AAUW candidate forum held Oct. 5

By Michele Smith | THE TIMES

DAYTON—The Dayton chapter of the American Association of University Women held a Candidates' Forum on October 5, to allow voters in Columbia County to hear from and ask questions of candidates for local races. Candidates for Columbia County Sheriff, Columbia County Commissioner from District 3, and the Joint Metropolitan Park District attended the event at The Liberty Theater in Dayton.

COLUMBIA COUNTY COMMISSIONER DISTRICT 3

Columbia County Commissioner Charles Amerein is seeking reelection to a second four-year term in District 3. His opponent, Jack Miller, is hoping to unseat him in the November election. Both men are Republicans.

Amerein said he hopes he has provided the community with efficient, effective service over the last four years.

He believes he is the best choice for the position because he values person freedoms and liberties, as well as economic prosperity for our community.

According to him, the biggest challenges facing county government lie with unfunded mandates and executive edicts from Olympia, which divert funding resources away from the county.

Amerein said he believes the county's most pressing need is for a new law and justice center, which would include a new jail. Another need is for a human resources manager. Both are in the planning stages.

The biggest challenge facing small communities, he said, has been the hollowing out of the manufacturing base, which has led to social ills like drug and alcohol abuse.

With regard to the local economy, Amerein would like to see refining or value added to the products created locally. He mentioned wheat, timber, and cattle. He said he would like to see better access into the Blue Mountains, for tourism, and he would like the now idled pulp plant in Starbuck to become functional.

Amerein said when people have jobs and disposable income to spend, the situation on Dayton's Main Street will also improve.

"Right now, we need jobs in America. We need industry, and we need to build things again," he said.

Jack Miller has a degree in Agriculture Economics from WSU. He was raised on a diversified farm in the Yakima Valley, managed a farm for the Tribes in north Idaho for 32 years, and has lived and farmed in Dayton since 1975.

"Several people came and asked me to run for this position," he said. "I was impressed by the fact they were from across the political spectrum, one side and the other. I thought if people like that are able to get together, it should be easy to get things done rather than argue all the time."

Miller agreed with Amerein's assessment that the county needs a new jail, but, he said if he is elected, it will take time for him to get acquainted with each county department and make a good assessment of needs.

Miller said in 1975, there were three grocery stores on Main Street, two farm implement dealers, hardware stores, jewelry stores, and a "whole lot" of restaurants.

"They are not there anymore. There aren't as many people paying taxes anymore. We need to draw people back here," he said.

He said further investigation is needed as to why businesses aren't locating in Dayton.

He said that a farm implement store or even a saw-mill is not a far-fetched idea for Dayton.

"Let's attract some businesses, get more people good living wage jobs, and it would solve a lot of our problems. We should be a thriving small community, not one that is fighting for existence."

Election Issue

Coverage of candidates, issues, and voter information before the November election..

JOINT METROPOLITAN PARK DISTRICT & CANDIDATES

At the AAUW Candidates forum, Dayton City Councilman Jim Su'euga explained the November ballot measure asking voters to approve a nonfunded county-wide Joint Metropolitan Park District (JMPD). A joint taxing district is one that exists in two or more counties

The JMPD would also be a junior taxing district.

"That District has been pushed forward by a group of folks who are really, really committed to get a pool back in Dayton," he told the audience.

The ballot measure will ask two things of voters: One, whether to approve the formation of the JMPD and two, who will serve on the commission.

Su'euga said the pool would be built with grants and other funding sources, and the operations and maintenance would be funded through special taxation. He explained that the current RCW statutory aggregate tax limit for the proposed district is $5.90 per $1,000 assessed property valuation.

"It (the JMPD) has to be approved by the voters. No matter what, you always have the opportunity to say yes or no."

The podium was then turned over to candidates running for a position on the JMPD.

Position 1: Morgan Porche and Dianne McKinley

Position 2: Lisa Naylor and Melissa Bryan

Position 3: Ted Lowe and Paige Aukerman

Position 4: Marjorie Lowe,

Position 5: Carol Anderson and Tony Aukerman.

The candidates spoke about their reasons for applying and how they would prioritize recreational needs in the community.

Joint Metropolitan Park District candidates who were absent from the forum were; Charles Levy, running for Position 1, Dave Schreck for Position 3, and Chris Slack, Paula Murdock, and Robert Yost, for Position 4.

Michele Smith

Jim Su'euga at the podium, presenting the proposed Joint Metropolitan Parks District (JMPD). Some of the candidates running for the five commissioner seats should the District be approved by voters in November, were in attendance and introduced themselves.

WASHINGTON'S 5TH CONGRESSIONAL DISTRICT

Natasha Hill, the Democrat running against incumbent Cathy McMorris Rodgers for Washington's 5th Congressional District, was the first to speak.

Hill is a fourth-generation eastern Washingtonian. As a Spokane attorney, Hill represents a diverse clientele. She said her skill set will be invaluable if elected to represent the 5th district's twelve counties in Washington D.C.

She said she has heard from people telling her they need a strengthened workforce, fair wages, job safety, and access to quality health care. They have also talked to her about the need for affordable preschool and childcare, so they can work and contribute to their families and communities.

One other thing Hill has heard, is how tired people are with the current climate of political extremism.

"When communities stand together, even with our disagreements, even with things we are not going to fold on, we are still stronger when we stand together," she said.

As a Black woman, she said she knows what it is like to be fearful of hate groups.

As an attorney, Hill has studied the U.S. Constitution, which sets forth certain civil rights and

COLUMBIA COUNTY SHERIFF

Columbia County Sheriff Joe Helm and Deputy Jeff Jenkins introduced themselves at the Candidates Forum, and each talked about their qualifications for the position of Columbia County Sheriff.

Helm said he leads by example and has accomplished the objectives he set for the Sheriff's Office when he ran for office against Deputy Jenkins four years ago, such as establishing a community-oriented policing program, increasing staffing, increasing interagency collaboration, and working on proactive law enforcement. He has worked under two prior sheriffs in the county as Chief Deputy.

Helm referred to himself as a "constitutional sheriff." He said that means everyone has equal access to the law, and anyone can come to him because he has an open-door policy.

"We are peacekeepers. We are the ones that have to go out," he said. "We don't care what the circumstances are. We are there to keep the public safe, no matter who you are, where you are from, or what the circumstances are."

If elected, Deputy Jeff Jenkins said he would work on rebuilding the community's trust in the Sheriff's Office by responding to complaints promptly and upholding a higher standard of conduct for deputies. He also would address positions created in the Sheriff's Office for which no policy has been established.

"Without responsibility and accountability, there never will be reliability," Jenkins said.

Jenkins recounted his many local volunteer activities and his 23 years in law enforcement in Columbia County. His work for the county includes specialization in drug law enforcement, during which time he has trained many officers.

"I feel that being involved and helping anybody and everybody to succeed is what matters," he said.

Both men believe the drug problem, especially Fentanyl, to be the county's most significant law enforcement issue.

Helm said poor state legislation has made it difficult to be proactive in policing, and he is working with other law enforcement agencies to change the legislation that ties the hands of law enforcement officers.

He said state laws have a significant impact. For instance, officers can only pursue somebody for probable cause for a sex offense/violent offense, violent offense, or probable cause for suspicion of DUI.

Helm said, "People are getting away with motor vehicle thefts pursuits, property crimes, even assaults that do not fit under violent crimes, and we are not allowed to pursue."

Jenkins agreed that laws need to change.

People in the community are concerned about the lack of 24-hour coverage in the community by road deputies.

Jenkins said staffing levels and scheduling problems in the Sheriff's Office are contributing to that.

Helm said there is always an on-call supervisor, along with an on-call deputy 24 hours each day. He promised 24-hour coverage after the two latest recruits graduate from Police Academy.

Helm said the biggest need is for increased training for the officers.

Jenkins said building trust in the community is the most significant need, and that needs to happen before anything else.

AT THE LIBERTY:

"Railway Children"

DAYTON- This movie is inspired by a beloved British family film. It is set in 1944 when life in Britain's cities has become increasingly perilous. Three evacuee children are sent by their mother from Salford to the Yorkshire village of Oakworth during the Second World War, where they are met and supported by a mother, her daughter, and grandson. After settling in at a home in the countryside, the children encounter and attempt to assist a young soldier who is hiding, and like them, is far away from home.

Rotten Tomatoes critics give this movie a 59% favorable, but the audiences disagree and give it a 92%. Runtime is 98 minutes, and the movie is rated PG (for Language, thematic material, some violence).

Please see our nearby advertisement, or our website, for movie dates and times. The Liberty Theater now has open seating with tickets only available at the door. The theater no longer has restrictions or distanced seating, and masks are optional, but recommended. The theater maintains enhanced ventilation and air purification.

Dear Editor:

For the past few months I have had the pleasure of working with Jack Miller on his campaign for Columbia County Commissioner. Jack is a lifetime Republican and a genuine conservative. But he understands that, as commissioner, he will represent ALL Columbia County residents, not just those who share his political views. Jack will focus on addressing local issues and making Columbia County a better place to live for ALL its citizens. Please vote for Jack Miller!

SUPPORT FOR EFFECTIVE METROPOLITAN BOARD COMMISSIONERS CANDIDATES

If the Metropolitan Parks District proposal passes, then I believe it's very important to vote for the board that will commit to progressing forward with the long-term goal. This elected board will have a huge job ahead, working with architects to design the building and have community meetings to approve of said design, work on getting funding and grants, appoint a bookkeeper, work on yearly levies to continue maintaining the new pool, among a few. It will be a lot of work.

After listening to each candidate describe why they are running and what's most important for the new parks and rec district to focus on, I am voting for:

Commissioner #1 - Dianne McKinley, she has put her heart and soul into developing this District and the first step to building the pool.

Commissioner #2 - Lisa Naylor, has worked with Dianne and they make a good team.

Commissioner #3 - Ted Lowe, he has past experience working with Dayton's summer rec program that made use of the city pool and understands the benefit of a parks and rec district for citizens of all ages. Ted gave a compassionate speech and would make a great positive addition.

Commissioner #4 - Marjorie Lowe. She brings to the table her experience in grant writing.

Commissioner #5 - Carol Anderson. She has an invested interest in continuing her water aerobics and will work hard to get a pool built. She listens to many in her classes as to what is needed and desired.

In my opinion, Melissa Bryan clearly stated, if elected it will be her way and her way only, as she sees it. I guess she didn't realize she won't be the only one on the board.

I'm not sure of the reason that three Aukermans decided to run. Perhaps at least one gets voted in, or all so it's a controlling interest?

I believe the above five will work hard and give many hours to this project.

BEST CANDIDATE CAN CROSS PARTY LINES, ULTIMATELY ELECTED OFFICIALS WORK FOR EVERY VOTER

To the editor:

There have been some remarks lately that Jack Miller can't possibly be a true Republican because he has so much support from Democrats in the community. I want to point out that, as a Democrat living in a county with a Republican majority, I have been voting for local Republican candidates for years. Often, both candidates in local races are registered Republicans. I understand that this means I need to learn more about the candidates than just their party affiliation in order to vote my conscience.

I am voting for Republican candidate Jack Miller because I believe he is the best candidate for Columbia County Commissioner, District 3. Jack has education and experience in management and agriculture that are relevant to the position. Jack also understands basic concepts such as Diversity, Equity, and Inclusion as it relates to working with people. His opponent, Charles Amerein, made it clear at the AAUW-sponsored candidates' forum that he was woefully unaware that such a concept exists.

Letters of support for Mr. Amerein have focused on his "character" based on his willingness to help the writers with snow removal, moving, or during a flood. While these are actions to appreciate from a public servant, after three and a half years in office, I would expect to see endorsements based on his accomplishments during his first term. To date, none have been pointed out. In fact, Mr. Amerein stated at the forum that his number 1 priority for county facilities is a new jail. We've been hearing that from commissioner candidates for 20 years. After almost four years in office, Mr. Amerein hasn't brought us any closer to having a new jail. During his 2018 campaign, Mr. Amerein stated goals of improving the fairgrounds. Four years later, the pavilion bathrooms are still incomplete. Jack Miller understands that we need more from a county commissioner than neighborly gestures. We need someone who follows through and has the ability to work well with all types of people in our community.

liberties for all people, and she believes in the Rule of Law.

Hill was asked about the role of the government in defeating authoritarian movements in the U.S. and abroad.

"We are a beacon of hope across the world in terms of what a democracy can look like and do, but we have to make sure we are not allowing somebody to come in and overshadow an entire political system, and an entire party to try and rig the rules in favor of themselves."

When asked to share her views regarding the right to privacy, and reproductive choices, she said the right to privacy is enshrined in the United States Constitution. Government is not well equipped to make medical decisions for the citizenry, she said.

"I don't believe the right to choose reproductive health care, or whether to have an abortion is any different than your right to choose a vaccination," she said. "I am not going to mandate anything once I am elected."

Hill favors Universal Health Care, with cost-sharing paid for across the nation. She said Universal Health Care would help provide rural communities with have equal access to quality health care.

When asked about removing the lower Snake River dams, she is not in favor. She said she is concerned about the viability of salmon, but also the effects of removing dams on the agriculture industry.

"We haven't invested in the infrastructure we need to replace what we are going to lose if we just shut down the dams," she said.

Hill said a long-term plan and coordination on the part of the federal, state, and local governments, along with adequate funding, will be necessary before dams are removed.

Planning is also essential when it comes to climate change, Hill said. Reliance on fossil fuels and the lack of planning for it is causing harm to our collective health. She said she is concerned about prolonged drought and its effects on public health.

Her opponent, Cathy McMorris Rogers was not in attendance at the forum.

Walla Walla Cemetery Tour

Taking a cemetery tour might not be on everyone's bucket list, yet it is a place with tons of historical information. Joanna Lanning led about 50 people on a tour of the Mountain View Cemetery in Walla Walla on a beautiful fall day, and the crowd heard stories from Lanning and other volunteers.

Walking the grounds with Lanning, we learned that the cemetery is the resting place for over 40,000 beloved souls, including around 3,000 veterans. There were originally four separate cemeteries, and in 1989 all four came under city ownership. The oldest recorded burials on the 80-acre site were in February 1850 and December 1854.

Three residents of the cemetery time traveled from the mid-1800s to the present day to tell us their life stories.

Mary A. Rice Willcoxson's tale was one of murder and suicide. Willcoxson was 53 and lived in Walla Walla when she killed her 21-year-old son and then turned the .38 caliber Colt revolver on herself while her husband was away on business.

Born in 1854, Jessie Gilliam Day was 85 years old when she passed in 1940. She was the second wife of the founder of Dayton, Washington, Jesse Day. Her family homesteaded what is now known as Dixie in 1859. Day was once the Walla Walla County School Superintendent and the first female employee of the Walla Walla Evening Bulletin.

John Franklin Boyer (1824-1897) was cofounder and the first president of Baker Boyer Bank. He was also the County Treasurer for 12 years.

Some of you might have heard of Sarah Hope Summers (June 7, 1902 - June 22, 1979) an American character actress. She portrayed Clara Edwards, Aunt Bee's best friend on the Andy Griffith Show and Mayberry RFD.

The Walla Walla Cemetery offers guided tours each spring and fall. Take the tour next year and learn more about why Willcoxson committed murder and other interesting facts about those buried at Mountain View Cemetery.

Being Single Again

By Vicki Sternfeld-Rossi | THE TIMES

Somewhat sadly, but with a little smile on my face, Daniel is in Portugal. He has been temporarily hired as a personal chef to work for a family currently in Portugal. This job came together very fast. He is the substitute chef, while their current chef is taking six weeks off.

Within two days, we had to arrange his flight and accomplish as much of the heavy lifting house and garden work as possible, mostly because I am still hindered by a cast on my right hand.

Timing wasn't great, we had a catering job, a dinner for ten celebrating the Jewish New Year, and of course, Sunday brunch for about forty to fifty the same week. It's been a whirlwind

Living in Waitsburg has many advantages, but arranging overseas travel is not one of them. The only option we had was to drive to Seattle and leave from there. I, being the romantic, suggested we go to Seattle Friday, have a nice dinner, spend a quiet and relaxed time together, and then, conveniently and without stress, have an easy drop-off at the airport.

Daniel agreed, but not for the romance; he was ready to shop. He thought he could pack for six weeks in less than ten minutes, so obviously, things were forgotten.

Our first stop was one of the restaurants we had on our "we need to try" list. They were fully booked, but they save a few tables for walk-ins. After an easy drive, it felt like it took us an hour to find a parking spot, no doubt because we were in a rush to be the "first comers" for the walk-in tables.

We finally parked, and fortuitously, there was a cute wine, spice shop, deli, and café next to the restaurant. We drank a much-needed glass (or two) of wine, and Daniel was able to buy some teas, which was one of the items he forgot to pack.

The drive to the hotel was intense with heavy traffic, roads merging unexpectedly, creative GPS routing, leaving us no idea which lane to be in. By the time we checked into the hotel, we were not talking to each other.

The following day was smoother; we had enough time for another shopping trip to Whole Foods for organic spices, a cup of coffee, and a light breakfast. Less traffic, easier freeway negotiations, and better temperaments prevailed driving to the airport!

Unfortunately, Daniel doesn't travel with ease. His flight to London was delayed, which meant he would probably miss the London to Portugal flight, and he did. The next available flight was also delayed. A one-hour layover became five hours.

Knowing him, I'm sure he was angry, frustrated, moody, and annoying to be around. All I can say is I'm glad I wasn't on this trip, or we would have killed each other.

I plan to meet Daniel in Portugal when his job is finished around Thanksgiving. Then we will travel together for a few days and spend some time with his family in Italy. I'm sure by November, I will be very excited to see him. I may book my flight home on a different airline to keep the "glad to be together again" feeling a little longer.

Wine of the Week

J.C. Somers 2020 La Revanche Chardonnay

One of a pair of Chards from Jay Somers, this is a blend of grapes from the Anahata Vineyard (Eola Hills) and the Corrine Vineyard (Chehalem Mountains). Fermented and aged in 600 liter barrels, it's fresh and spicy, with juicy apple and pear fruit and a squirt of lemon. You won't find a better Chardonnay if you are one of those like me who love this high acid, low oak style. That's not to say this is sour or thin – it's lip-smacking and palate-cleansing, a perfect match to any dishes with lemony flavors.

WP runners kept up with the pack last Saturday in Richland at an invitational against 60 middle school and high school teams full of tough competition. The highlight of the day for WP cross country coach Joanna Lanning was seeing middle school runner Emily Adams blaze past the competition in the 2-mile middle school race with first place and a time of 13:06.75. Even suffering from a cold, Lanning said Adams was in it to win it. "Just before the finish line (Adams) passed the runner in first place beating her by less than 2 seconds," Lanning said. "She told me this was 'her plan!'"

A special cake with a miniature fisherman was enjoyed by everyone there, with some left over for late snacks. The group presented Elmer with a propane catalytic heater for sportsmen, which he said he can use while hunting or fishing - his two favorite hobbies. . . Hazelbaker went to work for the City of Waitsburg water department in the spring of 1955, and worked there until his September 30 retirement - 18 years of service. MY RECIPES Luke Chavez

Plum Torte

Each growing season we experiment with different fruits and vegetables in the garden. While some happily flourish, others just seem to fizzle and disappoint. Through it all, the most reliable producer, year after year, has been our purple plum tree. Easy to take care of, and quick growing, the branches of this tree are always heavy with fruit by the start of fall. From pies, cakes, chutneys, and jams, this time of year is always marked by the flavor of sweet, backyard stone fruit. These dark purple plums, small and unassuming, turn a brilliant garnet red when baked. Recently, I came across a recipe for this effortless torte that is a gorgeous way to highlight the flavors of fresh fruit.

- Ingredients:
- 1 cup sugar
 - ½ cup unsalted butter, softened
 - 1 cup all-purpose flour, sifted
 - 1 teaspoon baking powder
 - 1 teaspoon ground cardamom
 - ½ teaspoon ground ginger
 - Pinch of salt
 - 1 teaspoon vanilla extract
 - 2 eggs
 - 12 purple plums, pitted and halved
 - Sugar and cinnamon for dusting
 - Fresh lemon juice
 - Fresh whipped cream

Directions:

Preheat oven to 350 degrees. Grease a 9 or 10-inch springform pan and set aside.

In a mixing bowl, cream the sugar and butter until fluffy. Add the flour, baking powder, cardamom, ginger, salt, eggs, and vanilla. Beat until a thick, smooth batter is formed. Batter will be on the stiff side.

Spoon the batter into the prepared pan and use a rubber spatula to evenly spread smooth. Arrange the plum halves, skin side up, across the top. Lightly sprinkle some sugar and a little lemon juice to the top. Adjust the amount of sugar depending on how sweet the plums are. Then, sprinkle the top with about ½ to 1 teaspoon of ground cinnamon.

Set pan on middle rack of oven and bake for about 1 hour. Check center with a toothpick for doneness. Remove and allow to cool in pan. Serve room temperature or slightly warm with whip cream.

Notes:

This is the kind of elegant yet easy to prepare dessert recipe that is great to keep on hand for memorable entertaining. You can experiment with other fresh stone fruits when they are at peak ripeness; peaches, cherries, or apricots would all be delightful in this recipe. You could also try it with sliced apples or pears, summer berries or even fresh cranberries. The key is to choose seasonal fruits that are perfectly ripe. While the dense lightly spiced batter rises and bakes, the fruit turn tender-sweet.

You can adjust the spices in the batter. Add nutmeg or clove for stronger spice notes. Or to brighten things, add some finely grated lemon or orange zest.

This week, we had a delightful visit from a group of friends and family. After a lovely meal centered around Linda's perfect pot roast, I served this torte with some fresh whipped cream. A perfect end to an excellent dinner party. Share this torte at your next gathering. Enjoy!
