Erika Greenup has created unique and interactive set designs for this year's Fall Liberty Theater Production of Disney's "The Little Mermaid." Through costuming and puppetry, the stage fills with under-the-sea life.

Innovative Mermaid at Liberty Theater

THE TIMES

DAYTON—This year's fall musical at the Liberty Theater is Disney's "The Little Mermaid," a story familiar to many of us from two Disney movies and the older, original fairy tale.

It's the story of a young woman growing up, following her dream, and finding herself. It's also the story of a loving parent learning to understand who their child has become and letting them go into the world. And finally, it's the story of two families with different cultures learning to accept each other as their children get married.

This live performance is a spectacle of entertainment, with poignant and funny musical numbers, fantastical settings, and colorful imagery. First-time Liberty Theater directors Devin Greenup and Natalie Knudson and set and costume designer Erika Greenup bring a fresh approach and unique ideas to Liberty's stage. Theatergoers will be amazed at the artistry of this year's production.

There will be 13 performances from Thursday, November 9 to December 2. Opening night is Family Night, with a special low price. More information is available on the theater's website, libertytheater.org/stage-productions.

Waitsburg Lions Club (WLC)

By Mike Ferrians | THE TIMES

If the vision that launched Lions Club International (LCI) in 1917 still applies to local Lions Clubs across America, it surely applies to the Waitsburg Lions Club. Formed in 1940 as a chapter of LCI, Waitsburg's Lions have been a stable element of social life and community service for 83 years, something not to be taken for granted.

The club and others, including the Freemasons, Eastern Star, Philanthropic Educational Organization (P.E.O.), and Kiwanis, support community life and friendship, provide service and aid where needed, encourage civic responsibility, and strengthen leadership. However, social and cultural change has altered the landscape of community groups.

The U.S. Surgeon General's 2023 report, "Our Epidemic of Isolation and Loneliness," highlights how community engagement and social cohesion have declined or deteriorated over the years, resulting in decreased social group participation. The report stresses the importance of social connection for maintaining healthy communities and fostering individual well-being.

The Lions Club of Waitsburg is no exception to the trends. Jim Romine, Waitsburg city councilman, is the current president of Waitsburg Lions. He has been a club member for many years in different places he's lived. Like others familiar with club life, Romine has seen a decline in membership.

Times Archive
 Lions' Club President Jim Romine

"Eight or ten years ago, Waitsburg had hundreds of registered members," he said. "Now we have about 45, with anywhere from 15 to 25 showing up at a meeting. People are busy with their own lives. Social media has been a factor. And older members who have been doing things in the club for years and years are getting tired."

A once-familiar Lion's Club project was providing holiday smoked turkeys to the community. The club would smoke specially brined birds to offer for purchase or give as part of holiday gift baskets to families in need.

"We stopped about five years ago," Romine says, "because the guys who'd been working it for years got worn out. It's labor-intensive, a 24-hour operation."

Lions Club International (LCI) began in 1917, under the shadow of World War I, the brain-child of an insurance salesman named Melvin Jones. A sense of social service and community support was developing in Industrial Chicago, which saw widespread poverty and chronic need among laborer families.

Today, according to its website, LCI has 49,000 clubs in the U.S. and worldwide, involving 1.4 million members adopting a mission of service and dedication to kindness and peacemaking.

Interestingly, some of the first Lions Clubs included women. However, after adopting a national constitution and by-laws, the organization limited membership to men. It wasn't until 1987 that LCI officially opened its membership to women.

Waitsburg Lions has remained a men's club, but not by design.

"We'd like to have women in the group," says Romine. "Most other Lions clubs have men and women members. We haven't had women show interest, but we'd like to get them involved."

In the fall of each year, as club

To the Editor:

Walla Walla can choose a talented leader, facilitator, and problem-solver: Amy Schwab for Port Commission.

When we worked together, Amy took care to understand the people and the issues in each situation. She used that understanding to identify the extraordinary opportunities buried in each project. Amy is offering Walla Walla this rare talent: leadership based on knowledge, relationships, and strategic vision.

Amy developed understanding and built relationships through thoughtful design of group interactions. Time and time again, I have seen Amy deliberately construct workshops, meetings, and conversations so that project planning and implementation issues could be resolved, and goals could be met. Amy created dialogues that engaged all participants and established mutual understanding. Walla Walla can count on Amy to structure engagements with colleagues and community to be fair, open, respectful, and build support for difficult decisions.

Amy applied these talents--visionary leadership and facilitation of positive group engagement--to solve problems in a professional context. Now, she is offering to solve problems for Walla Walla.

Please consider voting for Amy Schwab for Port. To learn more or help, visit <http://www.amyforport.com/>.

Thank you!

OBITUARY

Florence Stella Delp

March 4, 1936 —
October 24, 2023

Florence Stella Delp passed away Tuesday, October 24, 2023. She was born on March 4, 1936, to Jacob Richard and Susan Mace Scarbrough.

Because her parents spent many summers working for the U.S. Forest Service, Florence and her sisters, Joan and Carolyn, spent many memorable years with their grandparents, Joe and Stella Mace. Florence loved sharing the many adventures of her sisters and cousins growing up on Grouse Flats. She also enjoyed remembering the many guard stations at which she stayed with her parents, including the Tucannon Guard Station.

Her parents divorced, and when her mother married Dayton resident Ralph Startin, Florence and her sisters relocated to Ralph's place on the South Patit. With the move to Dayton, she became a member of the Dayton High School Class of 1953.

On March 14, 1958, Florence married classmate John David Delp, and they moved to their home on Patit Avenue, where they would live throughout their 57-year marriage and where they raised their five children. For many years, Florence was a stay-at-home mom, but once her youngest child started school, Florence started working outside the home. For twenty years, Florence worked for Columbia Cut Stock.

Through the years, Florence served as a Cub Scout leader, classroom volunteer, Sunday School teacher, and Vacation Bible School teacher. She also enjoyed attending her children's, grandchildren's, and great-grandchildren's activities, plus traveling with David in their motor home after they retired. Together, they visited every state in the United States except Florida and Hawaii.

Florence is survived by her children: Tim (Lana) Delp, Connie (Tom) Hutchens, Roseann (Bill) Groom, John (Christine) Delp, and Sara (Greg) Fletcher; and her sisters Joan McGee and Carolyn Hoffman. Her grandchildren, great-grandchildren, great-great-grandchildren, cousins, nieces, and nephews also survive her. She was preceded in death by her husband, her parents, her grandparents, her brothers-in-law—Darrold McGee and Wayne Hoffman, and her grandson, Andrew Groom.

The family is very grateful for the care Florence received as a resident of Booker Rest Home, River's Walk Assisted Living, and from Walla Walla Hospice.

A graveside service will be held at the Dayton City Cemetery on November 11, 2023, at 11 AM. Following the service, family and friends are invited to gather at the Dayton Elementary School Multipurpose Room for lunch. Donations may be made to the Dayton High School Alumni Association, the Christian Aid Center, or Walla Walla Hospice.

meetings start up again, local members are encouraged to invite friends or neighbors to join the club – an invitation Romine says he has never seen declined.

Waitsburg Lions are known for their annual food-focused fundraising events, such as the rib feed, salmon feed, and bison burgers served at the Pioneer Fall Festival. These are critical funding sources for the many projects Lions support throughout the year, but perhaps just as importantly, they are community gathering traditions. This year, after several years of pandemic pause, the club served grilled salmon to over 800 guests.

Historically, Lions Clubs focused on health concerns such as vision, diabetes, and global hunger. According to Romine, Waitsburg Lions participate in the familiar vision program by hosting eye exams for those needing them, and the club collects used eyeglasses that can be sent to developing countries through LCI.

Helen Keller challenged the organization to become "Knights of the Blind" in her famous 1925 speech to members.

Youth involvement and development are also an important part of the Lions Club's vision of support. Waitsburg Lions grants scholarships to high school seniors and supports school district programs like the Booster Club, the Cardinal's Nest, and school music programs. The group is also supporting the effort of Waitsburg Parks and Recreation District to build a new swimming pool in town.

"Lions help with a lot of things," says Romine. "Building projects, grants to help families with special needs, whatever we can help with, we do. We support Little League and help the city with improvements to the baseball diamonds at the athletic field."

It's clear that, without the presence of the Lions Club, Waitsburg would be a much poorer place. Its value is beyond quantifying, which makes membership decline a concern.

"If you're ever at a ball game or the rib feed or other event and wonder how it gets done, approach a Lions' member and ask about the club," Romine says. And don't assume that it's a men's thing.

Membership dues are $150 annually and include dinners at the bi-monthly meetings. The club meets at the Lions Club Memorial Building at Waitsburg fairgrounds on the second and fourth Tuesdays of each month, excluding the summer months. For more information, contact Romine at 509-520-8098.

Palouse Outdoors: Boot Leather Wins Wild Birds

By Brad Trumbo | THE TIMES

It's an utter fact, proven time and again, particularly in a state like Washington: wild birds in the vest are won with "boot leather," so to speak. Even in a spectacular wild bird year, by December, pheasants are scarce in the public covers of the Palouse. Private lands with the right mix of food and cover harbor dozens of pheasants as they congregate during cold weather. But rest assured, the remainder of the roosters are seasoned escape artists, skittish as hell and alive, thanks to their uncanny sense of property boundaries and fleet feet.

In southeast Washington, hunters push every stitch of creek bottom on the map day after day. The high ground is often overgrazed or covered in yellow starthistle or common rye, sufficient to make the habitat unsuitable. Considering the fraction of suitable habitat available to the overall hunting populace, scoring on wild birds after the new year is a feat.

Washington has 7.6 million citizens, ranks 13th in the U.S. for population, and is comprised of approximately 42.7 million acres. Comparatively, Montana has a little over 1 million people, ranks 45th in population, and is comprised of approximately 93.3 million acres. Both states are comprised of about 29 percent federal land. That equates to about 12.3 million acres of federal land, or 1.6 acres per person in Washington, compared to 27 million federal acres, or 25 acres per person in Montana.

While that coarse bit of number-crunching is no accurate representation of the hunting populace or pressure in Washington State, it does provide perspective on acreage being at a premium with stiff competition for public covers.

Finding birds in the late season requires creativity and a willingness to explore, hike further, and take gambles on new covers. By January, I typically make a hard switch from chasing pheasant to covey birds like quail and Huns, and this means I scour On-X Maps, drive further from home, and hike a lot more new territory. And, every year, I am surprised at what I find.

Parcel size means little to me past Christmas. Habitat quality, distance from the road to the quality habitat, and distance from the nearest popular hunting areas are the qualities to consider. The smallest parcels can hold a surprising number of birds. They can just as likely be vacant. It's a craps shoot, and striking it rich requires trial and error.

One January morning, Yuba and I struck out across a parcel of Department of Natural Resources (DNR) land we had yet to lay eyes on. Aerial imagery suggested enough native grasses to tempt a Hun covey along the eastern boundary with a wheat field. We worked the boundary that turned out to be covered in cow vetch and starthistle, then dropped into a shallow draw and worked toward cattle grazing in a bunchgrass stand.

Where cattle, bunchgrass, and Llewellyn setter met, Yuba came to a jerking halt. Anticipation mounted as Yuba relaxed, signaling that the birds were moving. As she pursued the bird over 200 yards, it became clear that this was no Hun covey. Her final point came confidently, and I circled widely to pin the bird between us. Yuba broke point and locked up again 10 yards thence. This repeated three times before I caught a glimpse of a rooster low crawling through the sparse bunches. Yuba spotted him, too. I couldn't help but laugh as the grass faded into starthistle, exposing the rooster and pressuring him to take wing.

Finding good habitat on grazed public lands can be tough; however, don't judge a book by its cover. Many times, I have parked at the foot of a steep slope, gnawed to the soil, and thought, no way in hell am I plodding up and over that greasy mud mound. There's not a stitch of cover to be found. But I never let myself get away with a lazy mindset. You never know what hidden gem may lie on the other side of the hill.

Finn ran a parcel like this New Year's Day, 2021. We hoofed it up and over, crossed a few fences, and found a single 20-acre strip of beautiful Hun cover between two wheat fields. This day, the cover was empty, but the recent scat of a covey that could have been present was reassurance that we were in the right place. While we didn't get on the birds, I never would have found that little slice of habitat had I not pushed through the marginal cover surrounding it. Two whitetail sheds provided consolation.

Finding those sheds suggested two things. First, I was hunting in the right place. Walking up on a fully exposed, intact shed, bleached white and cracked from the sun, means no one else is hunting that ground. It's rare to have a tract all to myself, even if it is poor habitat.

Second, I was hunting in the wrong place. With so many hunters and so little public land, sharing covers is expected. When there's no evidence of other hunters, one may surmise that no one else hunts it because they know better. There is always another hunter out there willing to hike a couple of miles to find good covers. But, when the stars align, you stumble upon a cover so good you don't even expose it to your mother as she gabs over the phone from her

Brad Trumbo

Finn lay exhausted with the only late-season wild rooster we had ever bested in this short-grass cover that nearly anyone would pass by.

Del Ray Beach retirement condo.

On-X Maps is an amazing tool for mapping out covers across the season, but it takes groundwork to validate the imagery. Each parcel is like a new mine claim. Will you strike it rich or bust? The unknown is part of the fun, and when gambling, one thing is certain: if you don't play, you can't win. Wearing out boot leather is the only way to expand your library of public covers and score wild birds.

Wine of the Week

King Estate 2022 Pinot Gris

By Paul Gregutt | THE TIMES

King Estate was founded specifically to grow and produce Pinot Gris. Now entirely biodynamic, the winery has grown to become one of Oregon's most diverse and influential. Pinot Gris remains a strong suit, with up to seven different versions in a single vintage – probably as much as the rest of Oregon combined. It's almost iconic, with full, fleshy pear fruit, buoyant acids, and a mouth-pleasing texture. Green apple, cucumber, and grapefruit highlights follow. This is the most widely available bottling, and three-fifths is from estate-grown fruit. A touch of white pepper enlivens the finish. It's not too soon to call this the ideal wine for your Thanksgiving table, at least as far as a white wine (and there should always be one) is concerned. 115000 cases; 12.9%; $19 (Willamette Valley) 92/100.

Harder to find but worth the extra buck or two is King Estate's 2022 Artisan Series Pinot Gris, an all-estate bottling fermented entirely in stainless steel. Ripe and focused, it features flavors of lemon meringue, tangerine ice, quince and papaya. 1000 cases; 13.8%; $20 (Willamette Valley) 93/100.

HS VOLLEYBALL SEASON ENDS

By Karen Huwe | THE TIMES

WAITSBURG — Seniors Alyssa Segraves, Kylee Henry, Makenna Barron and Peyton Struckmeier were recognized before playing their last game of the season at home against St. John-Endicott (SJE) on Thursday, October 26.

In the first set of the match, SJE started the game serving an ace. Waitsburg battled back and tied the game at 5-5 on a kill by Struckmeier. Errors receiving serves and digs put the Cardinals behind 5-19. A couple of stuff blocks by Struckmeier rallied the team to 9-21 before losing the set 10-25.

Set two saw some long rallies to the delight of the crowd. A kill by Barron and the serves of Alyssa Hollingsworth put the team up 5-2. The score was within two points for most of the set. The Cardinals were ahead 24-22 after a Henry ace and an unforced error by SJE. But the team could not get that last point and SJE won 26-24.

In the final set, Waitsburg was down 0-4 before scoring their first point. They made a late run but fell short 15-25.

Struckmeier was strong at the next with three stuff blocks. Barron had three kills and two ace serves. Hollingsworth added two aces. Henry, Segraves, Madison Kaehler, Emma Hays, Kayla Mikesell and MaKenzie Castillo ended their season with a 2-14 record.

Coach Barron stated that the girls played their best game of the season. "I am so proud of the team's growth this season."

Waitsburg High School volleyball team lost at Sunnyside Christian on October 24, 19-25, 17-25, 11-25.

WAITSBURG MIDDLE SCHOOL FINISHES FOOTBALL SEASON

By Karen Huwe | THE TIMES

WAITSBURG — The middle school football team lost their last game of the season at Tekoa-Rosalia on October 19, 33-41.

The Cardinals ended their season with a 4-2 record.

Coach Calzadillas enjoyed coaching these young men, saying, "They grew leaps and bounds during the season. I could tell they really loved to compete in the way they reacted to the games we lost but also in the games we won. I am excited to see what the future holds for Waitsburg football because of these guys. Go Cards."

Quarterback Liam Kiefel passed for 165 yards at Tekoa, with two touchdowns and one interception.

Sawyer Harshman and Uriah York each scored two touchdowns. Harshman rushed for 95 yards, and York had a 60-yard return touchdown. Jake Lynch had three catches for 60 yards, and Kellen Coulston rushed for 105 yards and one touchdown to lead the offense.

On defense, Lynch led the team with ten tackles, and Harshman had nine. Coulston tackled six, Alex Zuniga, Uriah York, and Gavin Harrison had four tackles. Teammates Juca Beckman, Camdyn Vories, Carter Barron, and Gavin Mikesell also contributed tackles.

I apologize...

By Vicki Sternfeld-Rossi | THE TIMES

To start with, I apologize to all the parents whose kids I have spiked and promoted their sugar high this Halloween. As usual, I over-bought the amount of candy needed. I was very generous, handing out as much as possible, significantly increasing the amount of sugar eaten this Halloween.

I also apologize for any cavities, dental bills, and the screaming and crying (I remember it all too well) accompanying dentist visits resulting from the over-indulgence of Halloween candy. I hope no one succumbed to my mother's weakness and ate a taffy that pulled out her front tooth.

And I apologize to the kids. Before handing out the candy, I removed the M&M Peanuts, Swedish Fish, and Dots. Sorry, those are my favorites, and I don't share. However, I am sure I will also pay the price when I hop on the scale. Unfortunately, there is no "free ride" when it comes to candy.

I apologize if trick-or-treaters noticed the peculiar sour aroma coming from our kitchen. Daniel decided to use our thirty-plus pounds of green tomatoes to make chutney. That requires gallons of cider vinegar, which, when cooked, is not a pleasant smell. Then, a batch of onions, brown sugar, and raisins are added. Phooey! My eyes burned for hours. There is not enough Febreze in the world to disguise the smell. I hoped that candles and the brief times we could open the door when temperatures were above freezing helped dissipate the odor.

I apologize to Mugsy. I know he doesn't understand my apology, although heartfelt. I finally gave in and took him to Wags and Whiskers for a bath, his worst fear. He hates the water. In the spring and summer, I have the luxury of being neglectful, and I could ignore the doggy smell because we spend a lot of time outside. It's winter, and there is no escape from Mugsy's need for a bath. Even the cider vinegar odors from Daniel's chutney could not cover up his smell.

I once tried to bathe Mugsy at home. He was in, and I was outside the tub, yet somehow, I wound up wetter than him. He squirmed and tried to scrape and claw his way out. I slid around, trying to put him back in the tub, and got drenched. I vowed never again.

The results of bath day in Walla Walla and my running errands while he sulked in the car was that he was clean, and I was dry. Stressed from the bath and sulking in the car as I ran errands, he slept the rest of the day, and though apologetic, I was happy to have a clean-smelling dog.

Daniel was busy Friday carving pumpkins for our front-of-the-house decor. They are now on a small table in our front yard. I apologize if your children are a little scared or your dog tries to eat them. They are made with pumpkin and potatoes, with some tomatoes thrown in, so they could be tempting.

I did catch Mugsy sniffing the bucket with the carving remains. He's also been scouring the yard for tomatoes that have not been turned into chutney, pumpkin faces, or compost. I almost feel like I need to apologize to Mugsy for now having a tomato-free yard. He's still digging around, ever hopeful for one last feast. Too bad, so sad, no apology.

In spite of the defection of the opposing team's coach to their team, the WP Alumni Team was no match for the Lady Cards at Thursday night's Homecoming game. Youth won out over experience with the younger ladies winning the game in a three-set match. Spirits were high as fans – some unsure of which team to root for – filled the bleachers. The flag was lowered, and Mikala Deruwe transfixied the crowd by singing a stirring rendition of the National Anthem. Amidst cheers and applause, senior Enedina Fuentes was honored as the lone 2013 graduating Volleyball team member. Both teams were introduced with Fuentes presenting each Alumni player with a rose. Playing for the Alumni team was: Ronnie Hulce (2012), Sarah Pearson (2002), Krystal Harris (2013), Victoria Bly (2012), Rhannon Chapman (2013), Jessica Guay (2012), Becky Harshman (1987), Marne Henderson (1987), Karen Huwe (1979), Liz Allerman (1985), and Brittany Stamper (2006). The alums were coached by Dinah Lindsey (who coached WHS volleyball from 1983-84 to 1992-93) with Wendy Richards (1986) as Assistant Coach.

Dogs bark and it sounds like a host of ghosts wooing from a haunted cave. That's okay though, because it's supposed to sound that way. "It" is an authentic replica of an 1898 or 1899 Milwaukee steam powered carriage, hand crafted over the past couple of years by Joe McCown, Sr., a retired Waitsburg area farmer, who has occupied some of his retirement years with an interest in metalwork. McCown and his nephew Dave McConnell fired it up for the first time last Thursday afternoon in McCown's West Eighth Street driveway. Some of McCown's craftsmanship in metal can be seen in the new sections of wrought-iron fence around Waitsburg's Bruce Museum. The Milwaukee, McCown said is a carriage built by one of the about 200 "horseless carriage" companies that were giving the new fad a try at the turn of the century.

Red Wine Beef Stew

An abrupt change in the season arrived this past week and with it our first hard frost. Since then, all I have wanted to do is wear sweaters, listen to true-crime podcasts, and gently simmer things on the stove. Ah, fall. Braised in a rich wine broth spiced with cloves and fresh herbs, this tender beef stew is a perfect warm-up on a cold autumn night. Easy to prepare, this recipe is delightful both for a cozy family supper or an elegant dinner party to impress.

Ingredients:

- 4 pounds lean, boneless chuck steak
- ¼ cup olive oil
- Salt and freshly ground black pepper
- 1 large yellow onion, coarsely chopped
- 1 to 2 cloves garlic, chopped
- 6 tablespoons flour
- 3 cups dry red wine
- 1 cup beef stock
- 2 cups water
- 4 whole cloves
- 1 bay leaf
- 6 sprigs parsley
- 3 sprigs fresh thyme
- 1 sprig fresh rosemary
- 6 carrots, trimmed
- Fresh parsley, minced, for garnish

Directions:

Trim the meat of excess fat and cut into 2-inch cubes. Pat meat dry and then generously season with salt and black pepper.

In a large heavy pot or Dutch-oven, heat the oil over medium heat. Working in batches, add the meat in single layers to the oil, brown and sear on all sides, about 7 to 10 minutes per batch. When browned, remove the meat, and set aside.

Add the onions and garlic to the pot, cooking and stirring occasionally until soft, about 8 minutes. Add more oil if needed. Return the meat to the pot with all the juices. Sprinkle the flour over the top then stir to evenly coat all the meat with flour. Continue to cook for a few minutes to cook off the raw flour taste.

Pour in the wine and beef stock, scrapping up any browned bits from the bottom of the pot. Bring the mixture to a boil allowing the liquid to thicken slightly. Stir in the water and reduce the temperature to a simmer. Use a piece of kitchen twine to tie the parsley, thyme, and rosemary sprigs into a bunch. Add the cloves, bay leaf, and herb bouquet, then cover with a tight-fitting lid. Simmer for 1 hour and 15 minutes, adjusting temperature if needed to maintain a gentle, steady simmer.

Meanwhile, cut the carrots into 1-inch segments, splitting in half lengthwise if they are very thick. Add them to the beef, cover pot, and continue cooking for 30 minutes. Then taste the stew for seasoning, adding more salt or pepper to taste. Allow the stew to continue to simmer gently with the lid off until the beef is very fork-tender and the carrots are cooked through, about another 15 to 30 minutes. Remove the herb stems, allow to rest for a few minutes then garnish the top with parsley.

Notes:

There are several cuts of beef that work beautifully in stew recipes in place of chuck roast, such as sirloin tip roast, top round, or bottom round. While you can sometimes find pre-cubed packages of "stew meat" at the grocery store, I much prefer to purchase a whole cut of beef and cube it myself.

In recipes like this, where the wine is integral to the flavor, I always recommend using a bottle that is good enough to drink. Don't opt for the cheapest bottom shelf wine, but you need not purchase the most expensive either. A moderate priced bottle of dry Pinot Noir, Syrah, or Beaujolais would all be lovely. For example, I used a $16 bottle of Oregon Pinot Noir that was on sale. Buy two bottles, one for the recipe and one to serve with dinner.

This comforting stew is lovely served with buttered egg noodles, or mashed potatoes. To balance the richness, I also served a crisp radicchio and apple salad dressed with a Dijon vinaigrette on the side.

Enjoy.
