp that operates all of the time, a tail light, stop lights, reflectors, turn signals, brakes, mirrors, horn, spark arrester and muffler, windshield and seatbelts.

For more information on properly licensing a WATV in Washington state, visit dol.wa.gov.

DAYTON – The school year will begin on Tuesday, Sept. 1, for all students in the Dayton School District.

New students as well as returning students are encouraged to attend registration on Wednesday, Aug. 19, in the elementary multi-purpose room from noon until 6 p.m. Kindergarten students who have already registered do not need to attend, unless other children in the family haven't yet registered.

Sports physicals will be available from 2-5 p.m. on Aug. 18 in the district office for just $5. Physicals will be provided by the new Columbia County Health System physician, Dr. Kurt Frauenpreis. All proceeds will go to the middle school-high school athletic department. Call the district office at (509) 382-2544 if you have questions about either event.

Supply lists and fees for the coming school year are on the district's website at www.daytonsd.org. Fees can be paid at registration.

In other school news, the Dayton School Board's only August meeting will be Wed., Aug. 19, in the district office at 6:30 p.m. Items on the agenda include a final wrap-up of facility projects completed during the summer months and other preparations being made for the beginning of the new school year.

With the late adjournment of the state legislature, board members still have some decisions to make regarding cost of living allowance for employees unrepresented by local and state associations, Superintendent Doug Johnson said. Included in this group are classified supervisors, district office staff, principals, and the superintendent. All other employees will receive the 3-percent COLA provided for by the state

"It is likely the board will also receive additional information regarding the state assessment results and actions taken by the State Board of Directors regarding the cut scores required for high school graduation," Johnson said.

Dayton," Hudson said. "It became a priority of mine to get the flowers."

Time was short though. The task force wanted the flowers installed before All Wheels Weekend in 2014.

Photos by Dian Ver Valen Organizers are perfecting the art of maintaining downtown flower baskets. Waterers use a modified wand to pump water into a pipe at the top of the plants (far left). Inside each pot is a sub-irrigation tank that simplifies the watering process (left).

Hudson started researching hangers for the pots.

Jean McKeen, who sells flowers and plants behind Skyline Fluid & Power on East Main Street, had baskets of flowers. And Doug Hinds, with Pacific Power & Light, was willing to help hang all the pots.

"It made us feel good, to help beautify the town," Hudson said. "Dayton is such a beautiful town any-

After the first hurried year of hanging baskets, the task force had a better idea of what they wanted and the time to do it right. This year, they worked with McKeen again and arranged for bigger pots – 37 in all.

And McKeen refined a watering system that seems to be working well. The waterer pulls a large wagon with a water tank up and down Main Street. The tank is equipped with a pump. And each flower basket has a sub-irrigation system, said McKeen.

"Watering is hard," she said. "This year I researched on how to make it easier."

Flower waterers, hired and managed by the Dayton Chamber of Commerce on behalf of the task force, typically water twice each day during the scorching summer days - from about 5-7 a.m. each morning and another two hours at dusk, according to current waterer Lexus Ward.

With the sub-irrigation system, the waterer uses a modified watering wand, fixed with a spout rather than a shower head. The spout is inserted into an elbow pipe that pokes out of the top of each hanging basket. Water is added until it pours from the overflow pipe at the bottom of the basket. And voila! The plant wicks this water from the porous tank at the bottom of the pot all day long.

"It takes the guess work out of watering," McKeen said. "With the plants up in the air, in the wind and full sunlight all day, the flowers really take a beating."

Each year McKeen and task force members have learned more about which plants do better than others in the baskets. They opted to go with a mix of flowers rather than a color pattern like that in Waitsburg.

The hanging baskets of flowers with sub-irrigation system cost approximately $95 each and have to be repurchased annually - although the pots, sub-irrigation system and high-quality hangers can be reused, McKeen said. Hudson confirmed that the task force budgets about $10,000 annually for the plants, supplies and staff. They typically use about $8,000 of that.

"The flowers are just absolutely beautiful," Hudson said. "It's absolutely amazing how many people come by when you're hanging the plants or helping to water then and comment on how gorgeous they are. Dayton should be proud. We should all be proud."

Currently the Chamber and Task Force are looking for a new waterer. The position will be open starting Aug. 19. To find out more call (509) 382-4825 or email chamber@historicdayton.com.
