SENIORS CELEBRATE

FEEDBACK FROM STUDENT AND COMMUNITY SURVEYS IS MOSTLY POSITIVE ON CURRENT COMBINE

By Ian Smay | THE TIMES

WAITSBURG - The Dayton and Waitsburg school boards met on May 31 to report back on feedback they received from community members, students, and parents regarding the DW athletics combine, as well as to discuss its future.

The meeting, held in the Waitsburg Elementary School library, was also attended by coaches from both schools, and lasted approximately an hour and a half. The meeting began with Dayton School Board Chairman Dan Butler stating that the proceedings should be used to help decide what is best for students in the future.

"All of us on the school boards are student-centered," Butler said to start the meeting. "What's going to be good for our kids?"

Dayton Superintendent Doug Johnson then opened by giving a report on the survey conducted by Dayton High School Principal Paul Shaber, who was not able to attend. The responses to the survey given in Dayton were almost all positive.

Most of the comments were praising the fact that there were a greater number of players on teams due to the combine. This allowed for a greater level of player safety, as kids did not have to play as long in games due to having available subs, according to Johnson. This also allowed for kids to compete for playing positions, which in turn made the teams more competitive.

The first question on Dayton's survey asked if the football combine met the needs of the kids, which had over 90 percent of respondents saying that it went either "great" or "pretty good."

Another issue addressed on the survey was the possible expansion of the combine to also include basketball, track, and softball on the high school level. Johnson said the answers were about fifty-fifty for each scenario. "None of the options received an overwhelming response," he stated.

Waitsburg's Athletic Director Stephanie Wooderchak also presented the results of a survey on the issue. The survey was given in class to students, as well as through links on the Waitsburg School District website and grading portals, and resulted in 159 responses.

The survey received many of the same responses that Dayton did, with over 90 percent of people also rating it as "great" or "pretty good." Students and parents pointed to how easily the kids from both schools

Public Input Given on Wildlife Areas

WDFW updating plans for W.T. Wooten, Asotin Creek, and Chief Joseph areas

By Michele Smith | THE TIMES

WAITSBURG - The Washington Department of Fish and Wildlife is developing new management plans for 33 wildlife areas in the state, including three in southeast Washington: Chief Joseph, Asotin Creek, and W.T. Wooten wildlife areas.

Patricia Jatczak, with the WDFW in Olympia; Bob Dice, Wildlife Area Manager for Asotin Creek and Chief Joseph; and Kari Dingman, Assistant Wildlife Area Manager for the W. T.

Wooten Wildlife Area; all spoke at Waitsburg's Town Hall on May 24, about statewide planning goals, and work that has been or is expected to be done for area wildlife species and habitats.

The purpose of the plans is to develop a set of activities, identify priority actions, identify agency goals, and ensure the lands are managed in accordance with the overall mission of the wildlife areas, which is to preserve, protect and perpetuate wildlife species, and to seek adequate funding, Jatczak said.

Jatczak said public outreach is the first phase of the project, and that public comment received from the Waitsburg meeting, as well as a meeting held last week in Clarkston, will be considered by two advisory committees in the second phase of the project.

The project will move to the final stage with completion of a draft, and the draft will be heavily reviewed and submitted to the public for comment in February 2018.

Locally, the planning teams will be made up of groups of sportsmen, homeowners adjacent to wildlife areas, the Confederated Tribes of the Umatilla, the Board of County Commissioners, and the Forest Service.

At the meeting, Dice spoke about work that has been done by the WDFW in the Chief Joseph Wildlife Area to enhance bighorn sheep, mule deer, and upland game bird populations.

The DFW has plans to revitalize and connect old trails in the newly-acquired 4-O Ranch Unit, which is located along the Grande Ronde River, to enhance elk habitat. Work is also ongoing for 23 miles of "wildlife friendly" fencing.

"Our lands are working lands. We have a great partnership with landowners," Dice said about the Asotin Creek Wildlife Area, which consists of flat benches and steep hillsides.

Dice pointed out that the creeks in that area are important for bull trout and spring Chinook salmon, and for steelhead spawning grounds.

The biggest attraction in the Asotin Creek Wildlife Area is the recreation trail on the North Fork of Asotin Creek, which is used for horses and bikes, he said.

Dice said that at Heller Bar on the Snake River there are "lots of rafters," and some issues between rafters and motorized boats at the ramp there will be addressed through a grant, which will double its size.

Last year a local team, Cole Construction, finished with some hardware, and they will return to the diamond at the 2007 Lions Club Softball Bash to take another shot at the championship. They will be among the approximately 20 softball teams from around the region that will compete in the 23rd Annual Waitsburg Lions Softball Bash this weekend.

On June 6, the Waitsburg Elementary Fourth Grade placed a Persian Witchhazel tree in the center court yard in memory of their deceased classmate, Rodrigo Espana. At a time later this summer, a public ceremony dedicating the tree and a memorial plaque will be held. The tree will be visible from the library and both hallways of the Elementary School, said Mrs. Pam Conover, Fourth Grade teacher.

For approximately half his life, Don Thomas has been a member of the Waitsburg Junior Livestock Show board. Last month, he retired as president of the board, a title he has held for over 30 years.

Waitsburg's Woody Epp has his eyes on mules these days. He is trying to drum up support to upgrade the mule races during the Days of Real Sport, noting that this year's mule riders were given a t-shirt for racing. "They went out there and risk life and limb for a t-shirt," Epp said. One rider fell off his mule in the Sunday races. He was uninjured.

She knows most of the people who walk into her courtroom. And it's not easy fining a neighbor $50 for a barking dog. "It's tough sometimes," Ann McCambridge, Waitsburg's Municipal Judge, said in her courtroom the other day. "But it's my job. I have to do it." McCambridge, 40, is among a short-list of lay jurists found only in smaller cities in rural Washington. State law empowers cities of less than 5,000 people to hire municipal judges who generally don't have any more legal training than the people who appear before them.

Fifty Years Ago June 8, 1967

What was a field of waving wheat on the Elsy Conover ranch was matted and furrowed by a few minutes of cloudburst on Thursday, June 1. Over 1 inch of rain fell on the area in less than half an hour. Water came cascading off the steep hills with floodlike force.

Mr. and Mrs. Orlie Katsel were guests of honor as over 60 friends and relatives gathered in State Park Sunday for a potluck dinner on the occasion of their 55th anniversary. Orlie confided that after a full day's activities that included a special get-together at their church in the evening - he didn't get his cows milked until 10:30 that night.

Mickey Leid was awarded $100 by Green Giant for suggesting the use of plastic bags on the lap paste pots. This is the largest cash award that has been given the Waitsburg plant under the company's suggestion system. Cecil Coverdale of Dayton received on $25 award and one $10 award. Dexter Rogers received a $10 award.

Why are Republicans getting so little done? Because their agenda is deeply unpopular.

By Paul Waldman, The Washington Post

Every new president tries to claim a mandate for his agenda, that because they won the election that means the public supports everything they want to do. But ask yourself this: Is there anything - anything - on the agenda of the Trump administration and the Republicans in Congress that enjoys the support of the majority of the public?

Let's look at a couple of examples from the biggest items on their agenda, starting with health care. The latest Kaiser Family Foundation tracking poll finds that an incredible 84 percent of Americans say that it's important that any replacement of the Affordable Care Act maintains the ACA's expansion of Medicaid. Even 71 percent of Republicans said so. Which is a problem for the GOP, because rolling back the Medicaid expansion is the centerpiece of the Republican repeal plan. They're arguing among themselves about whether it should be done slowly or quickly, but the whole point of the exercise is to undo that expansion so they can fund a large tax that mostly goes to the wealthy.

The Senate is right now tying itself in knots trying to figure out how to pass something that satisfies their conservative principles but that the public won't despise, and they may be slowly realizing it's impossible. "I don't see a comprehensive health-care plan this year," Sen. Richard Burr said yesterday, and he's probably right.

Let's move on to taxes. At yesterday's speech announcing his pullout from the Paris climate agreement, President Donald Trump made this little digression:

"Our tax bill is moving along in Congress, and I believe it's doing very well. I think a lot of people will be very pleasantly surprised. The Republicans are working very, very hard. We'd love to have support from the Democrats, but we may have to go it alone. But it's going very well."

It was certainly interesting to hear that their tax bill is moving along in

Reaction to Paris Accord Pullout is Overblown

By Ramesh Ponnuru, Bloomberg View

Reactions to President Donald Trump's withdrawal from the Paris accord on climate change are -- forgive me -- overheated. The ACLU is calling it an "assault on communities of color," for some reason, and environmental activist Tom Steyer says it's a "traitorous act of war against the American people." For his part, Trump says that staying in the agreement would have assured us a future of "lost jobs, lower wages, shuttered factories and vastly diminished economic production."

Yet Trump and his critics alike know that very little in the accord is binding on the parties to it. As a result, withdrawing from it can't have major consequences by itself.

Listen carefully to the agreement's supporters, and their real argument becomes clear: For them, staying in it increases the likelihood that the world's governments will take future steps to avert what they believe will be a climate catastrophe.

The best argument for leaving, meanwhile, is that these steps would be costly overreactions to that threat -- and reducing such consequences is a good thing. The risk that climate change will have catastrophic effects justifies investing to predict, mitigate and adapt to those effects. It doesn't justify restrictions on the use of energy.

The argument that leaving the Paris agreement will jeopardize America's global leadership also seems overblown. The decision dismays many people around the world, to be sure, just as other American decisions have dismayed many of the same people over the years. We are told that other governments will no longer trust America to keep its commitments. But it would not be a bad thing for other countries to learn that a president's say-so can't always bind future presidents.

It's a mistake, too, to see Trump's decision as a turn toward isolationism. It's true that the step cheers those in his coalition who want the U.S. to weaken its alliances and enact tariffs. But it also has the support of conservatives and Republicans who oppose those policies. That breadth of support helps explain why Trump made this move while so far refraining from tearing up NAFTA and the like.

Trump has even talked, albeit very vaguely and implausibly, about renegotiating the Paris agreement. It would be better to take a different path altogether. But we are free to go in any number of directions, since we are essentially in the same place we were when we were in the agreement.

Ramesh Ponnuru is a Bloomberg View columnist. He is a senior editor of National Review and the author of "The Party of Death: The Democrats, the Media, the Courts, and the Disregard for Human Life."

Trump Betrays the Planet

By The Washington Post Editorial Board

On Monday, the journal Nature Climate Change published a study finding that global warming's effects on major world cities could be far more devastating than previously understood. Some cities, it found, could be a staggering 14.4 degrees warmer on average by the end of the century, causing a 10.9 percent decline in gross domestic product as people work less, air and water quality decline, and more energy is needed to cool buildings.

On Thursday, President Donald Trump took a major step toward making this dystopia a reality.

In announcing that he will pull the United States out of the Paris climate agreement, Trump dealt a blow to the effort to slow climate change - but not only that. By joining Syria and Nicaragua as the only nonparticipants in the most consequential diplomatic effort of this century, he also dealt a blow to the U.S. leadership that has helped promote peace and prosperity for the past seven decades under Republican and Democratic presidents alike. Under their leadership, the United States acted with selflessness and enlightened self-interest. The traits reflected in Trump's decision are self-defeating selfishness, insecurity and myopia.

A variety of factors contributed to the nation's post-World War II economic boom, but prominent among them was energetic internationalism. The General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade (GATT), which obliged countries to meet regularly and discuss improving the atmosphere for global trade, was one of the spectacularly successful U.S.-backed institutions that helped gradually remove barriers to economic exchange and innovation.

The Paris agreement had the promise to be the 21st century's GATT, providing a framework in which countries would regularly convene and in which each nation would be expected to offer what more it could do to advance an essential global goal that no country could achieve alone - not freer trade, in this case, but heading off climate change's worst effects. The agreement bore an American stamp. It was fairer and more flexible than previous attempts to strike a global climate deal, with particular sensitivity to U.S. concerns that emissions limits not be imposed on any country.

The agreement was the world's best hope to ensure that big developing nations such as China and India did their share, addressing GOP concerns that these countries would refuse to sacrifice along with the United States. It did not lock in exactly how the United States and other nations would help. Rather, it created an international expectation of voluntary commitments from every nation, enforced by diplomatic pressure. All of Trump's arguments for withdrawing, in other words, are unfounded. He could have adjusted, even minimized, the U.S. commitment without trashing the framework.

The president said Thursday that the United States might rejoin the Paris agreement after a period of renegotiation. But given the extent to which other nations already accommodated American demands, the prospect of a radically different treaty is fanciful. So what tangible benefit does this irrational decision bring to Americans? None. None at all.

Public Broadcasting: Superfluous Yet Immortal

By George Will

As changing technologies and preferences make government-funded broadcasting increasingly preposterous, such broadcasting actually becomes useful by illustrating two dismal facts. One is the immortality of entitlements that especially benefit those among society's articulate upper reaches who feel entitled. The other fact is how impervious government programs are to evidence incompatible with their premises.

Fifty years and about 500 channels ago, the Corporation for Public Broadcasting was created to nudge Lyndon Johnson's Great Society -- it aimed to make America great for the first time -- the final inches toward perfection. Today, the CPB, which has received about $12 billion over the years, disperses the government's 15 percent of public television's budget and 10 percent of public radio's. Originally, public television increased many viewers' choices by 33 percent -- from three (CBS, NBC, ABC) to four.

Twenty-five years ago, Sen. Al Gore, defending another appropriation increase for the CPB, asked what he considered a dispositive question: "How many senators here have children who have watched 'Sesame Street' and 'Mister Rogers' Neighborhood'? ... This is one thing that works in this country." So, senators, mostly affluent, should compel taxpayers, mostly much less affluent, to subsidize the senators' children's viewing because it "works," as measured by means that Gore neglected to reveal.

Eighteen years ago, some public broadcasting officials, who understood the importance of being earnest -- and imaginative -- testified to Congress that public television's educational effects on the workforce give the economy a $12 billion boost. Fifteen years ago, however, the then-president of public television said, "We are dangerously close in our overall prime-time numbers to falling below the relevance quotient." Relevance? To what?

Today, Mick Mulvaney, director of the Office of Management and Budget, thinks we can risk terminating the CPB. This would reduce viewers' approximately 500 choices to approximately 499. Listeners to public radio might have to make do with America's 4,666 AM and 6,754 FM commercial stations, 437 satellite radio channels, perhaps 70,000 podcasts, and other internet and streaming services.

America, which is entertaining itself to inanity, has never experienced a scarcity of entertainment. Or a need for government-subsidized journalism that reports on the government. Before newspaper editorial writers inveigh against Mulvaney and in support of government subsidies for television and radio, they should answer this question: Should there be a CPN -- a Corporation for Public Newspapers?

The CPB was created "to encourage public telecommunications services which will be responsive to the interests of people." Of course: People's interests, not people's desires. The market

Congress, because there is no tax bill, neither moving along, standing still, or spinning in circles. The administration has produced nothing more than a one-page list of bullet points on taxes, and congressional Republicans haven't written a bill, either. There have been no hearings, no committee votes, nothing. This is one of those moments when it's hard to figure out if Trump is lying or genuinely doesn't realize what's going on; earlier this week he tweeted:

"The massive TAX CUTS/REFORM that I have submitted is moving along in the process very well, actually ahead of schedule. Big benefits to all!"

Yet nothing has been submitted, nothing is moving along, and nothing is ahead of schedule.

That's partly because there are some substantive differences among Republicans about what tax reform should include, but it's also because they know that whatever bill they come up with is going to be hammered by Democrats for being an enormous giveaway to the wealthy. They could solve that problem by not making it an enormous giveaway to the wealthy, but then what would be the point?

So they realize that it's not going to be very popular. In other circumstances, that might be less of a problem - they could say, "That's OK, it's important to us, so we'll just push it through." George W. Bush passed two big tax cuts that were largely similar to what Republicans want to do now, didn't he? But there's a difference. When Bush signed his first tax cut in June 2001, his approval rating was at around 55 percent. When he passed his second tax cut in May 2003, his approval was around 65 percent (it was early in the Iraq War, when everything seemed to be going well). Right now Trump is at around or below 40 percent in many polls, so neither he nor Congress is getting the benefit of the doubt.

Are there other Republican initiatives that the public is behind? If there are, they're awfully hard to find. The Paris accord is extremely popular, so Trump's decision to pull out probably won't go over well. The overwhelming majority of the public opposes ongoing GOP efforts to defund Planned Parenthood. There's little support for the drastic cuts in government spending Republicans advocate. They're about to start a push to repeal the Dodd-Frank Wall Street reform law, which Paul Ryan, in a remarkably shameless bit of Orwellian spin, characterizes as a way to stop indulging Wall Street. But Americans aren't exactly demanding that the nation's beleaguered bankers be liberated from their crushing burden of government oversight.

The deep unpopularity of this agenda goes a long way toward explaining why Congress has gotten almost nothing done this year, despite the fact that Republicans control both houses and have a president happy to sign whatever they put on his desk. Every Republican feels nervous these days - their president is unpopular, so is their party, and there's the real possibility of a Democratic wave in 2018 that sweeps many of them from office. That's enough to make a lawmaker skittish about doing anything that might make the voters even more disgusted. So the legislative process gets dragged out for longer and longer.

Congressional Republicans complain that all the drama and scandals in the White House suck the air out of Washington and make it harder for them to focus on their agenda, which is true to a degree. But the real problem is that the public just doesn't want to buy what they're selling.

children." Big Bird, however, is more a corporate conglomerate than an endangered species. If "Sesame Street" programming were put up for auction, the danger would be of getting trampled by the stampede of potential bidders.

The argument for government-subsidized broadcasting is perversely circular: If the public were enlightened, there would be no need for government subsidies. But, by definition, an enlightened public would understand the inherent merits of subsidies by which the government picks more deserving winners than the market does.

However, since government-subsidized broadcasting exists, any argument for it would be superfluous, given what governmental inertia usually accomplishes for government enterprises. Long ago -- in January -- there was bold Republican talk about Congress restoring "regular order": There would be 12 appropriations bills and they would be enacted before the 2018 fiscal year begins Oct. 1. Instead, there probably will be another "swallow this or shutter the government" omnibus bill in which almost everything survives by sparing almost everyone the torture of choices. This is, of course, a choice.

came together to make one working unit.

"They liked how the teams came together, they liked the unity and the friendships they made," said Wooderchak.

This sentiment was echoed by DW football Head Coach Troy Larsen. "Our kids love each other. I have nothing but good things to say about it."

Between the two schools, there was very little negative feedback from those surveyed regarding this new partnership. One of the rare concerns that was voiced between the two schools were a few respondents that were afraid of the schools losing their individual identities if they were to continue the combine or add more sports to the partnership. Others voiced concerns about sports where all the coaches came from one school, such as the Dayton coaching staffs for the combined cheer and baseball.

Some coaches also said that their players were apprehensive about moving forward with more sports, with some being hard "no's" on moving forward with basketball combining in the next couple seasons.

After the reports were given on the two surveys, the discussion shifted to the future of the athletics combine. This ranged from the viability of continuing the combine to the possibility of combining more sports, or even combining all sports across both schools.

The main point of discussion when it came to the future was whether combining more sports was more of an issue of want or need for both schools. The idea of combining sports at the middle school level to test the waters was suggested. This led to talk about future numbers projections for both schools, and how this would translate to participation in sports.

The first sport discussed was high school volleyball. Johnson stated that, while there was no problem for Dayton to field a varsity team at any point in the last few years, that having a junior varsity team for volleyball (along with other sports) was sometimes an issue.

"We have not had enough students to have a rotating or robust JV program," Johnson said. He added that this issue was compounded by the fact that other programs in the league and in the area were sometimes struggling or failing to field junior varsity teams of their own. An offered solution to this problem was to play a JV schedule in a different league, such as the neighboring District 5, as well as playing against larger school's B and C squads across different sports.

While most people were in favor of expanding the combine to more sports, the next issue to discuss was the timing, as Waitsburg would have to break scheduling commitments they have already agreed to, as they are done in two year cycles.

Johnson framed the timing issue as being one of being proactive versus reactive.

"Do you try to do something and stay ahead of the curve, or wait until a solution is needed," Johnson said, about possibly combining even when the schools have enough numbers to field teams themselves, to avoid future issues.

After more discussion of future numbers, possible issues with leaving current schedules, and funding viability, opinions were heard from the many coaches in attendance. While some coaches said they were not completely ready to move ahead in their sports, most said they were okay with either outcome.

"We would be 110 percent behind buying into it, or 110 percent behind not doing it," said Roy Ramirez, Waitsburg Girls' Basketball Head Coach. Some were unequivocally behind it, with Larsen saying that "to me, it's the right time."

Members of both school boards said they were not ready to make a commitment to furthering the combine, citing a desire for more input from school and community members.

"No matter what we do, we have to support our kids. We have to be all-in," Butler said near the end of the meeting.

The issue of the future of the combines will be on both school boards' agendas at their next meetings, which will be June 7 for Dayton and June 14 for Waitsburg.

efficiently responds to the latter. Public broadcasting began as a response to what progressives nowadays call "market failure." This usually means the market's failure to supply what the public has not demanded but surely would demand if it understood its real "interest."

One reason many Americans are becoming "cord cutters," abandoning cable and satellite television, is that they want a la carte world. One reason ESPN has lost 12 million subscribers in six years is that it is an expensive component of cable and satellite packages and many of those paying for the packages rarely watch ESPN.

Compelling taxpayers to finance government-subsidized broadcasting is discordant with today's la carte impulse and raises a question: If it has a loyal constituency, those viewers and listeners, who are disproportionately financially upscale, can afford voluntary contributions to replace the government money. And advertisers would pay handsomely to address this constituency.

Often the last, and sometimes the first, recourse of constituencies whose subsidies are in jeopardy is: "It's for the

Jennifer Warren is Valedictorian, Jenna Phillips is Salutatorian for DHS Class of 2017

CAL MARTIN WILL ALSO LEAD THE PLEDGE AND TAKE ROLL CALL AS THE SENIOR CLASS PRESIDENT

By Ian Smay | THE TIMES

DAYTON – Thirty-four seniors will receive their diplomas in front of numerous loved ones and community members this Saturday in the Dayton High School Gymnasium, during Dayton's 132nd graduation ceremony. Baccalaureate will take place the night before at 7 p.m. at the United Methodist Church at 110 S. Third St.

Jennifer Warren is the Class of 2017's valedictorian, while Jenna Phillips is salutatorian. Along with Warren and Phillips, Cal Martin will also have a speaking role, leading those in attendance in the Pledge of Allegiance, and calling roll while his classmates receive their diplomas.

Warren is the daughter of Bill and Kristine Warren. Jennifer will finish her four years of high school with a perfect 4.0 GPA, putting her on the top step of the podium in a very strong senior class. She plans on attending Washington State University in the fall, and is currently planning on studying animal science, with a minor in business.

Warren was very active in extracurricular activities and sports during her time at DHS. She was a two season (football and basketball) cheerleader all four years, and has received eight varsity letters in the sport. She also received four varsity letters in track. She won multiple awards in each of these sports, including best all-around cheerleader during her senior basketball season, most inspirational for senior football, and most dedicated during both seasons of her junior year of cheerleading.

Warren held many offices and received various awards from her involvement in clubs at DHS. She was on ASB for two years, filling the roles of PR Manager this year and VP last year. During her four years in FFA, she won awards including the Rising Sun award, and held state offices for two years. She was also involved in class government, National Honor Society, Knowledge Bowl, Pep Club, Youth and Government, Girl Scouts, and YoungLife.

"Don't be afraid to get to know someone; they probably have a cool story that you could get to know," Warren said, when asked if she had advice for her fellow classmates and DHS students.

Jennifer was recently named the winner of the PEO Citizenship Award. During the summer, she plans on attending FBLA Nationals in Anaheim, going to YoungLife camp in Canada, and working for her father at the Warren Orchard.

Jenna Phillips, daughter of Liz and Dave Phillips, will complete her high school career with a 3.95 GPA. She plans on attending the University of Washington to study marketing. She said she has wanted to study marketing for about a year, due to her experiences in FBLA, making her interested in learning more about the business world. Her sister Keisha, also a DHS alumna, graduated from UW with a degree in marketing.

Phillips was an outstanding athlete at DHS, playing basketball and volleyball for four years, and winning numerous awards in both sports. She won first-team honors twice for basketball and three times for volleyball. During her senior season of volleyball, she was also named league player of the year. Phillips also was a part of the golf team her sophomore year.

On top of her athletic achievements, she has been heavily involved in extracurricular activities and clubs. She was a member of FBLA for four years, National Honor Society for three years, and class government for three years. She was a member of YoungLife all four years, yearbook staff for one year, and ASB for two years.

Her first two years of high school saw Phillips hold the title of class government VP. In her Junior year, she was ASB PR Manager, National Honor Society VP, and class government Treasurer. She was ASB President her senior year.

"I think what I enjoyed most was how close and supportive our community is and just being able to see friendly faces where I went," Phillips said when asked about what she enjoyed the most at DHS. As parting words of advice for her fellow students, Phillips said to "challenge yourself, but don't overwhelm yourself."

Cal Martin is the son of Steve and Jody Martin, and is the 2017 Class President. He finished high school with a 3.92 GPA, just missing out on top honors for his competitive class. Earlier this year, Martin signed his National Letter of Intent to play football at the University of Redlands in California, where he plans to study Engineering.

Martin was a standout athlete in football, finishing his senior year with the DW football team as a Seattle Times AP All-State MVP Finalist. His final season also saw him win first team all-league as a linebacker and second team as a tight end. Martin also played basketball and ran track all four years. Awards for these sports included being a team captain for basketball, and being a district and regional champion in track. He placed third in javelin at the 2017 WIAA State 2B track championships.

Martin was a recipient of the PEO Citizenship Award, along with Warren. He was ASB secretary twice, held a major state office in Youth & Government, and was a captain for four years on the DHS Knowledge Bowl team. Martin also held the position of Parliamentarian in Honor Society, and was involved in American Legion, FFA, class government and YoungLife.

Martin plans on working this summer, as well as going to YoungLife Camp and working out to get in shape for his Freshman year of college football.

"My words of advice to fellow members of DHS is to not base your life decisions on advice from people who don't have to deal with the results," Martin said. "Only you can make your own destiny."

LOCAL POOLS TO OPEN THIS MONTH

DAYTON, WAITSBURG, AND PRESCOTT POOLS PROVIDE A PLACE TO COOL OFF AND HAVE FUN

By Ian Smay | THE TIMES

DAYTON – The beginning of June brings the end of the school year in Dayton, Waitsburg, and Prescott. Along with the joys of students having three months off from their studies comes the opening of local swimming pools.

Dayton

The Dayton City Pool opens on June 14, which is also the last day of school in Dayton. The first day of operations for the pool will be free to all patrons, and the pool will hold open swim sessions from 1-5 and 6-8 p.m. The pool is scheduled to stay open until Dayton Schools resume in late August.

The daily admission for the DCP is $3 for anyone over age five. This fee will be charged at all open swim, lap swim, and aquacise activities. Paying adults can bring children aged five and under in free of admission.

Season passes will also be offered for those planning to use the pool on a regular basis and don't want to pay a fee for each session. Individual season passes are $60, while a family pass for up to four people in the same household is $120. Additional members past the four included in the family pass or out of the household can be added for a $25 additional charge.

Dayton's operating hours are generally unchanged from the previous few seasons. The normal weekday operating schedule, which will begin the week of June 19, starts with early-bird lap swim from 7-8 a.m. This is followed by swim team practice from 8-10 a.m., with swim lessons starting at 10 and ending at noon. Afternoon aquacise is held from 12 – 1 pm, running until the beginning of the day, recreational session from 1-5 pm. Evening aquacise provides a break from the recreational sessions from 5-6 p.m. The final session of the day is evening recreational swim from 6-8 p.m. This schedule may be interrupted by home swim meets.

Saturdays will feature only the two recreational sessions, and there are no scheduled Sunday sessions. Both days are open for rentals, as well as some evening hours on weekdays.

Swim lessons are offered for people of all ages, and those interested can obtain more information at the pool or at Dayton City Hall. Lessons last two weeks and cost $35 per person. A swim team is available for kids 18 and under that is run through the city pool. It will be coached by Jamie Trump. Practices are held weekday mornings.

Waitsburg

The Waitsburg City Pool will open on June 15, and will stay open until August 18. The pool will be open for public swim from 1-5 and 6-8 p.m. on weekdays. There will also be adult lap swim sessions between the two public swims on Tuesdays and Thursdays from 5-6 p.m. The pool will be closed on weekends.

Daily passes for day and night swim will be $2 per day. Family passes are available for $80 for the season and are limited to a family of five members maximum, although additional members can be added for $10 a person. An individual pass will be $40 for the season.

Swimming lessons for the summer will be held in two-week sessions, four days a week, from Tuesday to Friday. The lessons will take place in 30-minute sessions between 11 a.m. and 1 p.m. Due to a low number of staff, class size is limited to 10 swimmers per session. There may be a second two-week session of lessons offered if there is enough demand.

The pool may be rented, but the rental must be approved in advance by Waitsburg City Hall to determine the availability of staff for the rental date, and the length of the rental session. Rentals have a maximum time of four hours.

Prescott

Prescott will open their pool on June 17 at noon. The pool will continue to operate daily throughout the summer. Hours of operation are 1-7 p.m. Mon.-Thurs., and noon-7 p.m., Fri. - Sun. These sessions are open to the public and cost $3 for people ages 6-17 and seniors. Adults ages 18-64 will be charged $4, and children five and under are free with a paying adult.

Swimming lessons begin June 26. The lessons run in two-week sessions and will be held throughout the summer, for a cost of $25 per person.

The opening of the Memorial Pool in Walla Walla after a decade hiatus raised the question of a possible drop in attendance at the Prescott Pool. However, this is not an issue that is bothering Prescott Parks & Recreation co-manager Yvonne Jackson.

"I think there may be those that will try out the Walla Walla (Memorial) Pool," Jackson said. "However, I feel quite certain that those that use our pool will continue to do so because of the reasons they come in the first place: it is not crowded, it is clean, we allow them to picnic in the park, or go home, and not have to pay an additional fee to reenter. I do not anticipate a huge effect on our numbers."

More information on events at the Prescott City Pool and Park will be made available as they happen.

Waitsburg Seniors Celebrate Memories

Thirty-three seniors received diplomas during Friday's graduation ceremony

By Dena Wood | THE TIMES

WAITSBURG – Friends and family members stood as the traditional strains of 'Pomp and Circumstance' marked both an ending and new beginnings for the Waitsburg Class of 2017 on Friday. Thirty-three seniors made the traditional walk down Kison Court at Waitsburg High School's 121st commencement ceremony to receive their diplomas.

Kelsey Alleman and Karlie Pettichord-Mathews, siblings of graduating seniors, served as class marshals, and 2016-17 ASB President Jacob Dunn led the flag salute. Dr. Carol Clarke welcomed guests and introduced honor speaker Selina Mercado.

Mercado, daughter of Jose and Carla Mercado, who had a GPA of 3.749, thanked teachers and especially retiring faculty before sharing some of the lessons the class has learned over the years.

"The first is a lesson that many of us learned in elementary school; and that would be that it might not be the best idea to make people laugh in the lunch room because a result is someone might just end up with food in their hair or all over everything. I unfortunately know that first hand. Someone made Dylan laughed so hard and he spit his mashed potatoes on Taylor Spoonemore and me, which caused us to then spend ten minutes in the bathroom picking potato out of each other's hair.

"The second lesson is that one needs to be cautious in what they do because it can result in injury. That was proven when someone punched a wall, even though it was padded. It resulted in a broken hand. Skylar was the unfortunate person to learn that. Those are just two of the most memorable lessons learned that most of us can look back on and laugh about now that some time has passed," she said.

Mercado reflected on the closeness of the class and shared the ways they have supported each other through the years before sharing inspirational quotes from Steve Jobs, Walt Disney, Oprah Winfrey, Tupac Shakur and Joe Dirt.

"I hope that everyone will remember the friends they made here and carry them in their hearts and minds for a long time to come as we all make our ways in this world," she said, before introducing honor speaker Skylar Wood.

Wood is the son of John Wood and Dena Wood, and holds a 3.959 GPA. He got the crowd laughing with a lighthearted opener, stolen from speech given by his older brother, Brad Huffman, in 2005. Wood used his plagiarism as a segue to share how WHS is a link between generations and community members.

"I used my brother's opening because it represents something in my family that is unique to Waitsburg High School. My family has been going to this school for generations. It's almost impossible for me to walk down a hall without seeing the graduation pictures of a sibling, a cousin, an aunt, an uncle, a parent,

She looked back warmly at the welcoming atmosphere she experienced when she moved to Waitsburg in seventh grade, and reflected on how her classmates had become like family over the years. She shared several memories and tied them to the class motto: "Sometimes you'll never know the value of a moment until it becomes a memory."

Eddie Perez and Tiffany Robinson are PHS Valedictorian and Salutarian

PRESCOTT WILL HOLD COMMENCEMENT SERVICES ON SATURDAY

By Dena Wood | THE TIMES

PRESCOTT – Graduating members of the Prescott High School Class of 2017 will walk the aisle to receive their diplomas at noon on Saturday in the high school gymnasium. This year's honor speakers are Valedictorian Eddie Perez and Salutarian Tiffany Robinson.

Perez, son of Monique and Juan Perez, will graduate at age 16, with a GPA of 3.74. He has attended Prescott school district since kindergarten. Perez said he took extra courses during summer school which allowed him to skip his freshman and junior years, and graduate early.

Perez has served on ASB three years, holding the positions of sentinel, secretary, and president. He was named Exchange Club Student of the Month for November. He is the video producer for the Every 15 Minutes alcohol and drug prevention program, has been a peer mentor for the Gear Up program, and has done tutoring at Vista Hermosa.

Perez has been a cheerleader for two years and was named MVP this year. He says his hobbies include stretching, tumbling, and eating.

Perez will attend the University of Washington, where he plans to study accounting.

"I loved the community when I visited. I felt very included and the academics are really great. Plus Seattle has opportunities for pretty much anything," Perez said.

Perez said community support has been key when asked what he has enjoyed most about his education in Prescott.

"I've enjoyed the inclusive community that is here and the support that is given as well as the non-discrimination policy that holds true to real-life application. They're really nice to each other and I like it," Perez said.

Perez has applied for a job at Vista Hermosa, where he hopes to work at the daycare or as a runner for the foundation before heading to UW this fall.

Salutarian Tiffany Robinson holds a GPA of 3.2 and is the daughter of Linda and Andrew Bradshaw. She has attended school in Prescott for eight years.

She is a member of the National Honor Society and was class sentinel in both her sophomore and junior years. She also participated in SADD (students against destructive decisions) and was SADD treasurer as a freshman. Robinson said health problems, included scoliosis, have prevented her from participating in sports, but she loves reading, and devoured 38 books last summer. She volunteers in the library after school and often helps younger students with homework.

Robinson said she wasn't always a good student, but made the conscious decision to change after her grandmother passed away in 2012, when she was in eighth grade.

"I felt such accomplishment the first time I made honor roll that I carried it on without breaking the streak until this year, when I began taking harder, Bridges to College classes," she said.

Robinson will attend Santa Ana Community College in California, where she will work toward becoming a registered nurse. She said watching her grandparents die after long illnesses played a role in her desire to become a nurse.

"I hope I can make a difference for others that have to go through that same kind of situation. It's a way that I might be able to make other people's lives better," she said.

Robinson said her favorite thing about Prescott schools is the size.

"The student-teacher ratio here makes things easier. Help is always there. People that need more help can get it without the struggle that students at a bigger school would have," she said.

Robinson plans to work and save money through the summer before leaving for college in California this fall.

Dice also spoke about the significance of Grouse Flats to the W. T. Wooten Wildlife Area. He said money from the sale of timber from the site of the 2014 Grizzly Complex Fire will be used to reforest areas along the Tucannon River.

Dingman spoke about work that is being planned for the W. T. Wooten Wildlife Area, to dredge and lower the Tucannon lakes in order to connect them with the river, and improve wildlife habitat in the floodplains and in the river. She characterized the 16,481 acre W. T. Wooten Wildlife Area as a place with many opportunities for fishing, hunting, hiking and camping.

"Everything is pretty much walk-in access," she said.

Dingman said 11 campgrounds have been moved away from the river in order to lessen human impacts. She said the area is rich in wildlife, with 32 "disease-free" Bighorn Sheep, two wolf packs, and many deer, as well as a substantial population of cougars.

One issue of concern for DFW officials is the growing popularity of shed antler hunting, particularly when elk are still vulnerable, according to Dice.

Public concerns voiced at the meeting were about declining steelhead populations since the closing of the hatchery program in the W. T. Wooten Wildlife area, predation on domestic animals by wildlife, and the effects of agricultural chemicals on the watershed system, creeks and rivers.

Jatzcak said some of the existing elements from the 2006 wildlife management plans will be included in the new wildlife plans, and there will be updates on progress every two years.

TEENY MCMUNN: MY RECIPE BOX

Easy Taco Skillet

Before I mention this week's recipe, I'd like to talk about last week's recipe that used a raw egg. It is not recommended to eat a raw egg, so please look up the pros and cons and decide if you want to use the recipe. My friend suggested substituting Egg Beaters. As she and I discussed, I have not had a problem eating raw cookie dough or batters with a raw egg, so I would not have thought anything about making the peanut butter pie. She has had experience with salmonella and food poisoning and it sounds like it is not a fun thing to go through.

I made this taco dish for last night's dinner. It is easy and perfect for those days that are too hot to turn on the oven, and you want something quick.

INGREDIENTS:

- 1 lb. hamburger
- 1 onion
- 1 (14.5 oz) can diced tomatoes
- 1 c. water
- 1 c. converted rice
- 1 (1 oz) package taco seasoning
- 1 c. shredded Mexican Cheese blend
- 1 c. shredded lettuce

DIRECTIONS:

Heat a large skillet over medium heat, cook and stir beef and onion until beef is browned, about five minutes. Drain. Stir in tomatoes, water, rice, and taco seasoning into beef mixture and bring to a boil. Reduce heat to medium low, cover, and simmer until rice is tender, about 25 minutes. Top with Mexican cheese blend and lettuce before serving.

MY NOTES:

I can see all sorts of variations to this recipe. Some options may be chili peppers and/or corn. I used a packaged combination of quinoa and spouted rice. I had an extra fresh tomato and a few left over olives and added them. I thought this would get thicker, like one would slice and serve, but instead I served it in a bowl. Perhaps if you use long grain rice, it may become thicker. We treated it like a taco without the shell and added the cheese, lettuce, and salsa before eating. Sour cream can be added for those who like it. With the rice added, it makes a good sized amount. When I heat up left overs, I will serve it over tortilla chips with same toppings.

ENJOY: If you have a favorite summertime recipe, please share.

school?' What amazes me is how diversified all of our answers are. Some of us want to be a dentist, a farmer, or a veterinarian. We have some nurses, and architect, and a physical therapist. And of course, don't forget the military . . . I'm waiting to hear a 'GO Navy!' from the crowd," Hays said as audience member Jack McCaw quickly obliged.

"Overall, it's been said that after high school, you won't see 80% of your class ever again. That's probably true, but however sad it may be, I will always remember that it is not an end. We've learned so much from each other; and now it's time to go find our new beginning.

"One thing I want to say to my family, classmates, and this amazing community and everyone in it who raised me: 'If I could reach up and hold a star for every time you've made me smile, the entire universe would be in the palm of my hand,'" Hays said. She then introduced class valedictorian Jacob Dunn.

Dunn holds a 3.984 GPA and is the son of Marty and Becky Dunn. He referred to the class motto saying, "It is my belief that the memories we have made over our years together will never be forgotten; however, beginning tomorrow we will all make new memories as we continue our journeys in life."

Dunn looked back at specific memories such as lunch table laughs and Monster Cookies in elementary school, eating grasshoppers at Camp Wooten and awkward voice changes in middle school and the fear and excitement of driver's licenses, dances and sports in high school. He spoke to the fear of an unknown future as he admonished his fellow graduates to remain brave.

"These are my thoughts of how we step forward into our futures. Let's not forget to live, love, and enjoy the little moments of life. We, as individuals and collectively, have experience and will continue to experience many challenges in our lives. We each must continue to push forward even when times get difficult and when we are struggling. Through adversity we can find success and rewards by staying positive and focused," he said.

He encouraged his classmates to keep their relationships strong and continue to support one another through the difficult times and struggles that will undoubtedly lie ahead.

"As another graduate once said, 'Now is the time for us to shine, the time when our dreams are within reach and possibilities vast. Now is the time for all of us to become the people we always dreamed of being. This is your world. You're here. You matter. The world is waiting.' Now go and be courageously and fabulously you!" Dunn said, in closing.

High School Principal Stephanie Wooderchak then recognized the honor graduates.

Those wearing National Honor Society white collars were Emily Adams, Jacob Dunn, Jared Farley, Taylor Hays, Nicolas Kitselman, Selina Mercado, Aislynn Pope, Gillian Pope, Taylor Spoonemore, and Skylar Wood.

Graduates wearing the FFA medallion included Emily Adams, Tyler Brooks, Sydney Fowble, Tyler Hoffman, Laramie Mathews and Devin Newman.

Graduates wearing gold honor cords denoting a GPA of 3.25 or higher, and red and white Cardinal Honor Cords, were Jacob Dunn, Taylor Hays, Skylar Wood, Selina Mercado, Gillian Pope, Aislynn Pope, Haley Akes, Emily Adams, Jared Farley, Nicolas Kitselman, Taylor Spoonemore and Joseph Leamy.

PEO member Carol Clarke presented the PEO Citizenship Award given for outstanding citizenship, character, and service to Jacob Dunn and Selina Mercado. She also presented the Fancuillo-Douglas Scholarship to Jacob Dunn. John Watts presented the Waitsburg Firemen's Association Scholarship to Jacob Dunn and Taylor Hays.

Special presentations were made to T.J. Morrison, David Just and Joe Leamy, who received a standing ovation for their plans to join the military following graduation. Just will join the U.S. Navy while Morrison and Leamy are planning a future in the U.S. Air Force.

Scholarships were awarded (see list on Last Page, followed by the presentations of the valedictorian and salutatorian. The class was presented by Class President Timber Frohreich, and diplomas were presented by school board member Marilyn Johnson.

The new graduates exited the gym to Norman Greenbaum's 'Spirit in the Sky' before lining up on the high school lawn to receive congratulations from friends and family.
