Glass recycling at BMS second Saturdays through Oct

THE TIMES

DAYTON – Residents and businesses in Dayton and Waitsburg will have the opportunity to participate in a glass recycling program with monthly collections at Blue Mountain Station. The initiative, spearheaded by local organizations and supported by community grants, aims to divert glass waste from landfills and transform it into new bottles and jars.

The initial collection date at BMS is Saturday, May 11. Businesses and residents are encouraged to bring rinsed glass containers with everything removed except the labels, to the event at the Port of Columbia's artisan food center in Dayton.

Glass will be accepted between 11 a.m. and 2 p.m. at 700 Artisan Way, Dayton, Wash., and is free for all local participants. Glass collection for the program will continue to be held on the second Saturday of each month through October at the same times and site.

"We are thrilled to launch this glass recycling initiative for Dayton and Waitsburg, offering residents and businesses a convenient way to dispose of their glass waste in an environmentally friendly manner," said Chris Lueck, Founder and President of BIG Recyclers from Walla Walla. "By recycling clean food, beverage, and cosmetic glass, we are not only reducing landfill waste but also contributing to the creation of new bottles and jars, conserving resources, and promoting a true circular economy."

The initiative follows a hub and spoke model, where clean glass collected at Blue Mountain Station will be transported to glass manufacturers in Seattle or Portland to be repurposed into new products. This model ensures that glass collected locally contributes directly to the regional economy and sustainability effort.

Baker Boyer Bank and the Blue Mountain Community Foundation provided community foundation grants for the initiative. Donations from participants are welcomed and appreciated to support the program's ongoing success.

"We are grateful for the support of our community partners and funders who have made this initiative possible," Lueck added. "Together, we can make a significant impact on reducing glass waste and promoting sustainable practices in Dayton and Waitsburg."

For more information about the glass recycling initiative and upcoming collection events, please contact Lueck at vtwineguy@gmail.com.

AT THE LIBERTY: "The Long Game"

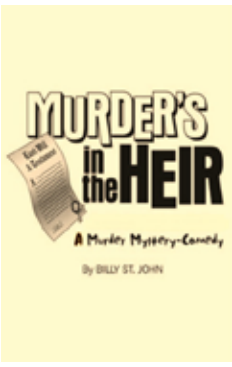

THE TIMES

DAYTON — "The Long Game," inspired by the book "Mustang Miracle" follows the true story of five young Mexican American caddies in 1955 who created their own golf course in the middle of the South Texas brush country. Despite outdated and inferior equipment and not professional instruction to begin with, they would go on to compete against wealthy, all-white teams and win the 1957 Texas State High School Golf Championship.

This movie has high rating from both the critics (80%) and audience (97%) on the Rotten Tomatoes website. Their critics summarized their review as "An appealing underdog story based on an uplifting true story, "The Long Game" represents a triumph of sheer heart over well-worn narrative formula." The IMDb website gave this movie a 7.2 out of 10. This movie is rated PG for language, racial slurs, thematic material, some violence and brief rude material. It has a runtime of 1 hr. 52 minutes.

Notice: Starting May 17, the Liberty Theater will begin showing movies on Friday and Saturday nights at 7 pm, instead of 7:30. Also, on May 15, the program "Hidden in Plain Sight", about drug awareness for parents, will be presented by the Coalition for Youth and Families to anyone over age 18 at 6-8 pm. Free pizza will be provided.

Tickets for our live theater production of "Murder's in the Heir" are now on sale. This is a gripping tale filled with mystery, intrigue, and plenty of plot twists. Set in a grand estate filled with secrets, the play follows the investigation into the murder of the wealthy tycoon Simon Starkweather. With a colorful cast of characters, including conniving relatives and suspicious servants, "Murder's in the Heir" promises thrills and chills at every turn. Performances are Friday, May 10 at 7 pm, and again on Saturday and Sunday at 3 pm. You can get your reserved seat tickets at the Liberty Theater website, or during office hours.

A BIG COUNTRY BIKE RIDE

By Lane Gwinn | THE TIMES

WAITSBURG — Four bike riders stopped at Ten Ton Coffee in Waitsburg on their estimated 50-day journey to NYC. Bob Zalniss, Chris Watson, Lucas Murga, and Paul Brazeau began on April 24 after the riders and bikes arrived at the Seattle Airport.

Chris Watson traveled the farthest, from Salisbury, England, to meet up with friends Brazeau and Zalniss from Wisconsin and Murga from California.

The bike adventurers told The Times, "We do this not because it is easy, but because we thought it would be easy."

The quartet invited anyone interested in their journey to follow them on their group page, "A Country Bike Ride," on Facebook.

An interesting anecdote: in 1998, Watson was honored by Queen Elizabeth for his work as project manager on the restoration of Windsor Castle, damaged in a devastating fire in 1992. The repair was completed five years after the fire, in time for the 50th wedding anniversary of the Queen and Prince Philip. Watson said he was tasked with presenting the Queen with a ceremonial key for the restored castle on a velvet pillow, then backing away as one never presents their backside to her RH.

Pioneer madam portrayed at Ft. Walla Walla

THE TIMES

WALLA WALLA — Fort Walla Walla Museum will bring back a favorite Living History character, the turn-of-the-century madam Josephine Wolfe, for a Living History performance on May 5 in the Pioneer Village, weather permitting. Diane Somerville will portray the famed Walla Walla brothel owner and philanthropist.

In 1859, Wolfe, a 23-year-old German woman, established one of Walla Walla's first and longest-running brothels at 11 W. Alder Ave. With miners and speculators pouring through town, there was no shortage of clientele.

"Dutch Jo" lived in her business parlor until she died in 1909. Described as charming and capable, she also had a reputation as a ruthless businesswoman.

She insisted that the women who worked at her brothel had proper health care. The women kept half their earnings, and the other half went to the house. Wolfe contributed generously to local charitable causes and provided a place for sick and injured firefighters to recuperate. She was known to have purchased cemetery plots at Mountain View Cemetery in Walla Walla for both firefighters and prostitutes so that they might have decent burials when they died.

Her business did well. City records show she paid county taxes in 1908 of $11,464. Unfortunately, no photographs or portraits of Wolfe exist, as she stipulated the destruction of any in her will.

Living History is a volunteer troupe of historical personalities that fills Sunday afternoons at 2 p.m. with performances all season long, from April through the end of October. Characters speak of their life and times and encourage questions from Klint Kuykendall started on the mound for the Cardinals and struck out six Redhaws and walked one in the 8-7 loss. Jayce Gleason pitched in relief.

Waitsburg had a good sixth inning. Three Cardinals reached base via walks, Gleason had a hit and Kuykendall had a double and three runs were scored.

Wine of the Week

King Estate 2019 The Soldier Cabernet Sauvignon

By Paul Gregutt | THE TIMES

Try to find a really well-made Washington Cabernet that doesn't cost an arm and a leg. Not easy, especially one that includes fruit from top vineyards in Walla Walla and on Red Mountain. I've found one, and surprisingly, it's from an Oregon winery best known for Pinot Gris and Pinot Noir. Almost half of the grapes in the blend are from Walla Walla's Seven Hills and Red Mountain's Quintessence vineyard. It's a classic Bordeaux blend — three quarters Cab and the rest shared between Merlot and Cabernet Franc. Washington's most admired red wines are Cabernets, and this is a well-balanced expression of the style. Cassis, black cherry, mocha, and sandalwood flavors combine in this medium-bodied and flavorful wine.

3000 cases; 14.4%; $23 (Columbia Valley) 91/100.

Palouse Outdoors: A Spring Celebration in the Channeled Scablands

By Brad Trumbo | THE TIMES

Spring in the scablands is purely magical, and that's no exaggeration. I can testify because the striking landscape, the rich cultural and natural history of the area, the diversity of wildlife, basalt bluffs, and grasslands coax me into photography when I should be fishing the many lakes that support healthy rainbow trout populations. This year, I ventured further north to Swanson Lakes, eager to experience early wildflowers.

One golden April afternoon, I searched for anything colorful, feathered, or historic. Few landscapes are more captivating than those sun-scorched, cracked, jagged, and roughened by stone and senesced vegetation most of the year. The scablands are home to elegant, intricate, and vibrant blooms that come to life with the sun's warmth and nourishment of spring rains.

Stark-white shooting stars, brilliant sagebrush buttercups, sapphire trumpet bluebells, and fuchsia wallflower phoenicaulis appeared like confetti among the grasses. Getting down on their level revealed another world of drooping yellow bells and blankets of delicate sand spring beauties and prairie stars.

Orange globemallow and arrowleaf balsamroot were awakening among the rocks. Seafoam fruticose lichens appeared wooly among emerald ferns and black cyanobacteria.

Cloud cover and distant storms spawned dramatic skies, painting a fitting backdrop for a land with a tortured origin. Landscape features like the quintessential scablands buttes and scoured troughs, and the charred remains of once lush wetland cottonwood stands appeared prominent against the pewter clouds and cobalt skies above.

Horned larks, savannah sparrows, red-winged blackbirds, and meadowlarks perched and sang while northern harriers soared over the hilltops. More waterfowl than I have ever seen cackled, quacked, and honked on the waters of every divot within earshot. A scattering of rusty 100-year-old horse-drawn farm implements poked through bunchgrasses and weeds. Windmills weakened and toppled by fire lay crumpled on their foundations.

The blackened bark of a stately cottonwood hung from the limbs, wafting in the breeze like teenagers had adorned it with toilet paper. It commanded attention, so much that I failed to notice the Canada goose preparing her nest just feet above my head where a limb had broken off, creating a cupped platform. She noticed me, however. At once, she arose and flew to a nearby pond, where she gathered up her mate. The two noisily vacated for parts unknown, leaving me chuckling as I imagined her saying, "I thought you said this neighborhood was safe!"

Sagebrush stumps resembling discarded cigar butts poked through the cryptobiotic crust - another reminder of the Whitney Fire that scorched 127,000 acres in September 2020. This landscape is home to one of the few remaining Columbian sharp-tailed grouse populations in Washington State. Sage grouse once called this area home but have been displaced from this now-healing landscape due to the lack of sagebrush.

A junk pile held heaps of coiled barbed wire, old machinery, and the remains of corrugated tin sheeting. All rusted beautifully orange and surrounded by biscuitroot flowers beginning to yellow. A cottontail rabbit offered comical glimpses of bouncing tail fluff as it scurried among implements.

Hours passed without notice until the golden hour sunset cloaked the landscape in a rich peach hue, making the glacial erratic granite boulders deposited by the Missoula Floods glow pink like cotton candy. It was late evening when I crawled into the camper, fortified by the intimacy I had shared with Mother Nature and the varied history of the channeled scablands. Sleep came at once, fueled by visions of sharp-tailed grouse dancing in the alpenglow of the morrow.

Wallflower phoenicaulis, nearly fuchsia in color, adds vibrance to the varied greens of the scablands groundcover vegetation.

The early leaves of globemallow pop from atop a small basalt shelf.

The charred bark of this once impressive tree fluttered beautifully in the breeze.

MY RECIPES

Spring Roasted Chicken with Herb Pistou

At the same time that our yard has finally filled with the sweet scent of lilac, the perennial herbs in my edible garden have burst into full swing. The tender new tarragon, chervil, parsley, and thyme have been providing me plenty of inspiration in the kitchen. This lovely chicken dish incorporates herbes de Provence to give it a distinctive floral and herbaceous note. The potatoes and radishes are roasted tender in the same pan, and all is served with a bright herb pistou drizzled over the top.

Ingredients:

8 to 10 bone-in, skin-on chicken thighs, (or a mix of thighs and drumsticks)

Salt and fresh ground black pepper

½ cup all-purpose flour

3 tablespoons olive oil

1 pound baby Yukon gold potatoes, halved

2 tablespoons herbes de Provence (see notes)

1 lemon, quartered

8 to 10 garlic cloves, peeled

4 to 6 medium shallots, peeled and halved

½ cup dry vermouth

1 bunch radishes, trimmed and halved

4 sprigs fresh thyme

For the herb pistou:

2 cups packed mixed fresh herbs (see notes)

1 clove of garlic

Juice and zest of one lemon

Extra virgin olive oil

Salt and fresh ground black pepper

Directions:

Preheat the oven to 400 degrees. Pat the chicken dry with paper towels, then season generously with salt and black pepper on all sides. Place the flour in a shallow dish, and lightly dredge the chicken, shaking off the excess.

Pour the olive oil in a large roasting pan, swirling to coat the bottom. Add the potatoes and toss them lightly in the oil. Next, arrange the chicken pieces around the pan, between the potatoes, skin side up. Season the tops of the chicken pieces with the herbes de Provence, using any extra on the potatoes. Add the garlic and shallots to the pan, over the potatoes, leaving the chicken fully exposed. When the oven is good and hot, carefully pour the vermouth into the pan at the side, careful not to splash on the dredged chicken.

Place the pan into the oven, and roast for 25 to 30 minutes, then baste the chicken with the pan juices. Add the radish halves on top of the other vegetables and arrange the thyme springs around the pan. Return pan to oven and roast for another 25 to 30 minutes, or until the chicken is very crisp and the meat is tender.

While the chicken is roasting make the pistou. Place all the herbs and the garlic clove in a food processor. Pulse until the herbs are chopped, then add the lemon zest and juice with a pinch of salt and pepper. With the processor running, pour olive oil in a steady stream, until the pistou has a loose pourable consistency, like a pesto. Taste and adjust seasoning, adding more salt or pepper as needed. Serve the chicken and roasted vegetables on a warm platter with plenty of the pan drippings. Pass the pistou around the table to drizzle over each serving.

Notes:

Herbes de Provence is a gloriously complex dried herb blend famous in the south of France. Blended with many common dried herbs like thyme and marjoram, the distinct flavor is elevated by the addition of dried lavender flowers. You can often find versions of herbes de Provence in grocery stores or from reputable sources online. However, you can also make your own. Blend dried thyme, marjoram or oregano, basil, crushed bay leaves, tarragon, and lavender if you can find it. A mortar and pestle comes in handy to blend the herbs together. For this recipe, if you can not find herbes de Provence or any lavender, you could use a simple blend of equal parts dried thyme and dried tarragon.

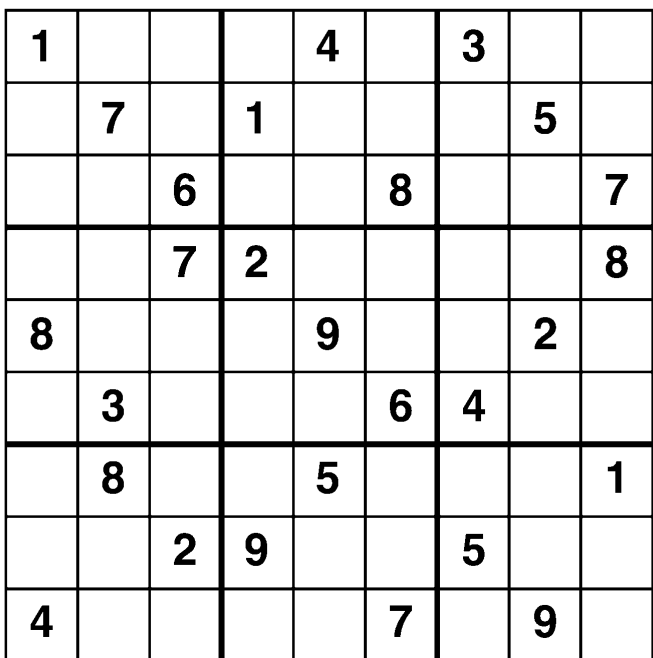

Pistou is a common condiment in southern France, similar to Italian pesto, but without cheese or nuts. Use a blend of fresh herbs to your taste, such as parsley, tarragon, chervil, basil, and thyme. Because it is a key component to the flavor, use the best quality extra virgin olive oil you can find for the pistou.

Enjoy.
