Dayton Seniors Celebrate Graduation

By Ian Smay | THE TIMES

DAYTON – Dayton High School sent off twenty-three young adults onto the next step in their lives on Saturday. The Class of 2016 graduated in front of countless loved ones as they officially completed their careers as Dayton Bulldogs.

The Class of 2016 is made up of decorated students, electrifying athletes, and now high school graduates. They have completed the curriculum required of all high school students in Washington, and now have the diplomas, caps, and gowns to show for it.

Salutatorian Angie Dedloff was the first student to give a speech to her class and their loved ones. Starting off her address with the opening lines of Oh, The Places You Will Go by Dr. Seuss, she spoke of what her class had been through and wished all of her classmates happiness.

“You deserve to be genuinely happy. A happiness that isn’t based on anyone else,” said Dedloff early in her speech. She ended by saying, “Class of 2016 I wish each of you joyous lives full of happiness and most importantly no regrets. I love you all.” The end of her speaking time was answered with applause from those attending.

Valedictorian Marisa Klein-Chavez followed with her speech. Klein talked about how she was afraid of not making friends with her class, as she joined at the beginning of high school instead of being a part of the group from elementary on like the majority of her

PRESCOTT – Sixteen members of the Prescott graduating Class of 2016 proudly made their way down the aisle during Prescott High School’s commencement ceremony on the evening of Fri., June 10. “When you want to succeed as bad as you want to breathe, then you’ll be successful,” a quote by Eric Thomas, was selected as the class motto.

Once the class was seated, the crowd stood as PHS student Angel Prado sang a stirring rendition of the national anthem. Class Valedictorian Jaqueline Velazco welcomed the crowd and gave a valedictory address reflecting back on class memories from kindergarten on.

WAITSBURG PLANNING COMMISSION SAYS NAY TO COMMERCIAL REZONE

Plans to create a more appropriate option for small business owner

By Dena Wood
THE TIMES

WAITSBURG – Close to a dozen community members were in attendance to offer input during the public hearing portion of the June 8 planning commission meeting at the Waitsburg Fairgrounds. The hearing was in reference to a rezone application received by the City of Waitsburg, from Marvin Aronson, who requested that his property at 503 W 2nd be rezoned from residential to commercial.

Aronson currently uses the property, located just off of Highway 124, to do hobby automobile and equipment repair. City Administrator Randy Hinchliffe said the rezone request was made in order to better align the property, which is zoned residential, with past use and Aronson’s plans going forward.

Hinchliffe said the property has probably been used commercially longer than it has been used residentially. The lot was last used commercially as an auto sales lot and had been the location of a grocery store in years prior. Hinchliffe said the property does meet most of the criteria within the code for a rezone, but the big question is whether or not the business is compatible with surrounding land use.

Aronson said he applied for the C-2 commercial rezoning because he was “trying to do things legally.” He said he currently uses the property

PORT, COUNCIL CONSIDER IMPROVING MOORAGE AT LYON’S FERRY MARINA

By Michele Smith | THE TIMES

DAYTON—At their meeting last week at the Lyon’s Ferry Marina, Port of Columbia County commissioners Fred Crowe and Earle Marvin signed a three-year lease agreement with rail operator Frontier Rail LLC, to maintain and operate the rails for the newly named Columbia/Walla Walla shortline, between Dayton and Walla Walla.

Port Manager Jennie Dickinson said that all the wording issues in the lease had been resolved.

“I feel very good. I think I understand the lease very well,” Dickinson told the commissioners.

Once the agreement is filed with the state, Frontier Rail crews can begin making repairs to the eight bridges and thirty-nine miles of track between Dayton and Walla Walla, and the company will begin to work on building a new customer base.

Dickinson said that Seneca Seed Company is just one of the businesses that will use the newly reopened rail lines to ship seed.

A new building is also in the works for Phase II at the Blue Mountain Station, that will offer four businesses with good access to the railroad siding, Dickinson said. Dickinson said the Port has been awarded a second grant from the State Rail Bank for the siding at Blue Mountain Station.

Port officials expect the rail service to be reinstated by the end of 2016.

Improving moorage at the Lyon's Ferry marina
Jim MacArthur and Angela MacArthur who manage the Lyon's Ferry marina, the KOA campground, and the Snake River Grill at the marina, talked with the commissioners at last week's meeting about some of the pros and cons of running the business at the marina.

"We've had a really good early spring. Things are going really well," said Jim MacArthur.

Business is up 15% this year over the same time last year, MacArthur said.

The septic and well are completely metered, monitored, and recorded for usage, he said.

MacArthur said camping and RV usage at the marina is up, but moorage is down, and that they have been turning people away due to the inability to accommodate larger boats.

The width of the slips needs to be increased to accommodate thirty-five to forty-five foot boats, MacArthur said.

MacArthur suggested to the commissioners that the timing is good for the Port to take a look at improving the moorage since the twenty-five year lease between the Port and the US Army Corps of Engineers is coming up for renewal in 2016.

He also said he would like to build three rental cabins, but that he would need to see the new lease agreement before he commits to making any more improvements at the marina.

"I'm not afraid to get funding for improvements," Dickinson said, about his request to improve the slips. Dickinson said she will need up to a year and a half in order to get in on the 2018 funding cycle for grants.

In the meantime, Dickinson said that she will put the Corps on notice regarding the magnitude of the required improvements, and she and the commissioners will begin to explore the draft lease with the Corp.

Also at the meeting the commissioners signed a contract with the Washington State Department of Commerce to allow the Port to gain access to funding for work the Port does, directly.

In January, 2015 the County commissioners opted out of the Southeast Washington Economic Development Association, saving the county a substantial annual fee. Now the Port can contract with the state directly, and Dickinson said she is happy about that.

HOW TO RECLAIM YOUR SMARTPHONE STORAGE SPACE IN TIME FOR THOSE SUMMER VACATIONS

By Hayley Tsukayama, The Washington Post

Are you constantly plagued by warnings that your phone is running out of storage? We're here to help.

Storage woes are common for smartphone owners, perhaps particularly during the summer when we're snapping more pictures, playing more games and feeling generally more unwilling to take on big organization projects.

So we went in search of (relatively) quick ways to free up space on your phones. I tried a lot of strange tricks in the course of putting together this piece, downloaded some regrettable apps and got to know my settings better than I ever thought I would. In the end, however, I ended up mostly with back-to-basics tried-and-true methods.

Real storage management will take real work -- a permanent solution may require you to plug your phone into your computer and actually deal with some files at some point. But if you're really hurting for space, try some of these quick tips to give yourself more room.

Take stock: The best thing to do when trying to figure out how to make more space on your phone is to actually look at what's taking up space.

You can do that on the iPhone by heading to Settings > General > Storage and iCloud Usage > Manage Storage. On Android phones, head to Settings > Storage and you should see a breakdown of how your phone's storage is being used.

This can be revealing in a couple of ways, but I often find it's most instructive in seeing what media can be removed from your phone. Speaking anecdotally based on the experiences of friends who've asked me this question, looking at the apps that take up the most room on your phone often reveals a podcast problem, audiobook affinity or enthusiasm for e-books. This can be particularly bad after trips -- I once kept running out of room on my phone, only to later realize that I'd prepped for a trip by downloading two seven-or-more-book series and never returned them to that big shelf in the sky. rid of those books solved my storage woes that day.

The weird trick: There is a genuinely strange trick you can try to free up space on your iPhone. As first documented on Reddit, users can download a really big file -- such as a movie rental of "Lord of the Rings: The Two Towers." You have to be sure that you're attempting to download a sufficiently enormous movie, so you don't get charged for it. The aim is to get an error message that tells you that the rental you want is too big to fit. (You can find the size of a movie in the "Information" section of its product page; you want something that is ridiculously larger than the available space you have on your phone.)

Yes, you want the error message. You want this rental to fail, because somehow failing to rent an enormous file gains you more storage space. It's not completely clear why this works -- the governing theory is that your phone clears out some of the caches and other extraneous information from other apps to try to make room for the download. Apple declined to comment on the trick, but hasn't debunked the popular theory about it.

A caveat: This has not always worked for me, and can take several attempts to get it to work. But sometimes, it really does free up space -- as much as I hate to say it -- like magic.

The Android version of this is more straightforward: You can just go in your settings and clear the cache. That frees up quite a bit of space as well, although you may have to log in to some apps again. It's a small price to pay every once in a while.

Let go of old messages: Yes, obviously save the sweet messages you got from your parents, friends or significant other. But, if you're like me, the bulk of messages on my phone are actually messages with a very short shelf life -- verifying log-ins at the bank, going back and forth with friends about when and where to meet, etc. Before a big purge, save or screenshot the messages that matter, and then hit that "select all" and "delete." It will feel good, I promise, and a few photos will take up much less space than a year's worth of texts.

The same holds true for messaging logs from other apps. WhatsApp, for example, stores information such as photos and videos from conversations on your phone; Instagram has an option that lets you save the original photos to your camera roll that may eat up space. If you don't need them, get rid of them.

This applies to e-mail, too. Speaking personally, I also found that I'd downloaded a lot of documents onto my work cellphone, from e-mail attachments. Clearing that out from the "Documents" folder on my Android phone brought me back 1 GB of space; that's nothing to sneeze at. And even if you're a digital packrat, you can use archiving features to get things off of your phone, but still in easy reach.

Use the cloud: Speaking of archiving, remember that the cloud is your friend. Sure, it can add a few seconds of extra time when you need to download a document or a picture, but if storage is a problem for you, this is your best option. Use whatever floats your boat, and for your media of choice -- Google Photos, iCloud, OneDrive, Dropbox, Box, Evernote -- but find a cloud service that works for you at the price (often free) you want.

Take advantage of settings on your phone as well. If photos are a problem for you, for example, try using the iCloud Photo Library, which lets you "optimize iPhone storage." This option will upload full-resolution copies of your photos to the cloud, although you can download them again fairly easily. On Android devices, Google Photos also lets you delete device copies of photos while keeping them in the cloud.

Embrace streaming services when possible, too. If you're somewhere with WiFi, using Pandora, Spotify, Apple Music, etc., on your phone rather than relying on your own tracks can really free up space -- certainly enough for a playlist or two for your offline lunchtime jog. And if you really can't bear to be without your music, there's no shame in investing in a dedicated music player. Really.

Delete apps: OK, this sounds like it should be pretty obvious, but it's really not an easy thing to remember to do. It's much easier to accumulate apps and to hold on to them just in case you need them for whatever specific purpose prompted you to download them in the first place.

But pruning out apps is really the best way to keep your storage in check. Google is reportedly testing a feature that actually suggests which apps should get the boot when you try to download a new one, based on how frequently you use them. The firm also is working on a way to let you instantly download just the part of an app you need to use, then get rid of it just as quickly.

It's a smart move, and a good approach for others to adopt. (Apple, it should be said, will automatically delete and then reinstall apps when you update your software -- but hasn't announced a feature similar to Google's.) When looking at your apps, think about how you really use them. You may surprise yourself. For example, I kept an app for my insurance provider on my phone for a long time essentially so I could reference the policy number a few times a year -- times when I needed the actual insurance card in my purse anyway. I gave it the boot.

I also often find airline apps aren't worth keeping on your phone unless you're on a trip -- if you're not a frequent flier, you can probably get away with ditching these apps when you're not traveling. And some apps are just bad versions of their websites -- I realized some financial apps I felt very responsible about downloading weren't actually helping me. If anything, they were just reminders to check my accounts on the desktop or mobile Web, because I often couldn't do what I wanted on the app. I set actual reminders in a reminders app instead.

Shopping apps, too, often serve functions that could as easily be accomplished on the mobile web. Bonus: ditching my shopping apps helped me also cut back on some impulse purchases.

Obviously, there is no one-size fits all solution for managing storage on your phone -- maybe you'd rather cut off your hand than be separated from your shopping apps. And that's great: Smartphones, perhaps more than any other device, are really personal, and the things you decide to keep on your phone should reflect your priorities. But using some or all of these tips should help you take stock of those priorities and, one could hope, make room for all those summer selfies with ice cream, swimming pools and cookouts -- in other words, the truly important things.

Local Organizations Receive Community Service Awards

WAITSBURG RESOURCE CENTER, DIXIE STORE, AND DAYTON CHRONICLE ARE NAMED COMMUNITY LEADERS

By Dena Wood | THE TIMES

RICHLAND -- The Waitsburg Resource Center, Dayton Chronicle, and Dixie Store were all recipients of the 2016 (Southeast Washington Association of School Administrators) SEWASA Community Leadership Award at an honorary awards banquet held at Meadow Springs Country Club in Richland on June 9.

The banquet is SEWASA's opportunity to recognize community individuals and groups throughout EDS 123 for their outstanding contributions toward education. Superintendents of 13 districts acknowledge their community leaders by sharing the impact of their contributions on their students and schools. Specific criteria include benefit to students, leadership, motivation, success, cooperation/coordination with the local school district, recognition by others, and history of service.

The Waitsburg Resource Center, represented by Margie Benson and Pam Conover, was nominated by Waitsburg Superintendent Carol Clarke for ongoing support of the school. The WRC is in regular contact with the school to help meet needs as they arise. Some past school-related WRC activities include supplying backpacks and school supplies, providing meals and activities during winter break, hosting dental care visits and organizing a summer program.

"The Waitsburg Resource Center is another 'one of a kind' example of how our community comes together to support one another. The WRC is more than a food bank. It is an active organization that seeks to serve all members of our community who are experiencing physical, relational, or spiritual needs," Clarke said.

"In addition to providing food, the Center provides activities, information and referrals to other resources that will best serve all who live within our area. For that reason, the WRC clearly deserves to be recognized for all that it does for our students, their families and our schools," she added.

Dayton Superintendent Doug Johnson nominated the Dayton Chronicle for the paper's support of athletics, academics and special interest stories about students and school staff. Johnson said the paper's publishers, Loyal and Charlotte Baker, are members of the Dayton Citizens for Education group and gave of their time, talents, and funding to share the needs of the district and promote a "yes" vote on recent M&O and capital projects levies.

"This past year the Bakers and their paper have provided a valuable opportunity for the students, staff, and families of the Dayton School District to share the great work of children and the positive impact of district employees on those children," Johnson said in his presentation speech.

The Dixie Store, represented by Patty Bunch and Cindy Tate, was nominated by Dixie Superintendent Kevin Graffis. As a first-year superintendent in Dixie, Graffis said this was the first he had heard of the award and he thought immediately of the store when he did.

Graffis said he visited the Dixie church earlier this year and shared about different needs the school kids had. Graffis said he told the church members the number one need was that of time -- for family, friends, and relatives to read with kids and to volunteer.

Graffis stopped by the Dixie Store later that year and was impressed by what he saw. Groups of kids wait at the store after school for their parents to arrive and pick them up, and it has become a gathering place. Store owners and staff read with the kids and help them with homework.

"The term TKO means 'technical knock out' in boxing, but in education we use it to mean 'taking kids on.' As community leaders, the folks at the Dixie Store took it upon themselves to take kids on," Graffis said.

Prescott Honor Students are Servant Leaders

First-generation college students are thankful for community support

By Dena Wood THE TIMES

PRESCOTT - Prescott High School Class of 2016 Valedictorian Jaqueline Velazco and Salutatorian Salomon Martinez earned their titles by being the top scholars in their class. But their gratitude, humility, and desire to give back to the community speaks volumes about their character as well.

Valedictorian Jaqueline Velazco, daughter of Jaqueline and Jaime Velazco, ends her high school career with a GPA of 3.85. During high school she was a National Honor Society member, class secretary all four years, competed in Knowledge Bowl, and participated in SADD (Students Against Destructive Decisions).

Velazco says she enjoyed participating in WE Day, a Seattle celebration for youth making a difference in their local and global communities. She says her local group made anonymous Valentine's Cards to demonstrate love and kindness and participated in homelessness awareness projects.

Velazco says she enjoys painting but her main hobby is tutoring elementary and middle school students at Vista Hermosa after school. Velazco said an interesting fact about her is that she spent the last four summers working in the fields at Broetje Orchards thinning apples.

When asked if she liked the work she said, "No, but it made me value education more."

Velazco is thankful for the support and encouragement she received as a student in Prescott. "I would like to come back here and work. I like Prescott. I like the school. It's small and I grew up here so it's comfortable."

"I'm thankful for all the resources in the school that helped me initiate a new beginning. I will be a first-generation college student," Velazco said.

Velazco plans to attend WSU Tri Cities to pursue a career in elementary education.

Salutatorian Salomon Martinez, with a GPA of 3.47, is the son of Salomon and Ahine Martinez. He has been active in student government, serving as ASB president, National Honor Society president and treasurer, and as a student representative on the Prescott School Board.

Martinez played soccer and was softball manager four years each. He was a member of the Knowledge Bowl team and drama club. He also served as coordinator for the Every 15 Minutes anti-drinking and driving program, participated in SADD, and is active in the Hugh O'Brian Youth (HOBY) Leadership Foundation.

Martinez said his attendance at the three-day HOBY seminar as a sophomore was life-changing. In response, he has volunteered 161 hours to the organization over the last three years, serving as an assistant, junior facilitator, and a mentor.

Martinez said that he appreciates all the opportunities that were available to him in Prescott.

"Even though it's a small school there are lots of opportunities because everyone can try out for a sport or a club, which helped me be more involved in my school. I'm really thankful for the staff and those around me that gave me the potential to believe that I could be a leader," Martinez said.

Martinez plans to attend WSU in Pullman for major in management information systems with a possible minor in sociology. He would like to work in a company like Microsoft or Apple, and dreams of starting a scholarship foundation that would help kids visit different secondary schools so they are aware of the educational opportunities available to them.

"I'm blessed to be the first in my family to graduate (high school) and I'm thankful for those who have helped me -- though I can't name all of them -- through the struggles and ups and downs. I devote my success to them because without them, I possibly wouldn't be in these shoes right now," Martinez said.

Both students credit their participation in a Vista Hermosa youth group for encouraging them toward service and leadership. They will spend their summer together, both working as teacher's assistants at Vista Hermosa's Day Camp.

Emergency Dispatch Call Center Acquires Next Generation E9-1-1 Capatility

Emergency dispatch call center acquires next generation E9-1-1 capability

By Michele Smith | THE TIMES

DAYTON—What is sleek, shiny, compact and quiet?

No, it is not a new car.

It is the new E9-1-1 phone system and audio logger from Zetron that was recently purchased by the county to replace the old Intrado Lifeline 100 phone system in the emergency dispatch center at the courthouse.

The new system comprises three work stations, two with radios for the dispatchers, one for County Emergency Manager Lisa Caldwell to use when back-up is needed, and an audio logger which records all calls and radio traffic.

"It's so simple. It has a touch screen. It also has an external phone line so if we lose use of the computer we will have a handset for minimal information," Caldwell said, pointing to a little box.

"This system will allow us to take text to 9-1-1 from cell phones, which is extremely important to the hearing impaired community," she added.

"When E9-1-1 next generation is fully implemented, nationally, there is an expectation that the phone systems will be able to handle all platforms for audio, video, and text messaging," Caldwell said.

"We purchased the equipment so when the infrastructure is in place we can handle photo, video, and texting with 9-1-1 calls," she went on to say.

Caldwell said texting to E9-1-1 will be deployed by the end of the year.

She explained that over time the dispatch center has moved away from the old phone systems with copper lines, to enhanced 9-1-1 with corded phones, at a time when payphones were still in use, and then into Phase I of the cell phone era, where tower placement was crucial to receiving a call.

Caldwell said that in Phase I of the cell phone era, the only information gleaned from the cell phone location was the latitude and longitude of the call.

"We deal with that a lot, in Columbia County," Caldwell said.

Then came Phase II with cell phone calls identifying longitude and latitude, but no address for the location – only the phone carrier given, she said.

So if a call comes in on a Verizon phone, dispatchers have to obtain the subscriber information from Verizon, through a warrant-like process, said Caldwell.

"Now we are up to date, and the county will have more options," Caldwell said.

The Zetron E9-1-1 phone system and audio logger are expected to be up and running on June 24, Caldwell said.

Dispatchers will begin training on the new system this month, and the final move from the old Intrado Lifeline 100 phone system, to the new phone system, will take place when dispatchers are comfortable with it and all the "bugs" are worked out, Caldwell said.

The county received $356,602 from the state through excise taxes from wireline, cellular, voice over internet protocol, and phone landlines, to pay for the system.

That grant will cover the phone system and the audio logger, project management, installation and training, maintenance, sales tax, and upgrades to the building such as removal of the old equipment, Caldwell said.

Washington State 9-1-1 falls under the military department, and its goal and vision is for every person in Washington State to have equal access to 9-1-1, so that people living in King County and Columbia County can expect the same service, Caldwell said.

"As I stood by the sophomore pole waiting for my first day of school to start I was nervous, I was scared, and I was even more worried that I wouldn't make any friends. The majority of my classmates have had the opportunity to grow up together and will now graduate with the same individuals they graduated kindergarten with," Klein said.

However, Klein also spoke of how these worries would wind up to be unfounded. "I genuinely wish I would have had longer to laugh and love. I am leaving here today not nervous, scared or worried, but with many friends," continued Klein. She also gave thanks to the family, friends, and Dayton community members that helped them along the way.

Before she completed her discourse, Klein took a moment to wish former classmate Cody Snider a happy graduation. "Before I go, I would like to wish Cody Snider the happiest graduation, for he'll always be a much loved member of our class, may he rest in peace." Snider was a former member of the Class of 2016 who died in 2013.

Scholarship winners were then announced and many graduates received many monetary awards to help further their educational endeavors. The awards were met each time with roaring rounds of applause. (See full scholarship list on Page 12.)

Klein, Dedloff, and Kensity Buroker were all bestowed as honor graduates near the end of the ceremony. The proud graduating class, led by Class President Amber Johnson, then slid their tassels and threw their caps in the air, bringing an end to their time in Dayton High School.

as storage and hobby repair of automobiles, trucks, and lawnmowers.

Aronson said he purchased the property with the intent to eventually retire and build a shop, and had been told there would be no problem operating a shop there. He said he doesn't have specific plans as far as the future size of the business, but intends to semi-retire at the end of the year and wants to open a family-operated shop on the property.

Commission member KC Kuykendall said he felt the highway corridor was an appropriate place for expansion. However, he said this particular application doesn't look at the corridor as a whole.

"We're talking about one teeny, tiny, little lot and making a special designation and rezone for that existing and sole lot. While that's not entirely unheard of, when you start rezoning a city with little pockmarks, you're headed down the wrong path. It's a bad idea," Kuykendall said.

"If the planning commission is going to make recommendations to council to begin to expand commercial development along the highway there, I think we ought to give consideration to more than just one existing lot," he added.

Kuykendall also expressed concern that a repair business, as opposed to a retail business, will be harder to justify as a compatible use to the neighboring houses.

Commission member Larry Johnson noted that commercial zoning would raise permitting issues with both the Department of Ecology and the Department of Transportation. He said it was likely that the DOT would deny business access from the highway and customers would have to enter from West Street or the alley.

Planning Commission Chairman Karen Gregutt

This property, located at 503 W. 2nd, just off Highway 124, was under consideration for rezoning from residential to commercial at last week's planning commission meeting.

repeatedly questioned whether a rezone was actually necessary for Aronson to continue doing what he is doing.

Hinchliffe said that because the long-term goal is to create a commercial business, there is no house on the property, and the business is not allowed outright in a residential zone, it doesn't meet mixed-use criteria.

Gregutt said she felt the C-2 designation was too big of a switch. Kuykendall agreed, saying that C-2 zoning includes businesses like fuel and lumber yards.

Kuykendall and Gregutt suggested issuing a conditional use permit that would allow specific activity, at designated levels, that would allow the business to continue while bypassing the rezoning.

Several audience members spoke in support of Aronson's request, citing the need for an auto repair business in town and the fact that the property had previously been used commercially.

"I just want to work on local cars at a fair price and do something for the community. We're not out to make anybody mad," Aronson said. "I'm just trying to do it legally," he added.

Other community members spoke against the rezoning and expressed concerns about noise, pollution, danger to children, increased traffic, potential decline of neighboring home values, and nuisance enforcement.

Following further discussion, the commission voted to recommend that the city council deny the application with the understanding that a new zone designation would be created, and that the applicant will be able to resubmit to the new zone at no additional charge.

The planning commission will work to establish appropriate zoning and/or conditions that they can then recommend to council.

Touchet Valley Golf Course Looking Forward to Summer

Summer leagues under way; greens are better than previous years

By Ian Smay | THE TIMES

DAYTON – The Touchet Valley Golf Course's annual leagues are under way as the summer draws nearer. The greens are looking great, and it is shaping up to be a good course for those looking to hit the links this summer.

The Men's and Women's league that compete at the course meet once a week, with the Men participating on Thursdays and the Women taking their swings on Mondays. They both start play at 5 p.m. each week. Also available is the Ladies' golf group that plays at 10 a.m. every Monday.

While it is too late for individuals to enter the leagues, Manager Roger Trump said that there is a possibility for team competition on Wednesday nights if there is sufficient interest. A second league session could be formed following the completion of the first league season, which ends the week after the Fourth of July. This would also be dependent on community and participant interest.

The course is also hosting a club tournament this summer, which is for Touchet Valley Golf Club members only. However, for a $40 membership fee, interested golfers can join the club before the tournament in order to be eligible for participation. The tournament will be a Match Play style tournament held in July, and will be composed of 1-on-1 rounds between opponents.

There will be no Touchet Valley Ryder Cup this year. Trump said that the annual tournament will likely be held again next year.

The course will hold the annual All Wheels Weekend Men & Women's Golf Tournament on Father's Day. There is a sign-up sheet at the golf course restaurant. The tournament starts at 9 a.m., and holds a $10 per person entrance fee. It is a nine-hole, two-person, non-handicap scramble. A putting contest will also be held, with a chance for a $10,000 prize on the line.

Trump, when asked about the course, praised the condition of the putting greens this year. "The greens have improved a lot over the past few years," said Trump. A work party made up of mostly club members worked on resodding and getting the greens ready, added Trump.

The course is open year round, and is available for use every day. The restaurant is open Wednesday through Sunday from 8 a.m. to 2 p.m. There are both single day rates for nine and 18-hole rounds, as well as membership and green fees for golfers. Prices are cheaper on weekdays as compared to weekends for nine and 18 hole non-member fees.

The library has also planned some extra-special events including a visit from the Pacific Science Center on June 28 and an appearance by comedian, juggler, and magician Alex Zerbe on July 14.

Kids who complete the program by filling out their reading logs earn prizes all along the way. The library will wrap up the program with a Harry Potter party.

agement to his fellow classmates and encouraged them repeatedly to consider returning to Prescott in the future. "Prescott will be here for us - come back!" he said.

Following the speeches, Jessica Villanueva Perez and Rodrigo Gonzalez took the stage for the recognition of parents. Each parent's name was read as their graduate honored them with a rose and a hug.

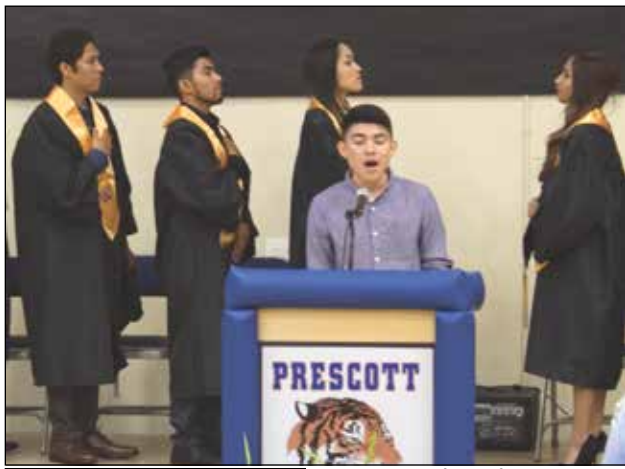

Commencement speaker, soccer coach and math teacher Mark Grimm, praised the group. "Behind me are some great students and great athletes, but the number one thing is that they are great young people. That's what it's about and that's why we're here," he said.

"I'm going to miss you a lot. This is a sad day for me, but I need to stop being selfish. This is just the beginning for all of you," he added.

Susan DeRuwe and Freda Price presented the scholarship awards. The fourth annual Jack Smiley Memorial Scholarship, in the amount of $1,000 - awarded to the senior who has shown the most involvement in Prescott High School - went to salutatorian Salomon Martinez. His name will be added to the wooden memorial plaque that hangs in the Prescott gymnasium. Donations to the Jack Smiley Memorial Scholarship may be made by visiting www.jacksmileymemorialscholarship.com.

Principal Dr. Jodi Thew presented the graduates and school board chairman Karen Tonne handed out diplomas. A reception followed in the multi-purpose room.

PIONEER DAY

Photos by Dena Wood

Elementary school students from Waitsburg and Prescott wrapped up their school year with a visit to the Bruce House Museum for Pioneer Day. Students learned history from Gary Lentz, sewed on buttons, played old-time games, sang songs accompanied by Krista McKinley on piano, and listened to the Bluegrass band, Switchgrass, in the museum's parlor. This is the first year that Prescott students have participated in the program.
