Gobel Easily Wins Re-election

THE TIMES

WAITSBURG – Strong community support sends incumbent Waitsburg Mayor Walt Gobel into his sixth term after receiving 213 votes in Waitsburg's preliminary city election results calculated Monday night. First-time mayoral challengers Debra Callahan had 63 votes and Delores Nettles had 34 votes.

Based on preliminary results, the council will remain unchanged, with the exception of Kate Hockersmith, who will replace Callahan. Hockersmith gave longtime Waitsburg council frontrunner Kevin House a run for his money this year by receiving 254 votes to House's 260, in her first bid for a council seat.

Incumbent council members Marty Dunn (235 votes), K.C. Kuykendall (212 votes), and Karl Newell (201 votes) retained their seats with challenger Karen Gregutt falling just short of a fifth-place seat with 193 votes. Final election results will be certified on April 20.

Karen Gregutt and Markeeta Little Wolf received two write-in votes each for mayor. Little Wolf also received five write-in votes for council. Other council write-ins were (as spelled on the ballots): John Stellwagen and Debra Callahan with two votes each. Stan Bly, Jim Davidson, Ken Beasley, Gerry Baker, Clint Reser, Jerrod Crow, Mary L. Philipps, Rhonda Coufal, Christopher Lee Phillipps, and Ryan Araya each received one write-in vote.

Suspect in '96 Dayton Murder Captured

BENJAMIN OROZCO IS TO BE EXTRADITED FROM MEXICO

THE TIMES

DAYTON – Columbia County Prosecutor Rea Culwell announced on Friday that Mexican law enforcement officials have arrested 42-year-old Benjamin Orozco, who is wanted for a 1996 murder in Dayton.

Orozco was taken into custody last week in San Francisco, Nayarit, Mexico. He is expected to be extradited to Columbia County within the next two months.

Orozco faces a charge of second-degree murder in the shooting death of Lance Terry in downtown Dayton on July 7, 1996. He is also charged with first-degree assault for wounding David Eaton.

In a press release, Culwell said that she and Sheriff Rocky Miller have been working with the FBI to locate Orozco. "Through the work of an FBI agent in cooperation with Mexican authorities, Orozco was located and arrested," the release said.

The shooting incident began when Terry and Eaton were driving in downtown Dayton and were flagged down by Orozco and another man. According to the press release, "Words were exchanged between the men and Lance Terry got out of the car. At one point, Orozco drew a gun and shot Terry, killing him. David Eaton got out of the car to help Terry and was also shot by Orozco. Eaton suffered gunshot wounds to his hand and knee.

Orozco is believed to have immediately fled Columbia County, and ultimately, the United States.

WCD Features New Historical ATV Cruise

Evening ride will be part of ever-expanding annual event for Waitsburg

By Dena Wood | THE TIMES

WAITSBURG – Spring is in the air and Waitsburg Celebration Days is a mere six weeks away. Tickets are already on sale for several highlight events of what looks to be a fun-filled family weekend, May 20-22.

The weekend's signature event – the 35-mile Karen's Ride ATV Poker Run – has been adapted to allow participants to play an unlimited number of poker hands this year. Hands may be purchased at a discounted $10 rate through May 16, and will be $15 each after that date.

And an additional ride, a Historical Sunset Cruise, has been added to the schedule on Friday night. Riders on the Sunset Cruise, organized by Andy and Denise Winnett, will check in at the fairgrounds on Friday evening and depart in groups of ten vehicles, for a guided tour noting historical sites of interest. The cruise will take Saturday's poker run route in reverse.

All guide stops aren't yet finalized, but possibilities include and Boy Scout and Girl Scout cabins, Coppei Falls, Segraves Dance Hall, Mt. Pleasant, the Town of Gross, and more. Locals with ancestral ties to the locations will provide information about each site.

After the cruise, participants will return to the fairgrounds where they can hang out around a bonfire and enjoy beverages in the nearby beer garden. The Historical Sunset Cruise is limited to 50 vehicles.

Tent and RV dry camping will once again be available for $10 per night, on Friday and Saturday nights, on the east side of the fairgrounds.

Saturday's events include an American Legion Breakfast at Town Hall, a parade, an antique auto show, live music at Preston Park, a visit from the Tri-Cities Steel Drum Band, and kid's games in the park. Following the Poker Run, ATV's and bystanders can enjoy a challenge course and mud pit at the fairgrounds, followed by the annual Burger, Bands, & Brew dinner and dance.

BRIEF

Homeowners to Weigh In on Hist. Districts

DAYTON – Property owners in two Dayton historic districts are being asked their opinion on how, or whether, the districts should operate going forward.

Advisory ballots were mailed by the city on Friday to homeowners in the Southside Historic District and the Washington Street historic. The ballots ask property owners to choose one of three options as their preferred: 1. Dissolve the district 2. Retain the district, but change the review process to “advisory review.” 3. Maintain the district as it is, with mandatory certificate of appropriateness approval.

The voting is intended to be “advisory to the city council” only. Council members will make the final determination on the future of the districts.

The final day for homeowners to return ballots is April 21. Ballots will be counted on May 2nd at the Dayton City Council chambers.

The Dayton Historic Preservation Commission will hold a Voter Forum on April 13 to answer questions on the advisory ballot and the historic districts. The forum will be at the St. Joseph's Catholic Church Parish Hall across from City Hall, from 7 – 8 p.m.

Nealey, Walsh Discuss Non-Budget Issues

During my interview with Representatives Terry Nealey and Maureen Walsh on March 24, we spent more than half our time talking about the supplemental state budget the legislature failed to agree on during this year's regular session. That discussion was covered in-depth in last week's issue.

Since then, the legislature has passed a supplemental budget that adds $191 million in spending for such things as homelessness, mental health and alleviating a state-wide teacher shortage. The House and Senate also agreed to take $190 from reserves to pay for extra costs due to last year's wildfires.

To maintain their required four-year balanced budget, the legislature engaged in some funds-shifting from the public works accounts and other adjustments that avoided tax increases, according to news accounts.

But that's not why I'm writing this. Our discussion on the 24th also got into a number of non-budget issues.

The first is ballot initiatives that were recently passed or are likely to show up on state-wide ballots this November.

The first is a measure passed by voters last fall requiring a sales tax cut if the legislature doesn't enact a constitutional amendment to require a 2/3 vote of the legislature, or voter approval, before any tax increase is implemented. That one's now off the table, Nealey said.

"The Superior Court struck that down in King County, and now it's in front of the (state) Supreme Court, but I doubt it will be reversed," Nealey said.

Nealey described a couple of the issues he thinks the legislature needs to be ready to tackle, based on upcoming initiatives. One is a minimum wage, which may actually be the subject of two competing ballot initiatives.

"Right now there's (an initiative) at $13.50, and it's phased in over four years, if I remember right. But there may be others at $15 or so," he said.

"There's been some pressure on the legislature. Do we want to usurp that and come up with a different plan that may be more reasonable and maybe takes longer to kick it in and maybe to a lesser level?"

But Nealey said nothing ended up

Trump Leaves Conservative Establishment Arrogant and Unmoored

By Joe Scarborough, Special to The Washington Post

When members of Manhattan's media elite come to Mark Halperin's home for dinner, Halperin likes to ask his guests whether they have spent more time in Paris or Staten Island. More often than not, his guests select the destination that does not offer regular ferry service from Battery Park.

Halperin's dinner quiz provides a glimpse into what conservatives have long mocked as the cloistered existence of liberal elites who report on a nation they don't understand. Republican critics have long complained that these media elites are schooled, spend their summers and live most of their lives in urbane enclaves that provide little insight into how the rest of America lives.

But in 2016, conservative commentators are sounding as cocooned from their own political party as any liberal writing social commentary for the New Yorker or providing political analysis for ABC News. Even after the passing of Antonin Scalia and the Paris and San Bernardino, Calif., attacks, many right-leaning pundits are spending their days scolding readers and declaring that no true conservative or God-fearing Christian could support Donald Trump. This simmering rage has now risen to such a level that many conservative opinion shapers are spending their waking hours coping with a festering Zapruder-like obsession over video frames of the Corey Lewandowski-Michelle Fields confrontation while obsessing over the GOP front-runner's latest embarrassing gaffe.

Even as the Manhattan billionaire is enduring his most dreadful period of the campaign, attacks against Trump have reached new heights, with commentators focusing their withering criticism on supporters, ignoring the fact that many of those same voters helped make Ronald Reagan president, Newt Gingrich speaker of the House and Marco Rubio a U.S. senator.

But now these voters, formerly called common-sense conservatives, are considered drug-addled losers who are too stupid to determine what is in their best interest. The left-wing's "What's the Matter With Kansas?" is now the GOP establishment's "What the Hell's Up With Upstate New York?"

The March 28th edition of National Review ran a column that described Trump as a "Father-Fuhrer" for poor white men raised without a strong male figure. "It is easy to imagine a generation of young men being raised without fathers and looking out the window like a kid waiting for Daddy to come home," National Review's Kevin Williamson wrote, "waiting for the Father-Fuhrer figure they have spent their lives imagining."

Williamson concluded that white working class men victimized by globalization were not actually victims at all, but rather losers whose own poor choices have led them down a path of "welfare dependency, drug and alcohol addiction, and family anarchy."

It is not quite as rosy a lens as what conservative writers once used to focus on these same Reagan Democrats. "The white American underclass is in thrall to a vicious, selfish culture whose main products are misery and used heroin needles," wrote Williamson.

"Donald Trump's speeches make them feel good. So does OxyContin."

Wow. Imagine the reaction from William F. Buckley if such an article were written about the same voters who helped propel candidates like Reagan, Gingrich and Bush 43 to power.

Williamson, of whom I am an admirer, is not alone in launching such blistering broadsides against GOP voters. My friend Erick Erickson provided an equally rough assessment of white working-class Trump followers in an April 1 tweet:

"A lot of Trump voters have failed at life and blame others for their own poor decisions. They're using Trump as a vehicle for revenge."

Not to be outdone, in the latest issue of National Review, James Kirchick wrote that what was most significant about Trump's rise was that "he has mainstreamed white racial grievance to a point unprecedented in post-Civil Rights Era America. That it has taken this most improbable of figures - a thrice-married, multimillionaire New York real-estate magnate and celebrity television star with an Orthodox Jewish daughter - to achieve what no hooded Klansman or backwoods neo-Nazi could ever have hoped of doing makes his feat all the more astonishing."

Actually, what is most astonishing is the rising level of rage among Trump's political enemies from inside the Republican establishment. Many of my conservative friends are sounding as arrogant and unmoored as left-wing pundits let loose on MSNBC during the Bush years.

Suggesting that faithful Christians and life-long conservatives like my brother cannot support Trump while believing in Jesus is offensive enough. But denigrating millions of working-class Americans let down by a quarter century of Bush-Clinton rule as drug addicts or white supremacists is even more destructive to the conservative cause.

Like many Republican critics of Trump, my first, second and third choices did not survive the early stages of Trumpism. I still believe Jeb Bush would have been the best president to sit in the Oval Office since Ronald Reagan. And if John Kasich is still campaigning when Connecticut Republicans go to the polls, he will get my vote. But I've stormed the barricades enough over the past 20 years to know that there is always another fight beyond the one that promises to bring about a magnificent victory or bloody political end.

The Democratic landslide of 1964 was followed by Reagan's rise in 1966. The shock of Clinton's win in 1992 was followed quickly by the first Republican majority in 40 years. And Barack Obama's sweeping victories in 2008 and 2012 were countered in short order by devastating legislative defeats for Democratic candidates.

The conservative movement, the Republican Party and our constitutional republic will survive Donald Trump's candidacy. Maybe it's best to hold off on the political purges for now and believe, like Reagan, that our best days just may lie ahead.

USING GOOGLE MAPS MAY REDUCE GRAY MATTER IN BRAIN

By Karen Turner, Special to The Washington Post

A Google Maps error has been sending tourists seeking "Mt. Rushmore, SD" to the wrong location for nearly five years now. Storm Mountain Center, a retreat center located some 13 miles from the real Mt. Rushmore, has repeatedly asked Google Maps to update the Mt. Rushmore address. But whatever fixes proved temporary for unknown reasons -- and as of this writing, the address is still wrong.

Eventually, the center has resorted to installing a large sign at the front of their driveway instructing travelers that their electronic devices are wrong about Mt. Rushmore's location. Despite this, guest services manager Ashley Wilsey told the Kansas City Star that she regularly encounters a near-constant flow of tourists mistakenly navigating to the center.

Although Google Maps is fast becoming the ultimate authority on navigation, the program is proving vulnerable to mistakes and hackers with results that at times can be catastrophic.

One of the latest blunders involved a company accidentally bulldozing the wrong house due to faulty Google Maps directions. Google took responsibility for the maps error. In this case, two different houses were shown as being in the same location, a Google spokeswoman told CNN.

Then there was the case of a seemingly random Wisconsin murder that investigators say might be due to a Google Earth mix up. Police say that they discovered that the murdered couple's address was switched with another house on the online map - that of the president of a local bank who had received death threats. In 2010, Nicaragua blamed an accidental invasion of Costa Rica on incorrect Google Maps information.

These cases shed light on the software's susceptibility to errors and hacks. Google Maps is built on layers of information obtained from satellite images as well as photographs taken by Street View cars, which have driven and photographed more than 7 million miles of roads. Google also crowdsources location information through Map Maker, which allows users to directly update local addresses and details. An unknown number of people are employed by the company to comb through these maps for inaccuracies.

But despite this multi-faceted system, location bugs and mistakes still happen. Trolls and pranksters have taken advantage of the crowdsourced feature by changing businesses to offensive names or by doodling on the map interface. One showed the mascot for Google's mobile operating system, Android, urinating on the Apple logo in an area of Pakistan.

More explicit hacks have also proved that Google Maps is easily accessible to outsiders. Bryan Seely revealed vulnerabilities in Google Maps in 2014 when he hacked into Google Map's business listings and changed the phone number for the San Francisco FBI office and Washington D.C. Secret Service. In a Gizmodo article, Seely described a world of con artists who exploit the feature's vulnerabilities with ease by switching business listings and conning unsuspecting callers. He blames Google's less-than-stellar verification system. "Who is gonna think twice about what Google publishes on their maps? Everyone trusts Google implicitly and it's completely unwarranted and it's completely unsafe," Seely told Valleywag in an interview last year. He also mentioned that he has been paid by companies like Microsoft to spam Google Maps in the past.

Then there's the human error element, such as the case of American tourist, Noel Santillan, who drove six hours in the wrong direction in Iceland through wintry conditions due to a small spelling error he entered into Google Maps. For those misguided Mt. Rushmore tourists, even a large metal sign instructing them to turn around couldn't deter them from total GPS obedience. Some researchers have suggested that GPS dependence is becoming more and more common, and are worried about unforeseen effects. Are we collectively losing our learned sense of direction?

Neuroscience studies suggest that yes, Google Maps and GPS systems may indeed be negatively impacting our brains. Research at McGill University compared the brains of GPS versus non-GPS users and found that non-GPS users had more gray matter and higher functionality in their hippocampuses than those that relied on their devices. The hippocampus is responsible for memory and spatial navigation, the latter of which uses visual cues to create a cognitive map that assists with directionality. An earlier study showed that London taxi drivers, well-versed in the complex map of the city, had much larger hippocampuses than non-taxi drivers. There is also some correlation between those with a more developed hippocampus and lower chances of Alzheimers.

Veronique Bohbot, a neuroscientist who worked on McGill's GPS study, suggests that we limit our GPS use to new destinations only and attempt to build up our cognitive maps by navigating to frequently visited destinations on our own, she said in an article on Phys.org.

Given recent errors, our memories might wind up being more accurate than Google Maps itself.

Local Runners Take Fifth in 100K Palouse Relay

WAITSBURG HAS BEEN REPRESENTED IN 100 K FOR LAST FIVE YEARS

By Dena Wood | THE TIMES

A group of Waitsburg folks (and a WSU student from India) kicked off spring break by running the 62-mile Palouse 100K Relay in Pullman on Sun, April 3. The race was originally called the Washington State University 100K Relay & Solo Race and was started by the Palouse Road Runners and WSU in 1990 as part of the WSU centennial celebration.

Waitsburg resident Christy House said a group from Waitsburg, with the name BEERRUN, has participated in the race for the last five years, though the individual runners vary from year-to-year.

Apart from leaving and entering Pullman, the scenic course runs over 62 miles through rolling farmland, up and down canyons, and along the Snake river.

"It's just a fun thing to be a part of and do with a group of people that love to run. Everyone is really supportive, but some of the legs are pretty tough," House said.

This year's group was particularly competitive, completing the course in 8 hrs. 54 minutes, to come in 5th place out of 39 teams. Last year BEERRUN completed the course in 9 hrs. 39 minutes for 24th place.

This year's BEERRUN runners were (l to r): John Jeshurun Michael, Lanny Adams, Ann Adams, Lori Dyer, Emily Adams, Tom House, Skylar Wood, E.J. Meserve (not shown) and Marci Jo (Lanning) Martinez (not shown). Group members have varied from year-to-year, but a group from Waitsburg has participated in the 100K for each of the last five years. This year's group was especially competitive and came in fifth out of 39 teams.

being done regarding a minimum wage in this year's session. "We talked about it, but it never got any momentum," he said.

The other initiative will be "cap and trade" or carbon tax. "It's really interesting," Nealey said. "There's two different environmentalist factions. One likes the cap and trade and one likes the carbon tax. They tried to resolve their differences, and I guess that failed. So we may have both of them."

We also talked at length about the state's Public Records Act, and a bill that Nealey co-sponsored, which would have put some limitations on requests that some jurisdictions think are abuses by information requesters.

Nealey said that the main purpose of the bill, which did not make it through the process this year, would have been to stem abusive requests for large volumes of information, which many jurisdictions feel have no purpose other than to muck up the works. "Vindictive, or vexatious, the term is," Nealey said, "which means they're just trying to harass."

"It's a tough and fine line to draw," he added. "We want open transparency."

Nealey said the purpose of the bill was to address the abusers. "Especially for local and small agencies, which (the requests) can bring them to their knees." These agencies can't afford the staff or technology to effectively meet these requests, he said.

Nealey and Walsh mentioned a local case in which the Town of Starbuck has been sued by a Spokane attorney because he claims they didn't respond to a records request, though the city claims it was never received.

Nealey said that the state auditor's office has conducted a study to estimate the overall cost to jurisdictions in Washington to handle public records requests. That data should be released soon, and he expects the issue to be brought up again in next year's session.

Walsh discussed a bill that passed this session which provided money to an "Opportunity Pathways Account" to fund charter schools in the state. This bill, she said, would "keep us legit as far as not taking basic ed. money for experimental schools."

Nealey

Walsh

Walsh said that the bill, which was strongly opposed by teachers' unions, may be challenged in the courts, but she hopes will be upheld.

"We're talking about 1,000 kids out of a million-plus that we can offer this alternative education system," Walsh said. She said that there are currently eight charter schools established in Washington, and the limit under current law is 40.

Walsh said that the state's charter schools so far have been targeting low-income, at-risk kids. "There were Democrats who were very, very committed to allowing" charter schools, she said.

"We've got a 60 to 70 percent graduation rate in this state, which is terrible," Walsh added, "so if we can bump that, offering an alternative method of education for these kids, I'm all for it."

Walsh also noted that 40 percent of charter school teachers are people of color.

I asked our two local members of the House of Representatives about their plans for running for re-election this year. Their decisions are complicated by the fact that our local state senator, Mike Hewitt, has announced his retirement.

"We're both going to run," they said, more or less in unison. "But we don't know for what spot just yet," Nealey added. "That's a fair way to answer it." So stay tuned regarding which of our House members may try to jump to the Senate.

Retirement Closes Two Dayton Businesses

Jacci Wooten stands by a display of yarns that will be on sale at 40% off through April 16, as Wooten prepares to close the doors of Jacci's Yarn Basket. After several failed sale attempts Wooten says she just had to "pick a date" and retire. Wooten will continue to sell her handiwork online through her Etsy shop.

JACCI'S YARN BASKET WAS JACCI WOOTEN'S THIRD CAREER

By Dena Wood | THE TIMES

DAYTON – After several failed attempts to sell her business over the last three years, Jacci's Yarn Basket owner, Jacci Wooten, is closing her doors. The store's stock and fixtures are marked at 40% off now through April 16, when Wooten will officially retire.

Wooten said the yarn shop is her "third career." She spent three years as a librarian at the University of Idaho Law Library, and then spent 16 years as a hairstylist in Moscow, Ida.

Wooten and her husband, Tom, knew they wanted to retire in the Walla Walla area and moved to Dayton from Moscow with that in mind. Wooten opened Jacci's in Dayton in 2005.

"Knitting is just something I've always done," she said. "It comes naturally, so this is both a hobby and a business. It's something I do whenever and wherever. I'm just a knitter."

Wooten says the bulk of her business comes from out-of-area customers, with a few loyal Dayton customers.

"Knitting groups from the Tri-Cities will come over to knit, then go eat and shop. And travelers often stop in," she said. "I'm not sure people realized what an asset the shop was to Dayton," she added.

Wooten says she's done a good amount of mail-order business over the last four years as well. One woman from Maryland, who stopped in the shop as she was bicycling across America with her husband a number of years ago, still calls and places large orders with Wooten several times a year.

Wooten said several parties have attempted to purchase the business over the years, including a deal that just fell through. Most of them want to move the business to Walla Walla and they just weren't able to find an affordable storefront over there, Wooten said.

At 73, Wooten said it was finally time to just "pick a date" to go ahead and close shop. "The time is right to retire," she said. April 16 is that date.

Retiring won't mean an end to knitting, however. Wooten will continue to knit for fun, but has also opened a shop on Esty.com, jacciscustomhandknit, where she sells her quality handiwork. Jacci currently specializes in sweaters, cowls, hats, and scarves.

When asked what she's anticipating in her retirement, Wooten said, "I'm kind of looking forward to just being able to go to Andy's in the middle of the week!"

Jacci's Yarn Basket will be open regular store hours, now through April 16.

HOMETOWN CARPETS ROLLS UP THE RUG

By Dena Wood
THE TIMES

DAYTON – After spending a lifetime working in the carpet industry, Hometown Carpets & More owner Steve McMunn says he and business partner Teeny McMunn are ready to call it quits.

The store, located at 242 Main St. in Dayton, is liquidating stock and will close its doors for good in the next month or two.

McMunn says he still loves the work and the people, but was forced into the decision due to a lack of available labor installers.

McMunn, who sub-contracts out installation, says help was easy to find following the economic downturn in 2009. But as the economy has picked up, it has become more and more difficult to find labor willing to drive out to Dayton, especially for smaller installations.

"It's been really fun. It really has. But finding good help is keeping me awake at night and I'm too old for that," the 73-year-old said.

McMunn graduated from Dayton High School and went to work for Davis-Kaser Furniture in Walla Walla, which he bought out in 1977. Since then, he has operated carpet and flooring stores in Spokane, Tri-Cities, Deer Park and Walla Walla.

In the 1980's, Teeny McMunn came on board as a partner. After leaving Spokane, they owned and operated an Abbey's Carpet franchise in Walla Walla for many years.

Steve McMunn said he originally intended to retire in 2011 when the Walla Walla building was sold and the stock was moved to Dayton for liquidation. Instead, the partners ended up reopening the store, on a smaller scale, in Dayton, where McMunn says he has served customers since the 1960's.

Steve McMunn says difficulty finding available installers played a role in his and business partner Teeny McMunn's decision to close the doors on Hometown Carpets & More. The store owners hope to liquidate their current stock and remnants by next month.

Today, they operate the shop jointly, with Steve working in the mornings, and Teeny covering the afternoons. The store marked its five-year anniversary in Dayton on April 1.

McMunn said the business has done well and they were often able to call in larger crews from Spokane and Walla Walla to cover bigger jobs, including the courthouse, hospital, Catholic parish, library and schools.

"Dayton has supported us really, really well. As many people as were able helped keep the business local and the support from people in the local area is very much appreciated," Teeny said.

"I was talking with a vendor-rep who said seeing us go was like closing a good book. We've been in business 30 years and I agree," she added.

McMunn said he and his wife, Joan, live on a 5-acre farm and he has plenty to keep him busy. They also plan to make time to travel and visit family, which they have not been able to do in the past.

McMunn says they will liquidate the store's roll and remnant inventory over the next couple of months.

Teeny says that, at 65, she's too young to retire and is looking forward to opening a new chapter in her life and has several job opportunities on the table.

The store is currently open from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Tuesday through Friday, until the majority of the stock is sold.

"We'll be selling things as cheap as we would ever consider. Just come down and ask to see what we have," Steve McMunn said.

DR. RACHEL DEININGER WILL BECOME PRIMARY DENTIST IN DAYTON OFFICE

By Ken Graham | THE TIMES

DAYTON – Alder Family Dental has announced that Dr. Rachel Deininger has begun serving patients in their Dayton office and will soon become the primary dentist in that office.

Dr. Deininger will take over the practice that Alder purchased from Dr. Norm Passmore last year and continues to operate at its Main Street location in Dayton.

Dr. Deininger has been in practice for about seven years, and joined Alder Family Dental in September. She is a California native and a graduate of Walla Walla University.

at Dayton General Hospital. The couple has a three-year-old daughter and one-year-old son.

Alder has also announced that Dr. Passmore will return to the office to work on a temporary basis during the transition. He told The Times he expects to work only through June. Dr. Deininger will work one day per week during the interim period, while Dr. Passmore works two days per week.

Alder Family Dental has its main office in Walla Walla and also recently purchased a practice in Pendleton. It is owned by Dr. William Sharkey and Dr. Graham McEntire.

PASSMORE TO RUN FOR COMMISSIONER

THE TIMES

DAYTON - Dr. Norm Passmore told The Times on Tuesday that he plans to run for the District 1 seat on the Columbia County Board of Commissioners. That position is currently held by Dwight Robanske.

"This is something that I've been considering for quite awhile," he said. "I think it's time."

Passmore sold his Dayton dental practice to Alder Family Dental late last year, and is currently working part time in that office during its transition period (see article at left.)

Filing for elections this year begins May 16. Robanske's position, as well as the District 2 position held by Mike Talbott are open this year.

Robanske is finishing his fourth four-year term, having first been elected in 2000.

Mary Phillips and Waitsburg Clinic Receive Commercial Club Awards

By Dena Wood | THE TIMES

WAITSBURG – The Waitsburg Commercial Club awarded the 2016 Waitsburg Community Service Award – formerly known as the Citizen of the Year Award – to longtime resident and tireless volunteer, Mary Phillips, at their annual meeting on Tuesday, April, 5. Phillips joins the ranks of more than 50 individuals to receive the award, beginning with Ernest Kison in 1962 and continuing through Kate Hockersmith in 2015.

Beginning in 2015, the Commercial Club decided to broaden their recognition base and honor a Business of the Year. Last year, that first award went to Waitsburg Grocery. This year, the Waitsburg Clinic was named Business of the Year.

Phillips was chosen in response to a joint letter of recommendation submitted by Larry and Deanne Johnson and Ike and B.A. Keve. The nomination letter reads as follows:

This is an important year in the life of Waitsburg, being the 150th anniversary of its founding. That being said, I believe we should look long and hard at the families that have lived, supported, and worked in our community for many years.

One individual comes to my mind immediately, and that is Mary Phillips. She is a longtime citizen of Waitsburg. Even though she moved away for a period, she did finally return. And when she did return she didn't miss a beat.

One thing that bears mentioning, is Mary had a birthday party for her former employer Louie Gammon, who was, at that time, confined to Booker (Rest Home). All appreciated the attention.

Mary showed us all what real love is, by our witnessing her inspirational and loving care of her husband, Bud. She is quite a woman.

Mary is very caring individual, making sure her relatives and friends, like Bernard Donnelly, who was also confined to Booker Rest Home, received the attention he deserved. She went to Dayton to visit Bernard, she took him on drives and to St. Joseph Catholic Church for Mass. How he loved that! Many from Waitsburg were invited and attended, as did several other people from the area. It was evident how much it meant to him.

Mary has been a real blessing to St. Mark ever since she moved back home. She has been St. Mark's Alter Society President since 2011 and will be a hard act for anyone to follow.

For the last five years Mary has been a member of the board of Main St. Dayton Charities, a non-profit Washington State corp., which owns and maintains the non-profit campus that is used by St. Vincent de Paul and Project Timothy crisis services agency for Columbia County. The parishes of St Joseph and St Mark founded both charities. The two charities were at risk because of rising rents. Main St. Dayton Charities purchased the property the two charities occupy for their charitable services and maintain it to meet the needs of their services.

Several years ago, Mary purchased a home in Waitsburg, on Fourth Street. This home had once belonged to the Wilson family, the parents of Mrs. Carolyn Bruce. After a few years, she donated this home to the Historical Society, so their campus could be expanded. Mary joined the Historical Society board, and has been serving since. She has worked in numerous ways towards making the Bruce Mansion complex beautiful and

Madeline Erikson Receives West Point Acceptance

WA-HI STUDENT IS A TOP-LEVEL HIGH SCHOOL MARKSMAN

By Dena Wood | THE TIMES

WAITSBURG – Walla Walla High School senior Madeline Erikson officially accepted her appointment to the US Military Academy at West Point by signing her letter of intent to compete on their NCAA Rifle Team on March 29.

Erikson did not attend school in Waitsburg, but three previous generations of her family did. She is the daughter of Ellis and Kristin Erikson of Walla Walla and Trisha Maxwell of Walla Walla; granddaughter of Roland Erikson and Sherri Erikson, both of Waitsburg; and great-granddaughter of the late Betty Jo and Bernard Donnelly, of Waitsburg. Many Waitsburg residents will recall Bernard as an avid firearms collector.

According to a Walla Walla School District news release, Erikson enrolled in the JROTC Rifle Marksmanship class as a freshman and is the second Wa-Hi rifle athlete to sign with West Point in two years.

"I took rifle marksmanship as an elective. I hunt and shoot with my dad, so I thought it would be a good way to improve my accuracy. I never really thought of it as a varsity sport," Erikson said.

Erikson, who also played softball and basketball, quickly became competitive and returned as a sophomore to take the advanced marksmanship class. By her junior year she held the position of JROTC squad leader at the rank of cadet staff sergeant. She helped instruct new cadets and made her first appearance at a national championship match last year.

"I traveled with the team to the Army National Match at Camp Perry, Ohio in February during Winter Storm Neptune. It was 20 degrees below zero and blowing clouds of ice crystals. I'll never forget that trip," Erikson said.

A solid performance in the Army National finals solidified her standing on the highly competitive sporter class team, and she traveled to Salt Lake City, Utah, in April for the CMP Western Regional Championship.

"On the second day of the match, Madeline's rear sight on her rifle broke while she was in the middle of her kneeling set," said Wa-Hi Rifle Coach Mark Mebes "I saw the ball bearing go skipping across the floor. She just smiled, shrugged and started adjusting her point of aim based on her last shot. She still walked away with a score over 500. It takes real mental toughness to recover from an equipment failure like that and not let it ruin your score. That was when I decided to move her up to the precision team."

Erikson moved from sporter class to Olympic-Style shooting at the end of her junior year and decided she wanted to work her way onto the NCAA team. Realizing that it would be a challenge to gain the notice of a college coach in just one year, Erikson approached Mebes and told him she wanted to shoot at West Point.

Erikson said she spent last summer shooting as much as she could, attended a marksmanship camp in Lebanon, Oregon, and began contacting college coaches. By December, several coaches had responded, and the University of Texas El Paso flew her down for an official NCAA visit.

ART JARVIS IS RENTON SCHOOL DISTRICT INTERIM SUPT.

Jarvis began career in Waitsburg in 1965

WAITSBURG – Former Waitsburg teacher, principal, and superintendent Ed Larsen and wife Lynna were pleased to learn that former Waitsburg teacher Art Jarvis was selected as Renton, Wash. School District interim superintendent through 2017.

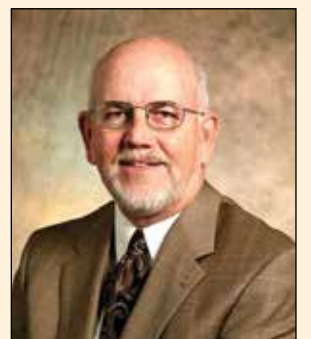

Jarvis and Larsen began their education careers together in Waitsburg in 1965 where Jarvis taught high school classes, was assistant football coach and girls' basketball coach. Larsen taught middle school social studies before becoming high school principal and eventually, district superintendent.

"Ed and Art had their first jobs together and we had kids the same age," Lynna said. "They weren't here long, but we remained friends for many, many years. He kept moving around and getting promoted until we kind of lost track of them the last couple of years."

A friend of Waitsburg resident Barb Knopp recently sent her a newspaper clipping from the Renton Reporter, which mentioned Jarvis' most recent assignment, along with his start in Waitsburg.

According to the Reporter article, Jarvis has served as a junior and senior high school teacher and managed school district operations such as human resources, curriculum and instruction, special education, finance and others, over the course of his 50-year career.

He has served as a superintendent for 28 years in small, medium and large districts including Tacoma, Shelton, Enumclaw and South Whidbey. Jarvis was selected by peers as the 2009 Washington State Superintendent of the Year.

Waitsburg Teams Shine at Carnival of Speed

CARDINAL GIRLS AND BOYS PLACE IN TOP FIVE; ADAMS NAMED TOP FEMALE PERFORMER

By Ken Graham | THE TIMES

MILTON-FREEWATER – Waitsburg junior Emily Adams took three firsts and a second, racking up 38 points to lead the Waitsburg girls to a fourth-place finish at Friday's Carnival of Speed track and field meet at Mac-Hi here. The Waitsburg boys took fifth among nearly 25 schools competing.

Waitsburg was the top finisher among Washington state schools, including Wa-Hi, in both boys' and girls' divisions.

Based on performances, Adams was named top female athlete at the meet. She won both the 1500 and 3000 meter events, as well as the triple jump. She was second in the long jump, and scored all of her team's points.

For the Cardinal boys, Landon Callas had an outstanding day in the hurdles, finishing first in the 300 meters and third in the 110.

For his second meet in a row, Travis Crockett cleared six feet in the high jump to win the event. He was also fifth in the 100 meters.

Brandon Penner was second in the discus, and Mark Montgomery beat his personal best in the shot put by two feet to place third, with a throw ¼ inch shy of 42 feet.

Cardinal coach Jeff Bartlow said he was very pleased with the progress his team is making so far this year. "Lots to smile about," he said.

For Dayton, the meet in M-F was more disappointing. After strong performances in her last two meets, senior Angela Mascall was disqualified with a false start in the 100 meter race and finished ninth in the 200 meters.

Junior Jennifer Warren finished eighth in the triple jump.

On the boys' side, Cal Martin continued to shine in the javelin, with throw of 147 feet, five inches, which was good enough for fifth place.

LADY TIGERS DROP FIRST GAME, 9-5; RALLY FOR 9-8 WALK-OFF WIN IN NIGHTCAP

By Ken Graham | THE TIMES

PRESCOTT – The Prescott girls' softball team came up short in the first game of their double-header Saturday against Tri-Cities Prep, losing 9-5. But in the second game, the Lady Tigers rallied for a walk-off winning run in seventh inning to beat the Jaguars 9-8.

In the first game, a fourth-inning error led to four TCP runs and left Prescott trailing 5-1. Three seventh-inning runs sealed the deal for the Jaguars.

For the game, Devon Harshman had three hits and Chloe Pearson had two.

In the second game, TCP jumped on Prescott early with four first-inning runs. But the Lady Tigers fought their way back and took an 8-7 lead after six. After giving up the tying run in the top of the seventh, Deja Williams knocked in Pearson for the game-winning RBI in the bottom of the frame.

Prescott finished with 15 hits, including three each by Williams, Timber Frohreich, Pearson, and Jocelyn Granados.

Overall, the girls played really well and maintained their confidence," said Tiger coach Angie Potts. "Although they're young, they are a really solid group. We are 5-3 overall and 1-3 in league."

WALLA WALLA – The Dayton girls' softball team started out slow in the first game of their double-header here against DeSales, striking out nine times on the way to a 4-1 loss.

The Lady Bulldogs only managed two hits in the game. Those came from Hanna Becker and Megan Robins.

The Bulldog bats came alive in the second, as the team scored four runs in the third inning on their way to a 6-0 shutout win.

Mia Becker led the way with a bases-clearing triple in that fourth frame.

"Savannah McFarland pitched two complete games, as (Megan) Robins, our other pitcher, got injured in the first game," said Dayton assistant coach Desirae Jones. "Savannah did an outstanding job limiting their hits."

The Lady Bulldogs are now 3-1 in the league and 5-4 overall.

WEST POINT - FROM PAGE 7

Erikson said she really had her heart set on West Point and, even though their recruitment process is longer than other NCAA schools, she wanted to know where she stood with them before accepting another offer.

In February, her ROTC team traveled to the JROTC National Championship in Anniston, Ala., where, unknown to Erikson, West Point Rifle Coach Web Wright III, was in the audience. Web talked with her after her performance and told her he was pleased with her scores. A week later, she received a phone call from Wright.

"I answered my phone and the whole team was standing there watching me. When he told me that West Point was recruiting me I gave them a thumb's up. Everyone was hugging me while I was still on the phone with him. It was one of the best moments of my life," Erikson said.

"We are all very, very proud of Madeline," said grandmother Sherri Erikson.

Erikson will report for Basic Cadet Training and begin academy classes on June 27.
