WAITSBURG - Nineteen anxious seniors, surrounded by friends and family, walked the length of Kison Court to receive their diplomas in Waitsburg High School's 122nd commencement ceremony on Friday evening.

Music teacher Brad Green directed the band in Pomp and Circumstance for the final time before his upcoming retirement, as Class Marshals Seamus House and Bradley Sandau, siblings of the graduating seniors, led the proud processional of soon-to-be grad-

Associated student body president for 2017-18, Chloe Pearson, led the flag salute, and Superintendent Jon Mishra welcomed grads and guests.

Honor speaker Kitty Lambert, daughter of Chris and Tina Lambert, who held a 3.65 GPA, looked back at the obstacles she has overcome during her time in Waitsburg and encouraged her fellow students to continue trying, no matter how many times they might fail before succeeding.

Lambert shared her own difficulties, recalling how she would ask her first new friend her name each day, because she simply couldn't remember it.

Foley Joins Columbia County Sheriff Race

FORMER DEPUTY DON FOLEY WILL FACE JOE HELM AND JEFF JENKINS IN AUGUST PRIMARY

By Michele Smith | THE TIMES

DAYTON—Former Sheriff's Deputy Don Foley has announced his candidacy for Columbia County Sheriff.

Foley will appear on the August primary ballot for sheriff along with Deputy Jeff Jenkins and Chief Deputy Joe Helm. The two candidates receiving the most votes will move on to the November general election.

Foley said his training as a forensic interviewer has served him well in investigations of sexual assault, domestic violence and child abuse cases, and will serve him well in his role as sheriff.

He says he has given a lot of thought as to what changes he would make, if he were elected.

The department has difficulty hiring and retaining deputies, needs to create a better relationship with the community, needs to address the county-wide drug problem, and needs to help make schools safer, Foley says.

He said he would like to establish a local reserve deputy program. to get local people interested in a career in law enforcement and provide the county with some extra help. "We could also advertise for veteran officers.

They burn out in bigger places. It's stressful," said Foley who believes the rural lifestyle and close proximity to the Blue Mountains to be an enticement.

Don Foley

Foley said he would also reinstitute the citizen's academy and form a citizens' advisory committee to help develop a quality relationship between the community, and law enforcement officers.

With adequate staffing in the Sheriff's Department, a school resource officer would be available for the schools, Foley says.

With regard to arming teachers, Foley said he would like for them to undergo the same training as reserve officers do and earn that right.

Behavioral health interventions, particularly suicide prevention for youth, are also important, he said.

SCOTT PETERS IS NEW COLUMBIA REA CEO

Current Chief Operating Officer will replace retiring CEO Les Teel next month

THE TIMES

WALLA WALLA – Columbia REA announced last week that its current chief operating officer, Scott Peters, has been selected as the electric cooperative's new CEO. He will step into that position on July 9, upon the retirement of current CEO Les Teel.

Columbia REA conducted a nationwide search to replace Teel, after he announced his retirement earlier this year.

Katie Wooldridge, chairman of the co-op's board of directors, said in a press release, "After looking at all of the candidates for the CEO position, the board feels that Scott is best suited to lead our cooperative into the future."

Peters has more than 25 years of public power experience, serving the last 10 years at Columbia REA, first as the manager of marketing and member services and most recently as COO. Peters will become the eighth CEO in the 80-year history of the cooperative.

"I am honored to be selected by our board to lead the cooperative I have been a part of for the past decade," Peters said. "I love our community and the great team I get to work with on a daily basis and am looking forward to the new challenges as the CEO of Columbia REA.'

The Waitsburg Green Giant plant began operation on early June. Peas at noon, Sunday, June 2 and has been running at capacity since that time. Since some colleges have not concluded classes, the crew is somewhat short of help, but the crews should be well filled out by this weekend, plant officials said. The early June run is much better than was anticipated because of the lack of rain, but recent showers seem to have helped immensely. The Dayton plant, which has been working on the asparagus run will probably open its pea pack sometime this week.

GUEST COLUMNS

Straw Pulp Looks Like 'Win Win'

By Don C. Brunell

Editor's Note: Don Brunell is a regional business columnist who works out of Vancouver, Wash. This column will appear in newspapers throughout the state this week.

ere's a switch! Rather than closing another pulp and paper mill, a new one is under construction right here in Washington.

Columbia Pulp's plant on the Snake River will use a new technology that pulls cellulose out of the abundant straw left over from wheat and alfalfa harvests. The $184 million plant near Dayton is scheduled to open later this year. Traditionally, pulp comes from wood either grown specifically for paper making or as a byproduct from sawmills.

When fully operational, it will add 100 full-time jobs in Columbia County, which the Washington State Employment Security Dept., reports currently has roughly 4,000 citizens and 1,800 jobs. Those family-wage jobs are important to rural Washington, where the unemployment rate is double, and at times triple, that of Seattle.

Columbia Pulp will take 250,000 tons of straw to pulp for paper products such as tissue, paper towels and disposable cups, cartons and plates, which are biodegradable and so, unlike plastic alternatives, break down more rapidly in the environment.

Rather than burning the straw in wheat fields, growers will turn it into $10 to $15 per ton in new revenue from the facility. In total, the economic benefit is estimated at $70 million a year.

With its new mill, Columbia Pulp is embarking on a scaled-up, multimillion-dollar field test of a technology that uses less energy and none of the chemicals of legacy pulp-and-paper mills, the Seattle Times reported last July.

The company's technology was developed by Renton Wash.-based Sustainable Fiber Technologies, from research that started at the University of Washington Making pulp from straw is not new. For the last half century, Shandong Tranlin Paper Co. in Shandong Province, China, has been perfecting ways to take converted straw to pulp for manufacturing paper used in printing, tableware, food wrapping and tissue. Shandong Tranlin is also converting waste liquids into fertilizers.

In the U.S., Kimberly Clark started blending 20 percent straw from Midwestern wheat fields into its "GreenHarvest" tissue and towel lines. It is part of a strategy to augment pulp from recycled paper. The company expects recycled paper supplies to continue to decline because of wireless transactions and increasing on-line reading materials.

Additionally, there is increased competition for pulp as on-line retail shipments grow. RISI Technology Channels reports that corrugated and paperboard box demand in the U.S. is forecasted to increase 2.6 percent this year to $39.4 billion, primarily due to a rebound in manufacturing output and continued expansion of the overall economy.

That rebound has caused a Taiwanese company, "npulp," which uses wheat straw to make corrugated paper and packaging materials, to look at Kansas as a source of pulping raw materials.

Columbia Pulp is a welcome addition to Dayton. In 2004, its only major private employer, Seneca Foods closed its massive asparagus canning plant, which was billed as the world's largest. That facility employed 50 full-time and 2,000 seasonal workers and provided growers with $15 million in annual revenue. A combination of lower foreign labor costs and the removal of the tariff on imported canned asparagus from Peru doomed the plant.

The Columbia Pulp project is a win-win for the environment and the economy. It is welcomed in jobstarved rural Washington.

In a Washington Business Magazine interview, Port of Columbia Manager Jennie Dickinson said, "in my almost 20 years of economic development, I have never been to a permit hearing where there wasn't at least one person speaking against the project. And we had zero."

With our oceans and landfills overflowing with plastic bottles, bags and food wrapping, pulping straw may be a game changer. If nothing else, it offers consumers more choices of products which don't persist in the waste stream.

Don C. Brunell is a business analyst, writer and columnist. He recently retired as president of the Association of Washington Business, the state's oldest and largest business organization, and now lives in Vancouver. He can be contacted at the Brunells@msn.com.

GRANDSTANDS UPGRADES NOT THE BEST USE OF FAIRGROUNDS FUNDING

Submitted by the Waitsburg Commercial Club Executive Board

The Waitsburg Commercial Club regards the Waitsburg Fairgrounds as an integral part of our event venue inventory to bring visitors and commerce to Waitsburg. It is important to start marketing and booking events at our Fairgrounds.

Many art, food and music outdoor events are booked in Walla Walla County, particularly at privately-owned Wineries, that are very successful, without benefit of installed facilities for seating. Saying that no events can be booked at the Waitsburg Fairgrounds because of the condition of the grandstands and the need to have installed permanent seating does not logically ring true when we haven't had a program or plan marketing our fairgrounds that would document people's objections to booking events at the fairgrounds.

The recent advisory ballot may have presented a cost issue that predicted a teardown vote. But if you extrapolate that money issue to facts, the cost of maintenance of a restored grandstand was not included on the advisory ballot either. The annual cost of maintaining the entire fairgrounds, without the additional maintenance of a restored grandstand is at minimum $40,000, maximum $60,000, with very little capital improvements in the current fairgrounds maintenance budget. Cost of maintaining the grandstands annually is predicted to be approximately $2,000-$4,000.

It has been said that the advisory ballot was sent only to Waitsburg citizens/taxpayers and did not give others, not qualified to vote on city issues, a chance to have their opinion heard about the need or viability of the grandstands. If it is important to hear from more people, the Commercial Club can immediately post requests for input across our Facebook pages and/or via a Monkey Survey format.

Commercial Club Vice President Terry Hofer, in conjunction with the Commercial Club, utilized the fairgrounds in 2016-17 to promote and register RV campers. Terry and Joy Smith were ordinanced by the Waitsburg City Council to sit on the Fairgrounds Committee.

The Commercial Club learned much information during Terry Hofer's months-long tenure booking RV rentals. There is needed infrastructure to improve and facilitate additional usage/event bookings at our fairgrounds. The top request is wi-fi access. The restrooms are also in need of renovation.

If additional monies can be spent on the Fair-grounds, wi-fi and a part-time contracted event booking agent would appear to be a better return on investment than a grandstands refurbish that has no documented positive need for capturing event bookings.

The Commercial Club encourages the Waitsburg City Council to follow the results and recommendations of the citizen advisory ballot and to allocate any available monies and efforts to fairgrounds marketing, wi-fi and restroom renovation.

Foley said the county-wide drug problem makes other crimes in the county more acute.

If he is elected, he will hire a full-time detective to investigate drug cases, while making sure all deputies are knowledgeable about methamphetamine and its precursor chemicals.

Foley said additional patrols, even on primitive roads in the county, could happen with a fully staffed department.

It would be nice to have a reserve deputy or deputy living in Starbuck. The people there feel like they've been left out," said Foley. "They deserve the same service the people get in Dayton."

Foley is excited about the potential for stackable jail cell pods to address the situation with the outdated county jail.

"We could build pods with two bunks each, a sink and toilet, stack them, place them on a concrete floor and place a walkway behind them for the electrical and plumbing," said Foley.

He said the county could then contract with state and federal inmate programs to house inmates in Columbia County, which would offset some of the additional costs. All of this requires a big push for funding with grants, he added.

Foley's motto as he enters the race for sheriff is, "Your family is my family", and he would like to see some of that family feeling restored to the Sheriff's Department.

"I was in a shooting in 2008, and the support I got could have been better. Everybody talks about the Thin Blue Line. This stuff sticks with you forever," he said.

Foley said he worked as a full-time deputy, starting under Sheriff Mike Bergland in November 2003, until he was terminated by Sheriff Rocky Miller last month.

Foley had been off work since January 2017 because of injuries he sustained in a fall while on duty. At that time, he was treated for a broken leg, from which he is still recovering. In addition, he sustained a shoulder injury which required surgery in October, and from which he is still convalescing.

"I am pursuing my options about wrongful termination," he said.

"I love this area. I like helping people," said Foley who has also served a reserve volunteer with Fire District 1.

Foley and his wife, Carol, live in Huntsville. They have a blended family, and their children are Kourtney, 28; Stephanie, 27; Matthew, 23; Stephanie, 23; Deejay Meyer, 18; and Daniel, 12.

CAROLYN HENDERSON: TALK ABOUT ART

The Jewelry of Mary Galanche

New elements in life are 100 percent universal, but jewelry is one of them. From the dawn of time, humans have adorned themselves with beads made of everything from bone bits to precious gems. And once people learned to work metals, the options multiplied exponentially. Whether we're a pharaoh or peasant, a financier or just a regular person without billions of dollars at our disposal, we're all attracted by bling.

Dayton artist Mary Calanche has been creating jewelry for more than 25 years, and the techniques she uses are as varied as her materials - some are old, some are new, and all are challenging to master.

"I do stringing, bead weaving, wire work and bead embroidery," Calanche says. "I Mary Galanche also occasionally do kumihimo, finger weaving, metal work and anything that piques my interest."

In creating her bracelets, earrings and necklaces, Calanche chooses from an astounding variety of beads, semi-precious stones and glass, which are clear or opaque, and in shapes ranging from cubes to triangles, peanuts to paisley, curved to symmetrical.

"I never know what I will work on next," Calanche says, explaining that each of her creations is unique. "Sometimes an old project will say, 'Do me in this colorway, or try that bead.' Or I will pick up one of my magazines or books and realize that I have learned enough to try a new project."

Working out of a studio packed with beads, Calanche describes her favorite project as whatever she is working on that moment.

"I just love to bead!"

An abundant array of Calanche's jewelry art is presently on display at Wenaha Gallery through June 16. The gallery is open Monday through Saturday, 9 a.m. to 6 p.m.

BLUEWOOD TO INSTALL TWO NEW SURFACE LIFTS THIS SUMMER

Installation will be the first major upgrade to lift service since 1986; new lifts will replace existing platter pull

THE TIMES

DAYTON - New skiers and snowboarders will have an easier and faster ride at Bluewood next winter. Two new conveyor lifts will replace the comparatively slow platter-pull lift that serves the beginners' area near the lodge. This is the first major upgrade to lift service since installation of the Triple Nickel chairlift in 1986.

"The conveyor lifts—similar to moving walkways at airports—can transport 1,200 to 1,450 people per hour compared to the current platter pull, which can only handle 350 people per hour," said Kim Clark, General Manager of Bluewood. "The conveyors will be placed in a staggered configuration where the current platter pull now sits."

"Skiers and snowboarders of all abilities will appreciate the ease of getting on and riding the new surface lifts," says Mike Peters, Snowsports School Director at Bluewood. "No more lift lines or congestion. Also, skiing and snowboarding lessons will now start close to the conveyor lifts and lodge. Guests won't need to walk and carry their gear as far as they did before. This will be a great improvement for beginners, folks returning for more lessons, and the general public."

The conveyor lifts, manufactured by SunKid Lifts, are scheduled to be installed by mid-October and to be operational by opening day of the 2018-19 ski season.

Bluewood has invested more than $512,000 in capital improvements over the past two years, Clark said. Improvements include a new yurt at the summit (to be installed this fall), lodge upgrades, rental shop additions and noise reduction.

"I felt bad about forgetting her name, but after a while I finally remembered it. This is just one example of my everyday life obstacles that was difficult at the time, but I learned from my mistake," she said.

Lambert gave examples of Walt Disney going bankrupt before creating his empire and Einstein's inability to speak fluently before age 12, as individuals who overcame adversity.

"What if Thomas Edison gave up after the tenth mistake he made when inventing the light bulb? What if he gave up after his 9,999th try?" she asked as she admonished her classmates to "go forth and make your own mistakes.'

Honor Speaker Robert Walsh, son of Jim and Ann Walsh, holds a 3.70 GPA. Walsh shared several life lessons that all point back to some simple, yet powerful advice. Happiness is your choice.

Walsh quoted American entrepreneur Lynda Resnick, who said, "When you wake up each morning you can choose to be happy or choose to be sad. Unless some terrible catastrophe has occurred the night before, it is pretty much up to you."

Walsh reiterated the power each individual has over their own lives and outlook.

"Go out and find out what your happiness is and make it your own. We can't control the world, but we can control ourselves. Trust in life's way of working out when you put your best foot forward. Remember what's important to you and make your life your own," he said to his fellow graduates.

Salutatorian Ariel Sandau, daughter of Bradley and Veronica Sandau, graduated with a GPA of 3.71. Sandau took the audience on a trip down memory lane, recalling memories from learning to speak, to starting school, to "daddy-daughter" dances, middle school experiences and, finally, high school.

"So the point of this speech isn't just to blabber about our lives; it's really about an important lesson I've learned here at The Burg. Something I have taken away from high school is to embrace what is happening to you while you are in the moment. Embrace your bad grades and bad decisions and learn from them because clearly, we aren't all prefect. Embrace your friends and teachers, because the day will come when you will no longer see their familiar faces in the hallway," she said.

"So finally, while it will be easy to forget about test grades and projects we have completed in high school, one thing we should never forget are the experiences, choices and things we have done in high school, and to look forward to the experiences, choices and things we will do in our future. Whether it be the past, present, or future, never forget to embrace life," Sandau said, in conclusion.

Class valedictorian Chloe Pearson, with a 3.82 GPA, and is the daughter of Randy and Becky Pearson. Pearson also took listeners on a walk down memory lane before asking her fellow grads, "What will we do with our future?"

Pearson looked to Dr. Suess' book "Oh, the Places You'll Go!" for inspiration and advice. She cautioned her classmates to "step with care" as they make positive choices, "don't let anything hold you down for too long," and to "follow your heart and know that the sky is the limit when you give it all you've got."

Pearson also spoke to the importance of balance. "Be sure to find a balance and pursue your hobbies and dreams in between all the busyness. Another thing we must remember is to try new things. Let's not get stuck in the same routine for the rest of our lives. Step outside your box, see the world through a different perspective, do something you've always wanted to do. Make life fun and make happiness a priority," she said.

"But, no matter where we end up, or what it takes to get there, remember that we are capable of anything we put our minds to. Most importantly, above all, remember that this is where we came from, and where it all started," she concluded.

Pride in their hometown and a strong sense of place was a recurring theme throughout the ceremony. The Class of 2018 chose the words of Tim McGraw, "Chase your dreams, but know the road that leads you home again," as their class motto.

Graduates wearing the FFA medallion included Brandon Boudrieu, Thomas House and Deja Wil-

Graduates wearing gold honor cords, denoting a GPA of 3.25 or higher, and red and white Cardinal Honor Cords were: Chloe Pearson, Ariel Sandau, Robert Walsh, Kitty Lambert, Deja Williams, Christopher Philbrook, Tyler Wood and Tayler Jones.

Tyler Wood, Chloe Pearson, Robert Walsh and Deja Williams all wore white collars, denoting them as National Honor Society members.

Following the presentation of scholarships and special awards, school board members Christy House and Randy Pearson presented the new graduates with their diplomas. The grads exited the gymnasium to the strains of "Back Home," by Andy Grammer, before gathering on the high school lawn to receive congratulations from friends and family.

Carla Rowe, Cathy Shochet to Face Off for Columbia County Treasurer

DEPUTY TREASURER SHOCHET AND BUSINESS OWNER ROWE ARE BOTH DAYTON HIGH SCHOOL GRADUATES

Stories by Michele Smith | THE TIMES

CARLA ROWE

DAYTON - Dayton native Carla Rowe said she will bring her expertise in the field of accounting and bookkeeping practices to the position of Columbia County Treasurer if she is elected in November.

For the past 14 years, Rowe has owned her own bookkeeping business, CJ Bookkeeping, where she performs fullcharge bookkeeping as well as providing her Dayton and Waitsburg clients with specific accounting needs.

"I have always taken a proactive approach for my clients, and I will bring that commitment to the county," Rowe said.

If elected Rowe said she would like to see better utilization of the software program and other technology tools in the Treasurer's Office. She plans to generate a more readable spreadsheet than the one currently provided to the county administrators and department heads each month.

She would also like to establish better communication between the county administrators and department heads and the Treasurer's Office, she said.

Rowe said her career with numbers began as an FBLA officer at Dayton High School. After graduating from DHS in 1985, she earned an associate's degree from Walla Walla Community College. She also attended the Family & Community Leadership Program through WSU.

She then took several courses through the WWCC Bookkeeping Certification Program. She is also familiar with QuickBooks applications and practices, she

Rowe said she is already familiar with the state's Budgeting, Accounting and Reporting System, through her work at the Port of Columbia many years ago, she Rowe has taken continuing education courses in areas such as social media marketing, web design, records retention and destruction, payroll management and grant writing.

"I just feel I have some skills to bring to the table to make the financial reporting more efficient," Rowe said of her capabilities. Rowe has been active in 4-H for the past 20 years, and she is currently serving as treasurer of the 4-H Leaders' Council.

She is also on the Dayton Development Task Force, and she has been on the Columbia County Fair Board Committee for the last three years.

Rowe said if she is elected, she will continue to provide her private clients with QuickBooks consultations. "Several lean on me for payroll, and I see no conflict

Rowe lives in Dayton with her son Cheyenne Gritman, 17. She has two other children, Fred Gritman, 21, and Courtney McNeil, 28.

CATHY SHOCHET

DAYTON - Cathy Shochet began working in the Columbia County Treasurer's office in 2016. In her previous position, she was the Auditor for the Port of Columbia. Because the Port is a special taxing district for the county, she connected with the county treasurer on a weekly basis.

'The Treasurer is the de facto bank for the county, and each week I saw Audrey and realized that would be a place I would like to end up," said Shochet. "When the Deputy Treasurer position opened up, I interviewed, and here I am. I am very happy with the outcome."

Cathy Shochet

As Chief Deputy Treasurer, Shochet said she has developed strong working relationships with county officials and department heads, helping them categorize funds in order to comply with state reporting standards, and keeping track of their deposits.

In addition, Shochet imports the cleared check data from two different bank accounts each morning and reconciles them to the appropriate fund.

The Treasurer's office handles many different taxing districts in the county, including the school district, the hospital district, the library district, and many more. "It's a city within a city," she said.

"Property taxes are the meat and potatoes. Nobody likes them, but they are essential for funding essential services in the county. I feel a strong responsibility there," she said.

Shochet said she is very comfortable with financial matters and spreadsheets, as well as the new software in the department. She said she is also comfortable with the public.

If elected, Shochet said she would like to look at additional ways to streamline processes, with more utilization of the accounting and tax software.

Shochet refers to herself as a "Green Giant kid." Her father, Jack Loftus, was a warehouse manager for Green Giant.

After graduating from Dayton High School in 1978, Shochet attended Evergreen State University, earning a BA in English. She then attended Fort Steilacoom College, where she obtained additional skills in bookkeeping and office adminis-

Shochet's early working career took place in several mom and pop-style industries, as a senior staffing specialist, in accounts payable and in accounting practices, and procedures.

Shochet and her husband, Steve, moved back to Dayton from the west side of the state in 2014 to enjoy the Dayton's small-town atmosphere and its solid sense of community. She said she looks forward to continued work with her colleagues at the county.

Each puzzle consists of a square grid with numbers appearing in all squares. The object is to shade squares so:

3 1 2 5 4 1 3 4 3 4 3 1 5 4 4 2 3 3 2(1)(5)(4) 2 1 5 4 4

. No number appears in a row or column more than once.

· Shaded (black) squares do not touch each other vertically or horizontally. When completed, all un-shaded (white) squares create a single continuous area.

TEENY MCMUNN: MY RECIPE BOX

Chicken Club Pasta Salad

Those who love rhubarb may have hoped for another recipe, while those who don't care for it, are glad not to see another one!

I didn't get a chance to try this one, but it's on my list. Salads are so versatile in that you can choose what goes into them or out of them. I thought this would make a great lunch and/or dinner for the warm weather. I will serve it with a chopped lettuce bed and fresh bread for a dinner option.

INGREDIENTS:

8 oz corkscrew shaped paste 34 c. Italian style salad dressing 1/4 c. mayonnaise

1 c. chopped cooked chicken 12 slices crispy bacon, crumbled

1 c. cubed Muenster cheese

1 c. chopped celery

1 c. chopped green bell pepper

8 oz cherry tomatoes, halved

1 avocado, peeled, pitted & chopped

DIRECTIONS:

Bring a large pot of lightly salted water to a boil. Cook pasta in the boiling water, stirring occasionally until cooked through, but firm to the bite, 10-12 minutes. Drain and rinse under cold water.

Whisk Italian style dressing and mayonnaise together in a large bowl. Stir pasta, chicken, bacon, Muenster cheese, celery, green bell pepper, cherry tomatoes, and avocado into dressing until evenly coated.

MY NOTES:

Most of us know that it is important that, for salad making, one needs to set the pasta in cold water to cool down and rinse well, or it will continue to cook, and you may have mushy pasta.

For me, I will substitute the green bell pepper for the sweet red peppers. I will change the cheese also, and leave some bacon to sprinkle on top. I will add peas and maybe chopped carrots. The possibilities are endless, but I thought it sounded like a good combination. We often will buy a cooked rotisserie chicken.

ENJOY!
